U. S. SUBMARINE SINKS AT SEA

Emperiled Crew Of S-5 Rescued After 42 Hours Of Agony

Penned for nearly two days at the bottom of the sea in the steel hull of a helpless submarine, the thirty officers and enlisted men of the S-5 were rescued early Friday morning.

They had been saved from horrible deaths by suffocation 180 feet below the surface of the ocean, and owed their lives to a hitherto little tested war invention—the telephone buoy—released when the submarine became disabled and by means of which as it floated on the surface and sounded an alarm, aid was finally summoned when hope had nearly been despaired.

The submarine met with the accident Wednesday morning, while cruising from New Haven to Baltimore, where it was to be stationed on special recruiting service. The S-5 is one of the six newest and best submarines built for the American Navy. It is 240 feet long, 23 feet wide and has a cruising radius of 5,000 miles with a maximum speed of 15 knots. It is equipped with two quick-firing guns, six torpedo tubes and two Diesel engines.

As the dawn was breaking over the sea fifty-five miles east of Cape Henlopen, Lieutenant-Commander Charles M. Cooke, Jr., was dragged through a hole that had been cut in the stern of the disabled United States submarine. Too weak from the suffocation that had threatened all within the "sub," Commander Cooke was taken in a small boat to the S. S. Alanthus, one of the rescue ships that had been summoned by wireless, and to which the rest of the crew had been taken. The ship then proceeded to the Philadelphia Navy Yard.

Mrs. Julia A. Humphreys Dead

Mrs. Julia A. Humphreys, widow of the late John A. Humphreys, died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. John W. Romigh, in Clarksburg, West Virginia, last Thursday night.

Mrs. Humphreys was 65 years old. She had been in ill health for some time and left Princess Anne over a year ago to reside with her only daughter—Mrs. John W. Romigh—who survives, with three sisters, (Mrs. A. M. Humphreys, of Princess Anne; Mrs. Joseph E. Gibbons, of Stroudsburg, Pa.; Mrs. P. L. Baker, of Greenville, S. C.) and two brothers (Messrs. R. S. McIntyre and J. R. McIntyre, of Mt. Vernon, Md).

Her remains were brought to Princess Anne and funeral services were held in St. Andrew's Protestant Episcopal Church last Sunday afternoon at 4.30 o'clock, conducted by the Rev. O. H. Murphy, D. D., rector in charge. The interment was in the church cemetery beside her husband, who died in 1893.

The pallbearers were: Judge Robert F. Duer, Colonel Henry J. Waters, Messrs. H. Fillmore Lankford, W. C. Brown, John E. Holland and Wilmer O. Lankford.

Among those who attended the funeral from out-of-town were: Mr. and Mrs. John W. Romigh, their son, J. W. Jr., and daughter, Julia; Miss Jeannette Miller, of Clarksburg, W. Va.; Mr. Samuel S. Costen, of Hampton, Va.; Mr. and Mrs. Joseph N. Gibbons, of Stroudsburg, Pa.; Mr. Saml. M. Crockett, of Pocomoke City; Mr. and Mrs. Thomas White, Jr., Mrs. W. B. Costen, of Salisbury; Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Brown, of Philadelphia; Mr. Charles Lloyd, of Pittsburgh, Pa.; Mrs. L. H. Curtis, Miss E. Gertrude Curtis, Mrs. Lena B. Cullen, of Crisfield; Mrs. Thos. H. Long, of Hopewell; Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Barbon, Mrs. D. Moody Horner, Messrs. Risden McIntyre, George E. Lloyd, James McIntyre, of Mt. Vernon.

To Erect Shaft To Bishop Adams

Plans are under way for the erection of a monument at the grave of the late Bishop William F. Adams. A committee consisting of Judge William H. Adams, of Easton; Dudley G. Roe, of Sudlersville, and Samuel E. Shannahan, of Easton, has been appointed to raise the necessary funds for a suitable memorial. The committee has begun work and is asking the various parishes of the diocese for $1,000 to be used for this purpose.

For some time past a general discussion has been heard all through the diocese on the best way to perpetuate the memory of the deceased bishop. Several suggestions were heard, but the majority of the parishioners thought it best to erect a suitable monument at the grave in Spring Hill Cemetery, Easton.

France Sends Loan Payment

A shipment of $5,000,000 in gold left France last Saturday for the United States as part payment on France's share of the Anglo-French loan, maturing October 15th, was announced at New York by the French finance mission.

From other authoritative American sources it was learned that this is probably the first of a series of gold consignments to this country, which may attain large proportions.

1,449,610 LIVE IN MARYLAND

An Increase Of 154,264 Or 11.9 Per Cent. Since 1910

For the first time in the history of Maryland, Baltimore has more people than the rest of the State. Figures just issued by the Census Bureau at Washington show that Maryland has 1,449,610, an increase of 154,264 over the figures of 1910, which makes its gain 11.9 per cent.

Baltimore's population announced on May 20th is 733,826. This, subtracted from the total of the State leaves 715,784, which gives the city a majority of 18,042.

Maryland's increase in this year's census is in excess of its gains between the 1900 census and that of 1910, which was 9 per cent. It is, in fact, the largest increase of any decade in its history. It is the only one of the ten States for which the 1920 population figures have been issued which shows a larger rate of growth than during the decade ended with 1910.

Only 7 of the 23 counties of Maryland show an increase of population over the figures of 1910. They are Anne Arundel, Charles, Harford, Prince George's, Montgomery, Wicomico and Worcester.

Wicomico and Worcester are the only counties of the nine comprising the Eastern Shore section of the State that show a gain and the percentage of increase for those two counties is only 4.8 and 2.1, respectively.

Washington county in the western section shows the largest gain of any county in the State, the percentage of increase for the decade being 20.3.

Baltimore county shows the largest percentage of decrease in population of any county in Maryland, but that is easily understood in view of the fact that many thousands of the inhabitants of the county were included within the limits of the city of Baltimore when the annexation law became effective.

Sterling-Parsons Wedding

A pretty wedding was solemnized at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Franklin T. Sterling, in Lawsonia, at 8 o'clock last Wednesday night, when Miss Louette Sterling, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George L. Sterling, became the bride of Mr. Lawrence D. Parsons, of Pittsville, Md. The ring ceremony was used, Dr. W. F. Corkran officiating.

The bride was tastefully gowned in white georgette and satin. She was attended by Miss Irma Lawson, who acted as maid of honor. The bridesmaids were Misses Pauline and Eva Sterling, sisters of the bride, while the flower girls were little Misses Joyce Sterling, Gertrude Lawson, Lucille Bowdoin and Mary A. Maddrix.

The groom was dressed in dark blue broadcloth and was attended by Mr. Alonzo Nelson as best man. The groomsmen were Mr. John Moore, of New York, and Mr. Luther Johnson. After the ceremony a reception was held.

Dog Owners Must Pay Tax

The County Commissioners for Somerset county will show no mercy to owners of dogs who have not obtained licenses. They have appointed collectors as follows: Mr. Harold J. Maddox for Brinkley's district; Mr. Columbus Adams for Dublin district, and Mr. Roland Revelle for East and West Princess Anne districts. These gentlemen have been busy during the past week supplying tags to the owners, and all owners of dogs will now be compelled to pay their tax or warrants will be issued and the owner will be compelled to pay a fine of $5 and costs for not obtaining tags.

Collectors will be appointed for other districts in the county from time to time until all owners of dogs in the county have complied with the law.

Many Hurt At Amusement Park

The razzle-dazzle at the Oyster Shell Point summer resort, near Cambridge, Md., broke last Tuesday afternoon when about 75 people, mostly children, were on it. The entire load was thrown violently to the ground and some were seriously hurt. A large picnic from the Methodist Episcopal Church, of Hebron, was being held at the resort.

Those hurt whose names are known were: Miss Florence Davis, 15 years old, of Hebron, both ankles injured; Miss Fannie Whyland, 9 years old, taken to the Cambridge Hospital, in a serious condition.

August Weather

The weather report for the month of August as compiled by James R. Stewart, co-operative observer, of Princess Anne, follows:

Maximum temperature, 88 degrees on the 17th; minimum temperature, 55 degrees on the 3rd; total precipitation 7.30 inches. Clear days, 2; cloudy, 15; partly cloudy, 14. Thunder storms on the 1st, 6th, 9th, 13th, 15th and 19th. Sun dog on the 16th. The prevailing wind was southwest.

To Holders of Liberty Bonds

Holders of Liberty Bonds from which all the coupons have been clipped are requested to take the securities immediately to their banks in Princess Anne, which will transmit them to the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond where they will be exchanged for bonds having coupons covering all interest payments for the rest of the life of the bonds. Word to this effect has been sent out from Washington. Moreover, whenever Liberty Bonds paying 4 per cent. interest are sent in new bonds paying 4¼ per cent. interest will be issued.

In this federal reserve district many Liberty Bonds were bought which, when issued, carried only six interest coupons. These are known as "temporary" bonds. Their coupons have fallen due. The government now wishes to issue "permanent" bonds in their place.

The additional one-fourth of one per cent. interest offered on the unconverted 4 per cent. bonds is now being lost by the bond-holders. The higher rate of interest will be paid, from the next interest date, however, to all owners of 4 cent. Liberty Bonds in this district, the Treasury Department has announced, who get the securities to the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond for conversion into 4¼ per cent. bonds.

To Consecrate Bishop Davenport

Arrangements are being perfected for the consecration of Rev. George William Davenport, of New York, who was recently elected bishop of the Diocese of Easton, Protestant Episcopal Church, to take the place of the late Bishop W. F. Adams.

The consecration service will be held in Trinity Cathedral, Easton, Wednesday, September 15th, and will be in charge of Rt. Rev. Daniel S. Tuttle, Bishop of Missouri, who is the presiding bishop of the Protestant Episcopal Church in America. He will be assisted in the consecration service by a number of other bishops, among whom will be Bishop Murray, of Baltimore. In addition to the bishops, there will be present the rectors of the different Protestant Episcopal churches of the Diocese of Easton, also the members of the standing committee of the diocese, and representative churchmen from the different churches in the diocese. The services will be open to the public and a large crowd is expected to be present from all parts of the Eastern Shore of Maryland and Delaware.

The Maryland Agricultural Society has selected Salisbury as the place for holding its annual meeting on November 9th, 10th and 11th.

G. O. P. AGREE ON PARTY POLICIES

State Leaders And Candidates Make Legislative Program

The leaders of the Republican party favor ratification of the Federal Suffrage Amendment at the extra session of the Legislature which Governor Ritchie has called, and which will convene on September 20. That was decided at a meeting in the Rennert, in Baltimore, last Thursday, of State candidates and heads of the party organization.

Among those present were O. E. Weller, candidate for Senator; William N. Andrews, John Philip Hill, Sydney E. Mudd and Frederick N. Zihlman, candidates for Congress; United States Senator Joseph I. France, State Chairman Galen L. Tait, Attorney-General Alexander Armstrong, W. Harry Haller, Paul Sleman, John H. Cunningham, Oliver Metzerott, J. Frank Ridenour and J. Stewart Annan. There were no women present.

The session was executive, but at its close Chairman Tait stated that action on the suffrage question and all other matters discussed was unanimous. Practically the whole of the meeting was devoted to discussion of plans to register and vote the women and to formulating policies to be pursued in the extra session.

A set of resolutions was given out by Chairman Tait, after the meeting, in which the calling of an extra session of the Legislature was urged. The resolutions stated that those assembled "advocate the prompt calling of a special session of the Legislature," and added: "We urge the calling of the special legislative session for the accomplishment of all of the following purposes:"

These purposes, in addition to ratification of the suffrage amendment, were:

Repeal of the Declaration of Intention act as to both men and women.

Repeal of the Affidavit of Removal act.

"Simplification" of the ballot.

Passage of such other legislation as may be necessary for the full enjoyment of women of their political and legal rights.

Increase of polling facilities and improvement of voting conditions to prevent overcrowding, school houses and other public buildings to be used where possible.

Of Interest To Ex-Service Men

Every discharged soldier, sailor, marine or nurse (male or female) should know the benefits to which he or she is entitled under the War Risk Insurance Act, and the facilities which the Government offers in compliance with this Act.

If you have been discharged from the service on or after April 7th, 1917, and are suffering from a disability incident to your service, you should apply to either the local Red Cross chapter—Miss Mildred Beauchamp, chairman—of your county, or to Dr. R. R. Norris, Crisfield, Md., who is a local representative of the Government and Post Commander of the American Legion for Somerset county, where full information will be given as to the method of procedure to follow in obtaining examination, necessary treatment, no matter what the condition you are suffering from may be, and a monthly compensation, which is elastic, depending upon the extent of your disability and number of dependents. The Government is in a position to furnish eye glasses, braces, supports of any kind, and artificial appliances for disabilities incurred in the service.

Every disabled ex-service man should take advantage of these opportunities if he feels he is handicapped at the present time from an injury or condition received while in the service, in order that he might be restored to health and strength once more, and again "carry on" as before. If necessary, do not fail to get in touch with the local Government doctor in your county.

U. S. Debt Up $101,755,000

Guarantee of railroad earnings resulted in an increase in the public debt of $101,755,000 during August, according to Treasury statistics issued last Thursday. They showed the Nation's gross debt to be $24,324,672,000.

Treasury records charge the increase in the public debt to an issue of certificates of indebtedness offered August 16, sold to cover payment to the railroads under the guarantee provisions of the transportation act.

Advances to the carriers against probable deficits during the month were said by Treasury officials to have reached nearly $160,000,000. On this basis they figured there would have been a slight reduction in the public debt had not the earnings guarantee been in effect.

Officials believe it will be possible to clear up all transactions with the railroads, with the exception of the revolving fund, by the opening of the new year.

EXTRA SESSION SEPTEMBER 20

Governor Ritchie Decides To Convene The Legislature

Governor Ritchie last Wednesday decided to call the Maryland legislature into extra session, limiting its activities to amending the registration laws in order that women may have ample time to enroll their names. It is also proposed to amend the election laws, possibly by providing double crews of judges and clerks in order that there will be abundant time for women to cast their ballots.

The Governor decided upon the call after analyzing the advice given him at the meeting of the Democratic State Central Committee on Tuesday, and after conferring Wednesday with party leaders. He spent the greater part of the day at Annapolis in preparation of a statement giving his reasons for the call. He disregarded the tangle into which the suffrage amendment has been thrown by the reconsideration of the ratification of the amendment by the House of Delegates of Tennessee. He also disregarded a protest against an extra session by the Maryland Association Opposed to Woman Suffrage, received by him on Wednesday. He is aware that the legislature, once in session, is all powerful; that it can initiate whatever legislation it chooses, and that an effort will be made to have Maryland ratify the suffrage amendment, a move to which he is not opposed, though opposed by Senator Smith and other party leaders.

Since the adjournment of the legislature, two senators have been appointed to public positions—Mr. Eppler, of Allegany, to be an Industrial Accident Commissioner, and Mr. Crothers, of Cecil, to be a State Roads Commissioner. It is said that they will not be entitled to their seats during the extra session.

The Governor's statement says "there is no doubt that the present time for registration is so short that even on the most conservative basis thousands of Maryland women would be disfranchised, and no relief is possible except through an extra session of the Legislature.

The only two objections to the special sessions that have been urged are the cost and the possibility that matters not pertinent to the call might be forced upon the Legislature, says the statement. The Governor says he assumes the people will cheerfully bear the cost in view of the circumstances. He adds that the session should not last more than a few days.

The statement further says that political expediency should not be allowed to overbalance what is inherently right, and he expresses confidence that the Legislature will not allow matters "not pertinent to the call" to be forced upon it. This refers, it is taken, to the fear expressed in some quarters that there will be a drive for ratification of the suffrage amendment.

The Governor's statement goes into details on the number of days now available in both Baltimore city and the counties for registration, and, working on the assumption that as many women will register as there are men now registered, he concludes that 60,521 women would be disfranchised in the counties and "thousands of men and women disfranchised in Baltimore city" for lack of sufficient time to register.

Even if only 50 per cent. of the women should apply for registration, says the statement, there would be 5024 left unregistered for lack of time, assuming there were absolutely no delays.

Even if the registration could be accomplished, the statement concludes, there is the gravest doubt if the total vote could be cast within the present hours on election day.

Road Signs Bob Up Again

Road signs over which State Forester F. W. Besley and Chairman J. N. Mackall, of the State Roads Commission, engaged in an argument several weeks ago, may take the stage again at the special session of the Legislature. Chairman Mackall is considering preparation of a bill to amend the present road laws to allow advertising of the type proposed for the signs, according to L. H. Steuart, secretary of the commission.

"There seems to be no reason why such a bill should not be considered at the special session," said Mr. Steuart. "It is said that Mr. Besley would be glad for the Legislature to take the matter out of his hands. The Governor favors the signs."

The signs in question are large metallic warning signals provided with illumination for night use. The total value is said to be nearly $300,000. They have been offered free to the State by a manufacturing firm which expects to be repaid through sale of advertising space on the bases.

DEMOCRATS WELCOME WOMEN

At State Central Committee Meeting In Baltimore City

The Democratic State Central Committee met in Baltimore last Tuesday at the Rennert to welcome women into the ranks of the party and to arrange to give them recognition in party affairs. From Governor Ritchie and Senator Smith down to "Cy" Cummings, who made the last ardent speech, love and reverence were poured forth freely, leading, of course, to earnest pleas that the women work and vote for the Democratic party and the good of the State and nation. "Cy" explained that the leaders had opposed suffrage for women because "they loved them so," but that now all were prepared to believe that suffrage was for the best, and he opined that good women, face to face with opportunity for service, would not be governed by a desire to punish those who had differed from them.

The practical steps to give the women recognition in party affairs consisted of the unanimous election of Mrs. James T. Briscoe, of Hagerstown, as the woman member from Maryland of the national committee and the authorization of a campaign committee, in which women will be represented. Precisely how the women's organization in the counties and the several legislative districts of Baltimore city will be worked out was not determined. That probably will be decided soon in conferences between State Chairman J. Hubert Wade and other party leaders and Mrs. Briscoe.

After the formal business of the session was over, the election of Mrs. Briscoe, the provision for a special campaign committee and the adoption of the usual resolution directing Chairman Wade to fill vacancies—the meeting was devoted to general discussion of the new situation, Governor Ritchie leading off. He addressed himself principally to the women present, welcomed them into the party, spoke gallantly of "youth, beauty and brains," and assured them of the belief that they would be a good influence. Then he spoke of the imperative need, as seen by the Democrats, that the work done by President Wilson in behalf of the League of Nations not be lost to the world, and earnestly appealed to the women to help. He also warmly commended the candidacy of Senator Smith for re-election. In every public capacity, he stated, Senator Smith has given notable service, and in the United States Senate he has been at the call of everyone, regardless of politics. The re-election of Senator Smith, the Governor also said, was necessary in the League of Nations fight, inasmuch as Governor Cox must be backed by a friendly Senate.

Senator Smith made a short speech, which he began by saying: "Ladies and gentlemen, especially ladies." He talked entirely to the women. He said that he had been opposed, as everyone knew, to suffrage and that he had been opposed because he thought it would be best for women to be kept out of politics. He had no apologies to make, he went on to say, for his past course, but now that suffrage has been granted he acquiesces, and he plead with the women to vote themselves and to see that all the good women of the State vote, to the end that the greatest good may be had from the new order. He told the women to remember that however good their intentions they cannot put them into effect at the polls unless they first register. He added that he favored an extra session of the Legislature so that provision could be made to give every woman ample opportunity to register.

T. Alan Goldsborough, Democratic candidate for Congress on the Eastern Shore, spoke along the same lines, and also told the women that he had been proud to be his party's candidate on the Shore, and that now, with the women of "the garden spot of the world voting," he is ten times prouder than he ever was before.

The utmost harmony prevailed during the whole gathering from the beginning until the final adjournment. Members of the different factions were on hand in force, and there appeared to be a disposition on the part of all to work together for the good of the Democratic party and the election of the entire ticket. City politicians and county politicians conferred together in apparent harmony and good-will. Mr. John J. Mahon was on hand several hours with his ablest lieutenants. Comptroller Lee, Congressman Benson, former Governor Emerson C. Harrington and other leaders were on hand. Collector Joshua W. Miles was there, and Senator Orlando Harrison was on hand with a large contingent of his Eastern Shore friends. There were sixty women present at the meeting including suffragists and anti-suffragists.

One-half the world doesn't know why the other half lives.

A Blunder Repaired

By ARNOLD PRESCOTT

(©, 1920, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

In some instinctive way Alice Gove soon felt as if she had known him for a long time; and she was rather glad that the erratic train service kept him and her waiting together. She had seated herself in the great city station to wait for the train that would carry her to her Northern home; and he had seated himself beside her. Soon they had entered into conversation; his keen brown eyes had looked pleasantly into her gray ones; and she had been content to wait.

Suddenly, he had started and said to her quickly, "Will you look after this case of mine until I return? I will not be gone long."

She had readily agreed without thinking much about his request. She saw his tall form disappear through the great door. He was walking rapidly.

She looked at the case. It was large and heavy; she did not wonder that he had left it with her if he were merely going to find out about some train or ask some question at the information window.

But he did not return, and the fact worried her, for in a short time her own train would be pulling in. She almost forgot her quick interest in him; it hardly seemed just an unselfish act for him to leave her without remembering that she too must catch her train.

She watched the door with growing concern, but through it came no tall figure and pleasant smiling face. The big hand of the station clock crept to the hour. She made up her mind there was nothing to do but to take the case and go with it. He might catch her on her way and—the thought made her heart jump—think she was running away with it. But she could wait no longer.

She caught up the case, and found it very heavy, but she started hurriedly for the door with it.

Sharply, as she passed through, an arm caught hers, and a voice with a note of triumph in it greeted her penetratingly:

"Just a moment, young lady, where are you going with that case?"

She looked up with astonishment and fear, dimly wondering if some friend of his had seen her or the brown-eyed owner had returned. Instead, she found herself looking into the cold eyes of a middle-aged man.

She explained rapidly, but her breathlessness and anxiety were suspicious. She saw the gate swinging. "Please, I must get my train!"

"No," the cool voice said, "not yet. I think you can put that off. Suppose you come with me, make no fuss, and we will tell you where to go!"

She looked around with wild eyes and wildly beating heart. A curious crowd had collected and was rapidly growing larger. The hand on her arm tightened. With her train pulling out, there was nothing else to do; and she yielded.

From somewhere another man seemed to come who placed himself on her left, and they led her through corridors into an office, where a uniformed man rose.

"I guess we have got him, or, rather, her," her first captor said, "walking right off with the plunder."

Through the chaos in her mind, she heard the words dimly, and out of the chaos began to creep a slow meaning that left her white and trembling.

The grip had contained stolen goods; these men were detectives, and they had been watching for some one with just such a case; and they had found her—and he with the kind, brown eyes whose friendly glance had won her heart with just one look—he had seen them, and not daring to take the grip had hurried out, leaving it with her.

They had opened the case on the desk, and the uniformed man's eyes were cold as he turned to her.

"Caught with the real stuff! Well, I guess we need worry no longer. She doesn't look the part, does she? More like some rosy-cheeked country girl—"

"I am not a thief!" she cried, desperately, trembling. She told as best she could the story; and she saw in each face the cold unbelief. She sank into a chair with a moan, covering her eyes as she wept.

A cool but kindlier voice said, "Buck up and come with us."

They went into the corridor and down into the station. Through tear-filled eyes she glanced in the direction where she had sat those happy half hours with her brown-eyed friend. She saw a tall figure standing there! There was no doubt!

She caught the detective's arm, and incoherently whispered and talked to him. He suddenly seemed to grow tense. "Here, Space, keep this girl while I nab him!"

She stood in the grasp of the officer, and saw the other, putting himself between the tall form and the door, go up and clap the other mildly on the shoulder. The other turned, and she saw both in earnest conversation. They glanced in her direction, and suddenly that tall figure swung with long strides toward her, and, nearing her, she saw the friendly face set with some emotion.

He came up to her. "Little girl I owe you more than an apology. I did a ridiculous stunt!"

As he talked she heard the detective say to the other, "It's all off. Come on."

Wondering, dazed and weary with the stress, she heard her station friend saying, "Now come with me to a quiet place and let me explain."

She followed dumbly, half hearing what he said, and found herself in a little corner in a winsome bit of a restaurant. His mild eyes held her gently, and the soothing tones of his voice stilled the tempest in her to peace as he explained.

"I am a railroad detective—sent from the Southern division to help run down a gang of sneak thieves operating here. I spotted the chap with the valise, but he dodged me. I was sitting there with you, hoping I might catch sight of him again. I thought I saw him, and hustled out without thinking about you. And I'm downright sorry."

The mystery clear enough for her, strangely happy that he was not the thief, she said somewhat without reason, "But how did you know I wouldn't run away with it? And did you catch him?"

A slow smile gathered on his face. "Yes, I landed him, and sent him on, came back for the grip—but, listen, please. I am going to hire a taxi and take you to the finest hotel for old maids and young maids in the country; and don't you suppose you could stay over a few days and let me show you how sorry I am for this blunder?"

She listened shyly in the way of woman and answered in the way of woman very simply but to him satisfactorily, "Perhaps." And he knew by the indefinite answer that he was definitely forgiven.

PROFITEER ALWAYS WITH US

"Gougers" Were Known and Properly Dealt With in South Africa 200 Years Ago.

The profiteering evil is no new thing in South Africa. Speculating in the foodstuffs of the people is recorded as far back as 1726, and the present proposals to legislate for the evil have their counterpart in the placcaat issued nearly 200 years ago, an exchange states. January 9, 1726, the reference in the journal reads:

"Corn harvest very bad. Placcaat issued to prevent heartless speculators from buying up the wheat to the injury of the poor and creating a monopoly; also to advise all to sell what is not required for their own use to the company at the ordinary rates and not to sell to one another."

The harvest failed in the following year, and January 8, 1737, the journal sets forth "As the harvest has failed miserably, because of the all-destroying rust or honey dew, so that hardly any grain has been delivered to the company, and as the farmers all complain and, under the circumstances, the plans of self-interested parties may be thwarted (evidently the placcaat of the previous year did not scotch the speculator) a placcaat was published forbidding licensed bakers to bake white bread, cakes, biscuits, except for funerals or to sell even a pound of flour."

George Eliot.

Most of George Eliot's novels are studies in retribution, akin to Greek tragedy and in general to Greek modes of thought, whereby, as expressed poetically, when a wrong is done, the Eumenides, daughters of earth and darkness, awake and revenge it. It was likewise the Hebrew formula that they who sow the wind shall reap the whirlwind. This law, observed alike by pagan and Jew, George Eliot modernized and elaborated in detail in the light of the science of her day. Her method was to lay before the reader the antecedents of a character like Doctor Lydgate, to confront him suddenly with the necessity of an immediate act having a distinctive moral quality, and then to trace in all its windings and turnings the influence of that act not only upon him who committed it, but upon others who are caught in the meshes. "We can conceive," she remarks, paraphrasing Aeschylus, "no retribution that does not spread beyond its mark in pulsations of unmerited pain." Nothing is ever left by George Eliot at loose ends; when she finishes, the fabric is whole and complete.—Wilbur Cross, in the Yale Review.

JUST FUN

After the Coffee.

Prof. Puntolini wished to train his son, a high school freshman, to speak Latin, but the boy persisted in making his replies in Italian.

"But why do you not reply in Latin? Is it not your mother tongue?"

"Dear father, when I am able to choose between the mother and the daughter I, as a rule, choose the daughter."—Bulletin of Italian Society.

Man of Ability.

"So you want a job? What have you been trained to do?"

"Dig ditches, keep accounts, drive a horse and automobile, handle money, carpentry, telegraphy, machinist, superintend construction——"

"Oh, efficiency expert, huh?"

"Hired."—Home Sector.

Experienced.

"The spectators are supernumeraries, though."

"Perhaps, but they are professional spectators. I understand they were drafted from a local courtroom where a breach of promise suit was being tried."

Maybe So.

"Well?"

"Most marriages start out all right. And maybe if he stuck to that theory more marriages would turn out better."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

The Practical Part.

"These people are right who are saying it is time for a man to assert himself and be master in his own house."

"That's right. Here, take one of these cigars home."

"Thanks, but my wife won't allow me to smoke indoors."

NOT SO FOOLISH.

"Jack is telling around that you are worth your weight in gold."

"Foolish boy! Who's he telling it to?"

"His creditors."

Big Contract.

The minds of statesmen must expand
In a most wondrous way,
Each is supposed to understand
What all the others say!
—Washington Evening Star.

Audited.

The Daughter — Why, whatever makes you say Ferdinand hasn't a hundred dollars to his name? He told me he had an uncounted fortune.

The Old Man—Mebbe he had when he told you, but since then I've counted it.

Prehistoric Love Taps.

Old Doc Bonechisel—Gee, but you're beat up some! Upper cave gang get you?"

Mr. Skinpants, the Handsome Bachelor—Naw! Didn't you know this is leap year? Half a dozen women proposed to me all at once.

Taking a Chance.

"I want a pound of butter."

"The best?"

"What was the last I had?"

"The best."

"Give me a pound of the other."—Tyrihans, Christiania.

Retort Matrimonial.

She—You can't accuse me of ever helping you to make a fool of yourself.

He—I don't know about that. You said yes when I asked you to marry me.

Efficiency.

"I hope you don't object to cats, Bridget?"

Took It Pleasantly.

"I heard father laughing instead of storming. Then he doesn't consider your suit unfavorably after all."

"I dunno. He said it was a good joke."

A Paradox.

"The dyer over the way has a queer sort of business."

"How is that?"

"He is dyeing to make a living."

Its Advantages.

"Is this good music?"

"It ought to be. It has never been played on anything but an upright piano."

POINT FOR HOME BUILDERS

Value of House Is Greatly Enhanced by the Presence of Trees and Shrubbery.

If at all possible, say specialists of the United States department of agriculture, the house should be located near good trees, the shade of which may be used and enjoyed by the family every day during the summer. It takes so long to grow good trees that those already available should be cherished and utilized to the fullest extent.

Another thing that should be carefully considered is outlook. The house should be located so that the windows of the rooms most used look out upon attractive views. The living-room and the kitchen are entitled to first consideration in this matter. The near view should be over an unbroken lawn, and there should be some object of interest beyond. If there is in the general landscape a mountain, a water view, a woodland, a meadow, an extended farm view, or even a handsome tree, use it as an inspiring picture, framed by the window for the family through the years. It may mean the difference between a sordid life and an inspired life for the children who are brought up under its influence. At any rate, it will mean active pleasure or quiet consolation to the wife amid the daily cares of the household. If all these natural objects are lacking, possibly some feature may be created on the place, such as an attractive group of shrubs so placed and arranged as to have something of interest every month in the year.

CLEAN UP UNSIGHTLY SPOTS

Rubbish Piles Are Very Much Out of Place in Any City of High Aspirations.

In the good old days before we got so absorbed in running the universe and contemplating the cost of living, we used to pay more attention to such homely matters as cleaning the streets and tidying up the yards, remarks the Kansas City Star. Dr. E. H. Bullock, health director, has called attention to our deficiencies in his appeal for a clean-up.

Of course premises ought to be kept tidy all the time. There is no excuse for accumulating piles of ashes and tin cans. Still, in this frail world such things as rubbish piles do exist. That being the case, it is better to clean up spring and fall than never to clean up at all.

Most persons who get about town will testify to the general tidiness of yards. The average family takes pride in the appearance of a well-kept lawn. But an occasional slacker may disfigure a whole block. One unkempt place will nullify the efforts of the entire neighborhood.

Must Turn to Home Gardens.

With the winter's wheat crop promising a yield of 248 million bushels less than last year, and the government warning the public that nearly all of the old wheat now in stock is of inferior grade and of low milling quality, and indications pointing to reduced acreage of spring wheat, the country needs to be aroused quickly to the danger of an inadequate food supply. With new potatoes selling in Florida at $19 to $20 a barrel, or three times what was formerly considered a good price, we must once more turn to the home garden as an aid to the nation's food supply. And the sooner the country understands this situation and its danger the better it will be for us.—Manufacturers' Record.

Loop and Elevated Aerials.

An extensive research on radio transmission and reception with various types of aerials has been in progress at the bureau of standards, Washington, D. C., says the Scientific American. One of the most interesting questions at the present time is as to the relative advantages of the antenna, or usual type of elevated aerial, and the smaller coil aerial or "loop." This question is answered by the studies of the bureau. The small coil aerial has many advantages, but is usually not so powerful a transmitting and receiving device as the antenna type of aerial. It may, however, have so much lower resistance than the antenna that it is equal to it in transmitting and receiving value.

Resourceful Messenger.

A sentry, who was stationed at a certain gate with strict orders to admit no one, was approached by an Irishman. "Halt!" said the sentry. Mickey looked at him in surprise. "Faith, an' what am I to halt for?" he said. "No one is allowed in there," came the reply. "But sure I must go! I've a note for his 'anner the kurnel." "Can't help it," said the sentry. "No one is allowed in there without a pass." "But I tell ye I must go in!" said Mickey; "sure the giniral himself sent me." "Can't help who sent you," said the other; "you can't go in." "Well, then," came Mickey's reply, "gimme me the gun an' you take the note, and we'll manage foinely!"

FOR HEADACHE, LIVER TROUBLE

Black-Draught Is The Best Medicine This Lady Ever Used. Says It Is Only Medicine She Gives Her Children.

Cherry Village, Ark.—In telling of her experience with Thedford's Black-Draught, Mrs. Lottie Ellis, R. F. D. No. 1, this place, said: "I used Black-Draught as a laxative, also for headache, torpid liver and indigestion. It is the best liver medicine I have ever used and is the only medicine I give my children.

"I feel like it has saved me a lot in doctors' bills, for when the children complain of feeling bad or have a cold, I just give them a good dose of Black-Draught and they soon get all right. It certainly cleans the liver and clears up the skin and they are soon out, well again. I wouldn't be without it for anything."

Seventy years of successful use has made Thedford's Black-Draught a standard, household remedy. Every member, of every family, needs, at times, the benefit that Black-Draught gives in helping to cleanse the system and to prevent or relieve the troubles that come from constipation, indigestion, and a lazy liver.

To keep well, your stomach, liver and bowels must be in good working order. To help keep them that way, take occasional doses of Thedford's Black-Draught. Thousands of homes are never without it.

AMERICAN RED CROSS TO GIVE RURAL HELP

Program for Public Health and Community Welfare Is Now Well Under Way.

Rural communities and towns of less than 8,000 population benefit in a very large part by the public health and community welfare work of the American Red Cross. Almost all of the 3,600 Red Cross chapters have some rural sections in their territory. Therefore the Red Cross Rural Service.

Briefly, the purpose of Rural Service is to assist people to get out of life more health, wealth and happiness. In this purpose public heath instruction and general educational progress of both children and adults play a big part.

Recreation is found to be one of the biggest needs in rural life. There is lack of sufficient play-life for the children and social life for the adults. Picnics, pageants, debating clubs, baseball leagues, community singing and other social events which bring the people of surrounding communities together have been organized and carried on under the guidance of Red Cross rural workers to great advantage. In many instances solving recreational problems and getting people together proves to be the awakening of the community to other conditions which may be improved by united action.

As a result of community organization, townships in which there had been neither plans nor interest in community progress have been organized to work together with the unified purpose of bringing their community up to the most enlightened standards. Lecture and musical entertainment courses have been started as a result of community meetings, as well as circulating libraries, Red Cross schools of instruction in Home Nursing, Care of the Sick and First Aid. In the larger towns the need for restrooms and public comfort stations is being met. Playgrounds for the children have been established and recreational activities worked out for the year.

In order that there may be concerted effort in carrying on the programs of the various welfare agencies in the rural districts, Red Cross Rural Service helps the organizations already on the ground. The main object of the service is to lend a hand everywhere and take the lead only where necessary.

JUNIOR RED CROSS ACTIVE IN EUROPE

Garden seeds for Polish orphans, milk for anaemic Greek babies, carpenters' tools for Czecho-Slovakian cripples—these are only a few of the gifts that young Americans are sending to the war-crushed children of the Old World.

Through the Junior Red Cross the boys and girls of the United States are giving a fresh start in life to little war orphans scattered all over Europe. They have set up orphans' homes in France, school colonies in Belgium and Montenegro, and day schools in Albania.

They are sending dozens of young Syrians, Montenegrins, and Albanians to American colleges in Constantinople and Beirut, and maintaining more than a hundred orphans of French soldiers at colleges and trade schools. In orphanages and farm schools up and down the peninsula of Italy there are nearly 500 wards of American Juniors.

Last winter a thousand French children from the inadequate shelters of the devasted regions were sent by the Junior Red Cross to spend the cold months in warmer parts of France. At the same time five thousand little Belgians were having a hot lunch every day at Junior Red Cross school canteens.

American school children have already raised something like a million dollars for these enterprises, and they are still hard at work.

RED CROSS RELIEF IN CENTRAL EUROPE

But for timely assistance of the American Red Cross during the last year, a large proportion of the 20,000,000 population of the Balkan States might have starved or perished from disease or exposure. Six million dollars worth of food, clothing and medical supplies have been sent to the Balkans—Roumania, Bulgaria, Albania, Montenegro, Serbia, Bosnia and Greece—since the beginning of Red Cross relief operations in Central Europe, while millions of dollars worth of food alone has been sent to the needy in these states.

The money expended by the Red Cross in this stricken portion of Europe has been used to set up hospitals, orphanages, dispensaries, mobile medical units and to help in the general reconstruction of devastated areas. American tractors and other farming implements have been sent to the agricultural regions where aid has been given in plowing the land.

By the last of this year probably all American Red Cross agencies administering relief in Central Europe will have withdrawn. By that time, it is believed, the people will have approached a normal state of living and will be able through their own agencies which the Red Cross has helped set up to provide for themselves.

That is one reason, perhaps, why more attention is being paid to tires—why tire costs are being figured closer and people are beginning to look for better tires.

We believe that people are entitled to better tires—the best they can get.

Not only the man with the big car, but the man with the small car, and the medium sized car.

We represent U.S. Tires for that reason—because their policy is the same as ours—every tire as good as you can get it, regardless of the size of the car it is to go on.

It was that policy which led to the introduction of the straight side automobile tire, the pneumatic truck tire.

And you can't beat it.

NURSING SERVICE IS RAPIDLY EXPANDING

This American Red Cross Work Flourishing in Small Towns Throughout Country.

More than 87,000 graduate nurses have been enrolled in the American Red Cross to date and its department of nursing is daily increasing this enrollment.

The department of nursing has been authorized to maintain an adequate reserve of nurses for the army and navy. It will continue to supply the needs of the United States Public Health Service to which it has assigned more than 1,000 nurses in the last year.

It will assist in establishing proper nursing service in foreign countries where the American Red Cross has organized hospitals, dispensaries and schools for nurses. Courses in home hygiene and care of the sick have been started for thousands of women who have never received any education in this direction. Rural nursing which was in its infancy a short while ago has been put ahead at least a decade through the work of the department of nursing and local Red Cross chapters.

Public health nursing has been extended to many rural communities and now flourishes actively in hundreds of small towns and counties. Nearly a thousand efficient nurses have already been assigned to this kind of work.

The department of nursing is uniting with other organizations in a year's campaign in recruiting nurses for training schools, in educating the general public as to standards of nursing education and in showing communities their responsibility toward schools of nursing. It will endeavor to meet all these needs as well as to continue the enrollment of dietitians who will be utilized as instructors in home dietetics, in developing nutritional clinics, and in supplying dietitians for the United States Public Health Service and the civilian hospitals.

The Nursing Service will continue to offer to women and young girls the opportunity of securing instruction in home hygiene and care of the sick in every community in the country. This instruction has not only laid the foundation for public health but in some places has given impetus to the establishment of hospitals and community school houses.

"As a community profits by the work of the nurse," says Miss Clara D. Noyes, director of the department of nursing, "it is logical that the community should be aroused to its responsibility. The American Red Cross stands ready to help in a general campaign of recruiting and must have the support, sympathy and understanding of the medical profession as well as the intelligent co-operation of the people at large."

HOME SERVICE FOR EVERYBODY IN NEED

Do you know what the present day Home Service of the American Red Cross is?

Many people do not know that, besides completing the work for ex-service men, especially the disabled, it provides the same neighborly service to families in general that it formerly gave families of soldiers, sailors and marines.

"Home Service covers a wide and varied field," says Frederick C. Munroe, general manager of the American Red Cross. "It gives aid to families in solving such problems as budget planning, marketing, tiding over times of financial stress, keeping children in school, helping crippled children, widowed and deserted mothers, children backward in school and children in conflict with the laws. It renders service to the homeless and transient, to the illiterate, to tenement dwellers, to the unemployed, and gives friendly assistance and advice to foreign speaking groups."

In addition to helping families in the solution of their own problems, Home Service helps in strengthening the weak spots in the social life of communities. It joins hands with others to make communities safer, healthier and happier.

Organizing action along lines in which the community is already interested is one of the objects of Home Service. It has established community meetings, patriotic celebrations, pageants and picnics. Rest rooms, recreation facilities, play supervisors and moving pictures have been provided. Through Home Service other agencies are influenced to bring about improved commercial amusements and better school facilities and to promote traveling libraries as well as to secure county agricultural and home demonstration agents.

If you need assistance at any time, go to the secretary of the nearest Red Cross chapter and describe the situation. Your confidence will be sacredly respected and every possible effort will be made to aid you.

American Red Cross Roll Call.

The Fourth Annual Roll Call of the American Red Cross will be held this year from Armistice Day, November 11, to Thanksgiving Day, November 25, inclusive. During this period the men and women of the United States will pay their annual dues and renew their membership.

One has doubt whether some girls are putting in practice the "beauty hints" or trying to do fresco painting.

So long as they are permitted to sample the evidence the dry cause need never lack workers to enforce prohibition.

People who rave so angrily because the price of gasoline is going up are reminded that the price of shoe leather is going down.

So far none of the women have expressed an intention to vote for a candidate on the ground that he once set 'em up for the crowd.

The people who work half the time for high pay and go on strike the rest of the time, are most indignant about the evils of the social system.

There is not much betting on the presidential election yet, but some daring sports have put up a dollar that the next president comes from Ohio.

Some people in Princess Anne are very indignant if their summer journeyings are mentioned in the paper, and they feel highly slighted if they are not.

So far the women who have been celebrating the adoption of the 19th amendment have been able to report for work the next morning at the usual hour.

Some folks are terribly indignant that it costs more to run pleasure cars, but the expense of running tractors for food production does not seem to excite their indignation.

A gown of Mrs. Wilson's is now placed on exhibit in the White House collection, mounted on a "mannikin." This is highly improper, as of course it should have been placed on a womannikin.

Formerly people used to go out into the country to find quiet, silence and rest, but now it is so noisy with the spluttering of the Ford motors that you have to take refuge in a back city street.

"NORMALCY" AND "OLD TIMES"

Senator Harding has been saying in his speeches that he "wants to get back to normalcy," and Governor Coolidge protesses to wish for a restoration of "old times."

These gentlemen are the candidates of the "Old Guard," and must, therefore, voice the wishes of the "Old Guard." The "normalcy" of "old times" Senator Harding wants to get back to must be that of the good old golden Mark Hanna days, when an "Old Guard's" campaign fund exceeded $16,000,000; when a price was paid for elections; when employees at great industrial plants were told by their superintendents, the agents of special interests, that unless they voted as they (the representatives of special interests) wished them to vote, their jobs would be closed to them on the day following the election; they were the days when corporation taskmasters wrung immense dividends from the very blood of women and children employed in unregulated "sweatshops."

On the other hand, in the days of "normalcy," in the "old times," there was no Federal Reserve system; panics were as frequent as the seasons, and national bank failures occurred on an average of one every three weeks; there was no Farm Loan system; small farmers were the victims of mortgage bank pirates and tenancy was the curse of the land; there was no Federal aid in road building, and every farmer paid a "mud tax"; there was no merchant marine; there was none of the many beneficent legislative enactments of the last two Democratic administrations, which wrested the power of government out of the hands of a few and lodged it in the hands of the people. In those days of "normalcy" an insidious lobby guided the hand that wrote the laws placed upon the Nation's statute books, until driven from the corridors of the Capitol as the money-changers of old were lashed from the Temple.

Such was "normalcy" in the "old times" for which the "Old Guard," the agents of the special interests, speaking through its candidates, so fervently sighs.

BACK TO SCHOOL

There is something inspiring in the sight of 20,000,000 children turning out as one body to take up the work of the new school year. It is a pretty picture, with the youngsters well scrubbed, rigged up in their new suits and shoes. A lot of them protest about being sent back to work but you couldn't keep them away if you tried.

It is a remarkable thing when you can get 20,000,000 human beings to do the same thing at one time. In most respects people are very individual and have different ideas about conduct and living. America is a "go as you please place." There is little conformity to any one idea of life.

But in the one matter of education it has sunk deep into popular consciousness that the children must have it. Even the most ignorant family wants its children to learn. Where the mass of the people so thoroughly appreciate the value of schooling, all the children ought to have it in liberal measure.

WOMAN SUFFRAGE

It is not surprising that the women are jubilant over the triumph of the suffrage movement after fifty years of agitation. It takes a deep feeling of conviction and a sense of wrongs that should be righted to keep a popular movement alive for that length of time and to finally achieve its desired aim.

The strongest argument for suffrage has been the experience of the States that have tried it out. It was not to be expected that any of those States once having enlarged the franchise to take in women, could have gone back to exclusive male voting. But if the change had produced no good results and had brought harm, the rest of the country would have been amply warned. The women themselves would have seen that the innovation was a mistake. They would have urged their sisters in other States not to follow along a path that led only to mischief.

There was a time when woman suffragists were regarded as a mild variety of cranks, unfeminine creatures of sexless appearance, who neglected duties at home to butt into affairs belonging properly to men. It took courage to be a suffragist in those days. The women pioneers encountered the ridicule of the male sex and the disapproval of their own.

Some men are as yet unconvinced that woman suffrage will accomplish much for reform. But they have come to feel that women and men are equal partners in life, and that if the women desire to enter a certain field of effort the men have no right to forbid them.

They will welcome all the high ideals that women will bring into the political arena. They expect that as a result of a lack of business experience, the new voters will make mistakes. But they trust to see them careful students of political problems and able within a short time to exercise good judgment.

YESTERDAY WAS LABOR DAY

The time was when manual labor was viewed with a great deal of contempt. People were ashamed to have it known that they worked with their hands. They would scramble for jobs in which they could sit on tall desk stools and wear clean cuffs and an alpaca coat or hand out ladies' dress goods over a counter.

During recent years the world has learned a new respect for honest labor. This has been partly because the workers, by better organization, have made themselves a power that has to be reckoned with. Sometimes this power has not been wisely used, but it has at least given the manual workers a powerful voice in the management of industry.

People now have a greater regard for any one who produces things. The world dislikes idlers and parasites. It feels that too many people are able to live without production, by manipulating products of other men's toil. It feels that every one should do something that will add to human welfare. Whether it be labor of hand or of brain makes little difference.

The man who does hard muscular work is entitled to particular credit. He meets all the dirt and grime of life which people naturally skrink from. He offers his strength in patient toil, suffering weariness and fatigue.

Labor Day was created as a kind of festival for the workers of the world, particularly for those who work in inconspicuous ways and who perform the more exhausting tasks of physical labor. It is also the day for all who give honest endeavor to tasks of any kind. For most people it is simply a pleasant respite from daily duties. So far as it is the occasion of public observance, it emphasizes the dignity of all kinds of service.

The people look to the Federal authorities to protect them from the coal profiteers.

The Tennessee Tangle

The action of the anti-ratificationists of the Tennessee Legislature is expunging from the journal all record of the ratification of the Nineteenth Amendment and voting to non-concur with the Senate in its approval of the suffrage provision is not likely to constitute an effective recall of Governor Roberts' certificate of ratification and the proclamation of Secretary of State Colby.

It is, perhaps, a strain on the imagination to contemplate the possibility of the Presidential election being brought into the courts and challenged on the ground of the illegitimacy of the feminine vote cast under the proclamation of the Nineteenth Amendment, should the latest action of the Tennessee House finally be sustained as within their rights, but even if this consequence be considered unlikely, there are thousands of election contests throughout the United States which might be appealed on such basis. The possibility of getting the question before the Supreme Court of the United States for an early hearing and decision may yet have to be taken up for consideration.

But at least the situation gives emphasis to the plea for Congress, at its next session, to take up the question of so reforming the process of amending the Federal Constitution that in no future instance shall there be the muddle over the technicalities of ratification that have characterized both this and the preceding amendment. Provision for a direct referendum to the popular electorate of each State would have obviated these difficulties.—Philadelphia Evening Bulletin.

Hurricane Hits Frederick County

Leaving its path strewn with the wreckage of barns, uprooted trees and demolished fencing, a hurricane of the velocity of a western tornado, last Tuesday afternoon at 4 o'clock, swept through the eastern section of Middletown Valley, Frederick county, Md. The storm passed over in 15 minutes, the vortex being centered on the outskirts of Eastern Middletown.

Three men were injured, two barns demolished and hundreds of trees torn up when the storm came. The injured are George Ropp, Lewis Ropp and Martin Ropp, brothers, and all of near Hawbottom.

The demolished barns were owned by Lewis F. Kefauver, Middletown, located about a mile and a-half east of Middletown, and by Joseph H. Hedges, Middletown, located about a quarter of a mile northeast of the Kefauver property.

While the loss has not been estimated, it is believed that it will be in the neighborhood of $15,000.

Chronic Catarrh

Our manner of living makes us very susceptible to colds and a succession of colds causes chronic catarrh a loathsome disease with which it is estimated that ninety-five per cent of our adult population are afflicted. If you would avoid chronic catarrh you must avoid colds or having contracted a cold get rid of it as quickly as possible. Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is highly recommended as a cure for colds and can be depended upon.

Utah Shows Greatest Gain

Utah, 41st State in population ten years ago and the 1920 population of which was announced last week by the Census Bureau as 449,446, has shown the largest percentage of growth of any State thus far announced in the fourteenth census. Its rate of growth, 20.4 per cent., was almost as large as that for the decade ending with 1910, but its numerical increase was exceeded in that decade.

In the last ten years its increase was 75,095, the largest in its history, while ten years ago it showed an increase of 66,602. The State now has almost forty times the population it had when organized as a territory in 1850, and its increase in the last ten years is more than six times the population at that time.

Let us os once and for establish the number of millions required to make a campaign fund wicked.

Order of Publication

Bertie Taylor Mitchell vs. Thomas T. Mitchell.

No. 3413 Chancery. In the Circuit Court for Somerset County, Maryland.

The object of this suit is to procure a decree divorcing the plaintiff a vinculo matrimonii from the said defendant.

The bill states that the plaintiff and defendant were married in the town of Salisbury, State of Maryland, on or about the eleventh day of February, nineteen hundred and eleven; that they resided together in said town of Salisbury, and in the town of Crisfield, Maryland, until about the twelfth day of May, nineteen hundred and seventeen; that though the conduct of the plaintiff toward her said husband, the said defendant, has always been kind, affectionate and above reproach, the said defendant has without any just cause or reason abandoned and deserted her and has declared his intention to live with her no longer, and that such abandonment has continued uninterruptedly for at least three years and is deliberate and final and the Separation of the parties beyond any reasonable expectation of reconciliation; that two children have been born to said parties from said marriage, who remained in the custody of the plaintiff for a while after said separation, but are now in the care and custody of the said defendant's mother.

It is thereupon, this 19th day of August, nineteen hundred and twenty, by the Circuit Court for Somerset county, in Equity, ordered that the plaintiff, by causing a copy of this order to be inserted in some newspaper published in said Somerset county, once in each of four successive weeks before the 20th day of September next, giving notice to the said Thomas T. Mitchell, residing in Wicomico county, in said State of Maryland, and for whom two successive subpœnas have been issued and been returned non est, of the object and substance of this bill warning him to be and appear in this Court in person or by solicitor on or before the 9th day of October next, to show cause, if any he has, why a decree ought not to be passed as prayed.

W. E. Waddey Dies At Eastville

Mr. William E. Waddey, perhaps the oldest citizen of Northampton county, Va., died at his home Thursday morning, August 26th, following an illness due in the main to his advanced years, covering several months, his age being something over ninety-three years.

Mr. Waddey was a native of Northampton county and spent the whole of his life in or near Eastville. He leaves one son, William E., Jr., of Princess Anne, and four daughters, Mesdames William Taylor and Annie Mason, of Northampton county; Mrs. Elizabeth Tubbs and Miss Edna Waddey, of Washington, D. C. He also leaves a brother, Mr. Frederick Waddey, of Northampton county. Dr. Ernest Waddey, another son, who practiced his profession in Montana, died three years ago. Mesdames Rebecca Leatherbury and Eliza Custis, two sisters, and the late John Waddey, for many years postmaster of the city of Norfolk, preceded him to the grave by several years.

The funeral was conducted Friday afternoon, August 27th, in Christ Church, Eastville, and the remains interred in the church cemetery.

Cut Wood For Winter Fuel

This is a good season to clean up the woodlot, improve the timberland, and gather the winter wood supply at the same time, say specialists of the United States Department of Agriculture. All dead trees and large limbs should be made up into cordwood first, then the trees that have dead or dying tops. Remove those which are too crowded to make satisfactory growth, keeping in mind always to leave those trees that will make the best salable timber.

Look up at the crowns of the trees in deciding which ones to thin out in a crowded group, and take out the intermediate trees that are being encroached upon by the more dominant ones. Do not make the mistake of over thinning but leave the small trees that have practically no effect on the main stand of the woodlot to develop into timber of the future. Leave the trees as evenly spaced as possible. Cut out all vines from the standing timber and remove varieties that have little value in the woodlot or on the market.

A permanent woodlot is an essential part of a well-equipped farm, and in many cases is the source of the winter fuel supply. In heavily wooded States especially, farmers are likely to overlook this fact and recklessly cut, misuse or clear up their forest areas. For fuel, it is never advisable to use thrifty, immature trees when it is possible to get inferior mature timber.

On account of the high price of coal there will probably be a large amount of wood used as fuel next winter. Use all the waste timber, dead and dying trees for this purpose, and be sure to conserve the ashes for garden fertilizer. They are rich in land food, particularly potash.

Imported Butterfly Is Most Destructve of Many Insects and Other Pests.

IS WELL KNOWN TO FARMERS

Frequently Secretes Itself in Immature Heads Where It Is Difficult to Reach With Insecticides—Sometimes Attacks Heart.

The most destructive of the many insects and other enemies of the cabbage family, is the caterpillar of the imported cabbage butterfly, sometimes called the white butterfly, a familiar object to nearly everyone. This is the imported cabbage worm, and is well known to farmers throughout this country and Europe as well, and the butterfly is generally recognized as the parent of the worms.

Bane of Growers.

This cabbage worm has been rightly termed the bane of the cabbage grower and the dread of every careful cook and housewife. It begins work early in the season; the principal damage is therefore to young plants, and accrues through the necessity of replanting, with attendant increase in cost of production, due to additional labor, cost of stock, and delay in getting the early or better prices in the market. After riddling the outer leaves, which remain afterwards attached to the stalk, the caterpillar attacks the tender inner leaves as they form, frequently secreting itself in the immature heads, where it is difficult to reach it with insecticides, and rendering the cabbage unfit for food because of the abundant dark green excrement which it deposits. As a result, cabbages before being sent to market must be examined carefully and the damaged leaves removed.

Look for Concealed Worms.

Before cooking it is frequently necessary to tear the heads apart to insure that no disgusting worms are concealed within, and even after the vegetable is prepared for the table there is danger of an admixture of animal matter with the vegetable food. In cool weather the caterpillar often feeds freely exposed on the surface of the leaves in the sunshine.

Frequently the caterpillar bores into the center of the cabbage, attacking what is commonly known as the "heart," and then the entire head is worthless for market.

ESTIMATE PLACED ON BEANS

Acreage of 800,000 Expected to Yield 8,250,000 Bushels—Below That of Last Year.

The bean crop of the United States last year was about 12,000,000 bushels. While only about three-fifths as large as the crop grown on the exceptionally large acreage of 1918 and 1917, the 1919 crop was almost equal to the crops of 1914 to 1916, which averaged between 12,000,000 and 13,000,000 bushels. The planting as now indicated—about 800,000 acres—with a yield equal to the average of the last five years would produce a crop of 8,250,000 bushels.

DELICIOUS CHRISTMAS SALAD

Endive is quite hardy and can stand a smart freeze. As winter comes on more covering can be added and the family will be supplied with the most delicious salad until Christmas or later if it is carefully hilled and covered so as to turn the rain. This bleaching process not only insures tenderness, but takes out that bitter taste which is so objectionable to many.

PROPER STORAGE OF ONIONS

Diseases Can Be Controlled by Practice of Sanitary Measures and Right Packing.

In general, storage diseases of onions are to be controlled by the practice of sanitary measures, the sorting out of diseased bulbs at harvest, protection from rain after harvest, thorough curing and storage in a dry, well-ventilated warehouse at 32 to 35 degrees F.

GOOD KIND OF ADVERTISING

Neatly Worded Letterhead Is Favored by Progressive Farmer—Farm Name Important.

A neat well-worded letterhead is a good kind of advertising for the progressive farmer. The name of the farm is the big feature of the well-planned letterhead, the chief product second, and the farmers' name third in importance.

To Destroy Red Ants.

Soak a sponge in sweetened water, wring and place where the ants have easy access to it. They will swarm over it and through it. Drop the sponge in boiling water and repeat the operation until the colony becomes alarmed at the loss of its workers and abandons the premises.

When Collector Is Lucky.

During Siam's intercourse with China for many centuries in the past unknown quantities of the finest china were brought over for the noble and royal households of Siam, and occasionally some of these pieces may be found and bought.

Infringement Resented.

In New Guinea each tribe has its own particular system of tattooing the body, and should a member of any other tribe imitate the pattern, it is regarded as quite a sufficient reason for a declaration of war between the two tribes.

Giving Him His Due.

"Oratory is a gift, not an acquirement," said the proud politician as he sat down after an hour's harangue. "I understand," said the matter of fact chairman, "We're not blamin' you. You did the best you could."

His Idea of Train's Action.

There is a story of a Suffolk (England) yokel who, having lived some distance from a railway station, and being content with the society around him, had never had need of a train, and, being brought into contact with a railway, stood watching this new wonder not far from a tunnel. His description of it afterward was that a train was more or less like a rabbit—"he ran up to the hole, let off an awful screech and bolted into it."

British Locomotive in Museum.

The first locomotive with steel springs was built in England just one hundred years ago, and is still to be seen in the South Kensington museum.

An artist has invented a process for painting stockings in the customary place where they show. In view of prevailing prices for hosiery, the news is interesting at least.

Determining Height of Mountains.

The height of mountains is ascertained by barometric observation, showing the pressure of atmosphere at the lower and higher levels. An instrument called the mountain barometer is graded especially for this purpose. It can also be done with a leveling instrument and theodolite, but either way requires technical knowledge.

Casus Belli.

In an Irish case of a domestic riot involving much injury to person and property, a witness in the course of a vivid narrative swore as follows: "He says to me, 'Is that your father?' And I says to him, 'It is me father.' And he says, 'It is well you told me, for I thought he was an ould gorilly,' and then the fight began, me lord."—From the Argonaut.

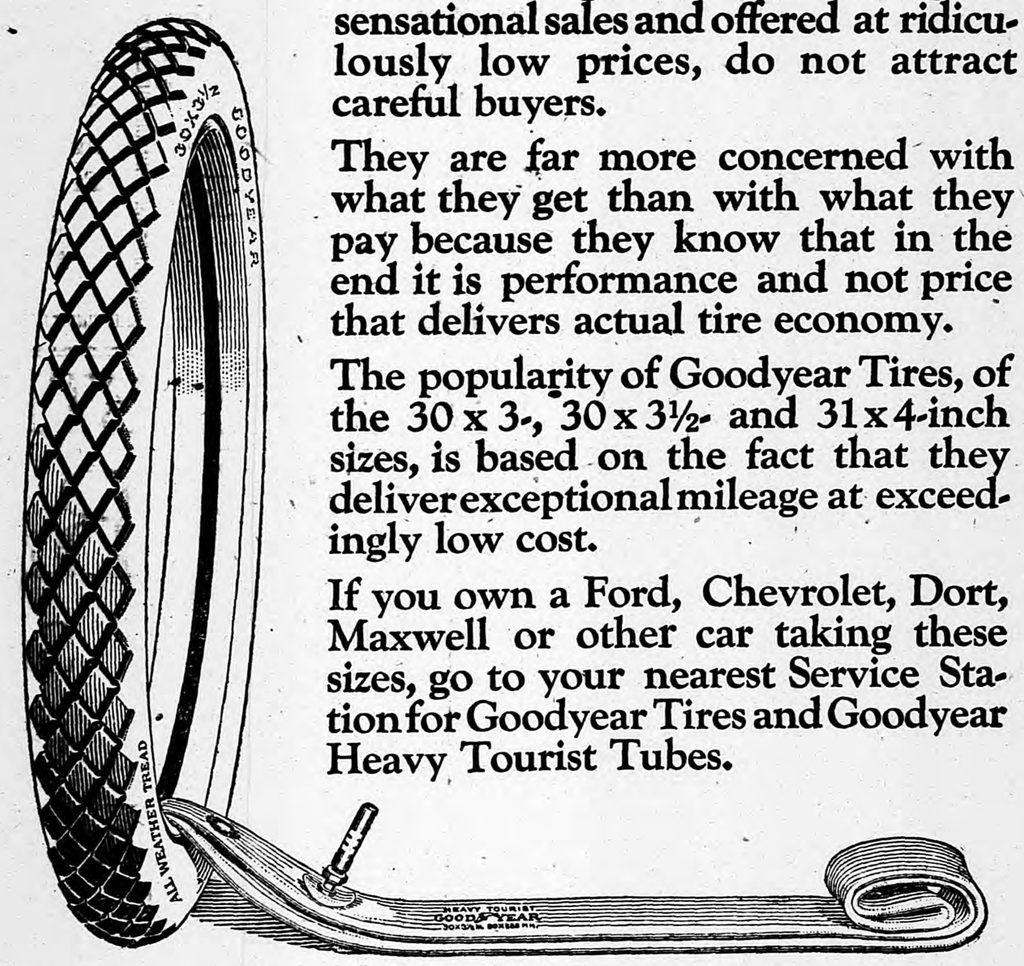
The Economy of Using Goodyear Small Car Tires



So-called bargain tires, made up for sensational sales and offered at ridiculously low prices, do not attract careful buyers.

They are far more concerned with what they get than with what they pay because they know that in the end it is performance and not price that delivers actual tire economy.

The popularity of Goodyear Tires, of the 30 x 3-, 30 x 3½- and 31 x 4-inch sizes, is based on the fact that they deliver exceptional mileage at exceedingly low cost.

If you own a Ford, Chevrolet, Dort, Maxwell or other car taking these sizes, go to your nearest Service Station for Goodyear Tires and Goodyear Heavy Tourist Tubes.

30x3½ Goodyear Single-Cure Fabric, Anti-Skid Tread..... $21.50

Goodyear Heavy Tourist Tubes cost no more than the price you are asked to pay for tubes of less merit—why risk costly casings when such sure protection is available? 30x3½ size in waterproof bag..... $4.50

PROCLAMATION

Proposing Amendments To The Constitution of the State, 1920

Whereas, at the January Session of the General Assembly of Maryland, held in the year 1920, two Acts were passed, to-wit: Chapter 319 proposing an amendment to Section 15 of Article III of the Constitution of the State, title "Legislative Department," regulating the compensation of Members of both Houses of the General Assembly; and Chapter 565 proposing an amendment to Section 37 of Article 4 of the Constitution of the State, title "Judiciary Department," regulating the pay of Clerks of Courts, and which said Chapters 319 and 565 are in the words and figures following:

CHAPTER 319.

AN ACT to propose an amendment to Section 15 of Article III, of the Constitution of the State of Maryland, title "Legislative Department," regulating the compensation of the members of both Houses of the General Assembly of Maryland, and to provide for the submission of said amendment to the qualified voters of the State of Maryland for adoption or rejection.

SECTION 1. Be it enacted by the General Assembly of Maryland, (three-fifths of all the members of each of the two Houses concurring), That the following be and the same is hereby proposed as an amendment to Section 15 of Article III, of the Constitution of the State of Maryland, title "Legislative Department," the same if adopted by the legally qualified voters of the State, as herein provided, to become Section 15 of Article III, of the Constitution of the State of Maryland.

15. The General Assembly may continue its session so long as in its judgment the public interest may require for a period not longer than ninety days; and each member thereof shall receive a compensation of three hundred dollars per annum and five dollars per diem for every day he shall attend the session, but not for such days as he may be absent, unless absent on account of sickness or by leave of the House of which he is a member and he shall also receive such mileage as may be allowed by law, not exceeding twenty cents per mile; and the presiding officer of each House shall receive an additional compensation of five dollars per diem. When the General Assembly shall be convened by proclamation of the Governor, the session shall not continue longer than thirty days, and in such case the compensation shall be the same as herein prescribed.

SECTION 2. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That said aforegoing section hereby proposed as an amendment to the Constitution of the State of Maryland shall, at the next general election for Members of Congress held in this State, be submitted to the legal and qualified voters of the State, for their adoption or rejection, in pursuance of the directions contained in Article XIV of the Constitution of the State of Maryland, and at the said general election the vote on the said proposed amendment to the Constitution shall be by ballot, and upon each ballot there shall be printed the words "For the Constitutional Amendment," and "Against the Constitutional Amendment," as now provided by law, and immediately after said election due returns shall be made to the Governor of the vote for and against said proposed amendment, as directed by said Fourteenth Article of the Constitution, and further proceedings had in accordance with said Article Fourteen.

Approved April 9, 1920.

CHAPTER 565.

AN ACT to amend Section 37 of Article 4, title "Judiciary Department," of the Constitution of this State, and to provide for the submission of said amendment to the qualified voters of the State for adoption or rejection.

SECTION 1. Be it enacted by the General Assembly of Maryland, (three-fifths of all members of each of the two houses concurring), That the following section be, and the same is, hereby proposed as an amendment to Section 37, of Article 4, title "Judiciary Department," of the Constitution of this State, and if adopted by the legal qualified voters thereof, as herein provided, said section shall supersede and stand in the place and in stead of Section 37 of said Article 4 of the Constitution of Maryland.

SEC. 37. There shall be a Clerk of each of the said Courts of Baltimore City, except the Supreme Bench, who shall be elected by the legal and qualified voters of said city at the election to be held in said city on the Tuesday next after the first Monday of November, in the year eighteen hundred and sixty-seven, and shall hold his office for six years from the time of his election, and until his successor is elected and qualified, and be re-eligible thereto, subject to be removed for willful neglect of duty or other misdemeanor in office, on conviction in a Court of Law. The salary of each of the said Clerks shall be forty-five hundred dollars a year, payable only out of the fees and receipts collected by the Clerks of said city, and they shall be entitled to no other perquisites or compensation. In case of a vacancy in the office of Clerk of any of said Courts, the Judges of said Supreme Bench of Baltimore City shall have power to fill such vacancy until the general election of Delegates to the General Assembly to be held next thereafter, when a Clerk of said Court shall be elected to serve for six years thereafter; and the provisions of this Article in relation to the appointment of D[illegible] ties by the Clerks of the Circuit Courts in the c[illegible] ties shall apply to the Clerks of the Courts in Bal[illegible]more City.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted by the Authority aforesaid, That the said foregoing section hereby proposed as an amendment to the Constitution shall, at the next election for members of Congress to be held on the Tuesday next after the first Monday in the month of November, nineteen hundred and twenty (1920), be submitted to the legal and qualified voters thereof for their adoption or rejection, in pursuance of the direction contained in Article 14 of the Constitution of this State; and at the said election the vote on said proposed amendment to the Constitution shall be by ballot, and upon each ballot there shall be written or printed the words "For Constitutional Amendment" and "Against Constitutional Amendment," as now provided by law, and immediately after said election due returns shall be made to the Governor of the vote for and against said proposed amendment, as directed by the said Article 14 of the said Constitution.

Approved April 9, 1920.

Now, therefore, I, Albert C. Ritchie, Governor of the State of Maryland, in pursuance of the direction contained in Section 1 of Article 14 of the Constitution of Maryland do hereby order and direct that this Proclamation containing a full, true and correct copy of the text of said Chapters 319 and 565 of the Acts of the General Assembly of Maryland of 1920, be published in at least two newspapers in each of the counties of the State where so many may be published and, where not more than one may be published then in that newspaper, and in three newspapers published in the City of Baltimore, one of which shall be published in the German language, once a week for at least three months next preceding the general election to be held in the State of Maryland on Tuesday, the 2nd day of November, 1920, at which election the said proposed amendments to the Constitution shall be submitted in form and manner prescribed by the General Assembly, to the legal and qualified voters of the State for their adoption or rejection.

NATIONWIDE FIGHT AGAINST DISEASE

American Red Cross Will Have Health Centers in All Parts of United States.

The American Red Cross has launched upon a nation wide campaign of fighting disease and physical defect among the American people. A new and unique health institution has come into being as the result of several months' study by the Red Cross Health Service Department at National Headquarters.

Officials in charge of the department predict that before long this new health activity will be in actual operation all over the country, and that the sign—"American Red Cross Health Center"—will become as familiar to the people everywhere as are now the signs of the telegraph companies.

Busy Long Before War.

The interest of the American Red Cross in the fight against disease is not, however, of recent origin. Long before the war the organization began this health service through its medical units in disaster relief work and its department of Town and County Nursing. During the war and following the armistice thousands of American Red Cross officials have been fighting disease in the war-stricken countries. At the same time tens of thousands of local Red Cross officials have been engaged at home fighting disease, notably during the influenza epidemics.

The American Red Cross has determined that all this valuable experience in health service abroad and at home shall not go to waste. So long as there are a half a million people dying yearly in this country from preventable causes, and so long as more than one-third of the American children and young people are victims of physical defects, the Red Cross recognizes the urgent need for continued Red Cross health service at home.

How Organization Works.

The Red Cross Health Center is governed by business principles, applies business methods, and, in its more simple form, can be established and conducted by lay people.

It proceeds upon the demonstrated fact that health is a commodity that can be bought and sold like brooms and soap. Therefore, it establishes itself in a storeroom in the principal business section of the community. It displays its goods in the form of attractive health exhibits in its show windows. It advertises constantly and extensively. And it uses every business and social device to attract customers.

The Red Cross Health Center is of service to the sick in that it gives out reliable and complete information about existing clinics, hospitals, sanatoria and other institutions for the sick and the defective; about available nurses, both trained and practical; about when to consult a physician and why to shun the quack and his nostrums.

Teaching Disease Prevention.

The Red Cross Health Center is, however, of even greater service to the well. It teaches people how to prevent sickness and disease. This is done in many interesting and attractive ways—first of all, by the distribution of popular health literature and through health lectures illustrated with lantern slides or with health motion picture films. Then special exhibits are given, one after the other, on various health subjects. Practical demonstrations are made; also health playlets by children to interest and instruct themselves and their elders. Classes are organized in personal hygiene, home care of the sick, first aid and in food selection and preparation. Health clubs, both for younger and older people, are formed; also Little Mothers' Leagues. Nutrition and growth clinics are conducted for children.

Already more than a hundred of these Red Cross Health Centers are in actual operation throughout the country. Many of them also conduct medical clinics, but the one chief, outstanding feature of the American Red Cross Health Center is its health education service which teaches well people how to keep well.

FRENCH PRAISE FOR OUR RED CROSS WORK

Lauding the work accomplished by American philanthropy for war-stricken France, Andre Tardieu, former high commissioner from that nation to the United States, in a recent article widely commented on throughout the French press, says:

"The American Red Cross has accomplished a work which calls for the heartfelt gratitude of every true Frenchman. In 1918 this great relief organization spent in behalf of France nearly 87,000,000 francs, and in 1919 its expenditures on charitable projects in our country attained the tremendous total of 171,000,000. It has recently turned over to the French relief organizations huge stocks of supplies whose value must be counted in the hundreds of thousands of francs.

"Fifteen million American boys and girls, banded together in the Junior Red Cross of America, are back of a movement to establish the closest ties between themselves and France's younger generation through the charitable works they have financed and are now carrying out among our little war sufferers.

"The bonds of friendship between France and America is cemented with mutual admiration, respect and gratitude."

AMERICANS ABROAD IN RED CROSS WORK

United States Citizens Far Away Enthusiastic Members of the "Fourteenth" Division.

Among the most enthusiastic and energetic members of the American Red Cross are those citizens of the United States who live outside the continental boundaries of their country—sons and daughters of the Stars and Stripes residing at the far corners of the earth.

These people compose the Insular and Foreign Division of the parent organization, generally known as the "Fourteenth" Division, which has jurisdiction of all territory outside the country proper; that is, Alaska, Porto Rico, Hawaii, Virgin Islands, the Philippines, Guam, and even the island of Yap, which came under our flag as a result of the world war. For the year 1920 this division reported 30,808 paid up members.

The main object of this division is to give our citizens everywhere the opportunity to participate in the work of the organization which stands for the best national ideals. Americans in far places intensely loyal and patriotic, treasure their membership in the Red Cross as the outward expression of their citizenship. It is another tie to the homeland and to each other. There are chapters of this division in Argentine, Bolivia, Brazil, Canal zone, Chile, China, Costa Rica, Cuba, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, England, France, Guam, Guatemala, Haiti, Hawaii, Honduras, Japan, Manchuria, Netherlands, Nicaragua, Paraguay, Peru, Philippines, Porto Rico, Siberia, Spain, Sweden, Switzerland, Syria, Turkey, Uruguay, Venezuela and Virgin Islands.

During the war these scattered members of the Red Cross contributed millions in money, and millions of dollars' worth of necessary articles for the men in service, and sent many doctors and nurses to France. At the same time they carried on an excellent Home Service in their respective communities for the families of those who had gone to war, and in some regions gave large sums of money and immeasurable personal service to the relief of disaster and disease victims.

The division is now establishing service clubs in foreign ports for the benefit of sailors in the American Merchant Marine, making plans to aid Americans in trouble in foreign lands and completing arrangements for giving immediate adequate relief in case of disaster.

RED CROSS ASSISTS DISABLED VETERANS

The American Red Cross is carrying on a wide program of service for the disabled World War veterans receiving treatment in United States Public Health hospitals, and those being trained through agencies of the Federal Board for Vocational Education.

In each of the Public Health Service hospitals Red Cross workers devote their time to the general welfare of the service men from the day they enter the receiving ward until they are discharged. After the soldier's discharge the Red Cross continues its friendly service through the Home Service Section in his own community.

The Red Cross maintains a convalescent house at all of the hospitals, where patients can amuse themselves after they are well enough to be up and around. Parties and picture shows in the wards are also furnished, with occasional excursions when convalescence comes.

Great service has been rendered by the Red Cross in mental cases in identifying those who have appeared in state hospitals for the insane, and helping them secure compensation due from the Bureau of War Risk Insurance.

In the Federal Board's various district offices the Red Cross worker, acting with the Home Service Section, makes necessary loans to the men, arranges suitable living conditions, helps collect evidence and supply facts to the Board, assists in "appealing cases" and settles various personal difficulties for the men. The workers also follow up and aid all men who discontinue training.

The Red Cross agents find men "lost" to the Board, help clear up delayed cases and aid the college counselors in their friendly work with the men. Many Red Cross chapters have set up recreation facilities, and in some instances living clubs, so these victims of war may have attractive surroundings and the fun which must go with effective school work.

To the American Red Cross Institute for the Blind near Baltimore, Md., more than half of all the Americans blinded in the World War have come for training. The Institute, through the Red Cross, long ago conducted an exhaustive industrial survey to determine the vocations for which blind men could be fitted. As a result it is putting forth well trained men equipped to meet the social, civic and economic requirements of their respective communities.

Aid for Spanish Red Cross.

ACREAGE OF ALFALFA LARGEST OF LEGUMES

Greater Than That of Any Other Plant Cut for Hay.

Significant Fact That More Than One-Half of Tame Hay Area Now Devoted to Nutritive and Soil-Improving Crops.

Alfalfa now has an acreage greater than that of any other legume or grass cut for hay, not growing in combination with another. Of the total tame hay acreage in 1919, alfalfa occupied 21.1 per cent, timothy and clover mixed 18.2 per cent, timothy 15.9 per cent, clover 12.3 per cent, pea 8.7 per cent, grain cut green, 7.7 per cent, and all others 16.1 per cent. If the acreage of the timothy and clover mixture is equally divided between those two plants, the timothy acreage becomes 25 per cent of the total of tame hay acreage, and clover 21.4 per cent, so that timothy is still the leading hay plant and the clovers have second place, a little above alfalfa.

The leguminous plants, alfalfa, clover, one-half of clover and timothy, and pea are 51.2 per cent of the tame hay area, and it is a significant fact that more than one-half of the tame hay acreage is now devoted to plants of the nutritive and soil improving properties of the legumes, whereas, ten years ago, as the census testifies, hardly one-third of the tame hay area was leguminous. This comparison has been established by the bureau of crop estimates.

KILL OUT CANADA THISTLES

Small Patches of Noxious Plant May Be Destroyed by Cutting Them Off During Summer.

Small patches of Canada thistles may be killed by cutting them off with a hoe or spade several times during the summer or by covering the patch with tar paper or building paper and leaving it in place several weeks. To handle larger fields without losing a crop it is necessary to grow some early maturing crop, like clover, winter rye or barley.

As soon as the crop is harvested, plow the land very thoroughly and then for the balance of the season keep the land so well disked and cultivated that the thistles never have a chance to show their leaves above ground. This is the only way in which the roots can be starved out. The cultivation may be continued the following season until about corn planting time, and the land planted to corn or other cultivated crop so that any plants that may have survived can be killed or dug out.

ADVANTAGE OF CATCH CROPS

Too Late for Planting Good Yielding Variety of Corn—Sudan Grass Meets Emergency.

It is now too late to plant a good yielding variety of corn, and resort must be made to such catch crops as Sudan grass, sorghum and millet. Of these three, sorghum will give the greatest yield, but Sudan grass yields a finer quality of hay and can be stored to better advantage in the stack or barn.

EXCELLENT CROPS FOR HOGS

Alfalfa and Clover Are Favored as Valuable Pasture for All Corn-Fed Live Stock.

Alfalfa and clover are both rich in protein, an element likely to be lacking in most of our farm feeds. It is for this reason both are so valuable as pasture for corn-fed animals, especially hogs. Another good hog pasture plant, which is not used nearly so much as it should be, is rape.

KEEP ALL GARDENS WORKING

Do Not Stop at Producing Spring and Summer Vegetables, But Get Supply for Winter.

Real gardeners will not stop at producing a crop of spring and summer vegetables, but will follow up the good work with a fresh supply for fall use. To make the garden more nearly efficient, do not permit good land to stand idle, so that fresh vegetables have to be bought from market the latter part of the season.

A Grateful Letter

It is in trying conditions like that related below by Mrs. Geo. L. North, of Naples, N. Y., that proves the worth of Chamberlain's Colic and Diarrhoea Remedy. "Two years ago last summer" she says "our little boy had dysentery. At that time we were living in the country eight miles from a doctor. Our son was taken ill suddenly and was about the sickest child I ever saw. He was in terrible pain all the time and passed from one convulsion into another. I sent my husband for the doctor and after he was gone thought of a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic and Diarrhoea Remedy in the cupboard. I gave him some of it and he began to improve at once. By the time the doctor arrived he was out of danger."

Annual Municipal Meet This Month

The Municipal Athletic Games Association has issued an announcement that the twenty-first annual handicap meet, under its auspices, will be held this year on September 11th, at Patterson Park, Baltimore, at 2 o'clock p. m. These annual track, field and aquatic events always prove by far the most interesting athletic competitions conducted in this section during the summer months. Athletes possessing the greatest varying degrees of athletic proficiency and expertness look alike with eager anticipation to the staging of the meet. This is due to the fact that, at the discretion of the official handicapper of the South Atlantic Association, the less proficient athlete is given a fair handicap commensurate with the relative ability of all the competitors, so that the competition is usually of the keenest type and especially because it enables the novice to defeat the champion on account of the advantage given him.

The program is very considerately arranged, and includes events for all sizes of boys and also girls. It is variegated to such an extent that the 80-pound youngster has an opportunity to strive for success as well as men and women. In addition to the regular athletic events, races are promoted in swimming, bicycling, as well as two special attractive events.

BACKACHE IS A WARNING

Princess Anne People Should Not Neglect Their Kidneys

Backache is often nature's most frequent signal of weakened kidneys. To cure the pains and aches, to remove the lameness when it arises from weakened kidneys, you must reach the cause—the kidneys. If you have pain through the small of your back, urinary disorders, headaches, dizzy spells, or are nervous and depressed, start treating the kidneys with a tested kidney remedy.

Doan's Kidney Pills have been proved good and are especially for weak kidneys. Doan's have been used in kidney trouble for over 50 years. Read Princess Anne testimony.

Mrs. K. L. Smith, 106 Beckford avenue says: "Some years ago I was in a bad way from severe backahce. My back was very painful, especially when I stooped over and sharp pains caught me when I straightened up. I was very miserable and one day I learned of Doan's Kidney Pills. After using two boxes, I was rid of the trouble. I can say nothing too good for Doan's Kidney Pills."

Wicomico Hospital Will Be Enlarged

After 22 years of service the Peninsula General Hospital of Salisbury, serving a population of 150,000 in Wicomico, Worcester and Somerset counties of this State; also Sussex county (Delaware) and Accomac county (Virginia), is planning to make its first public appeal for $200,000 to build and equip a new wing, increasing its capacity from 55 to 100 beds.

At a meeting in the rooms of the Business Men's Association at Salisbury, attended by leading business and professional men, it was unanimously decided to back the appeal of the Hospital Board for enlarged accommodations and form a citizens' campaign committee to sponsor a campaign to raise the needed funds. Permanent officers were elected as follows: Chairman, Fred P. Adkins; vice-chairman, L. W. Gunby; treasurer, Graham Gunby; secretary, A. M. Walls.

Unpaid Note 4,000 Years Old

An unpaid note for four shekels in silver bearing 40 per cent. interest for nearly 4,000, has been found among the clay tablets at the University of Pennsylvania Museum by Dr. Leon Legrain. The note was given by a man named Bur Mama to Il Sinnutum in October, 1962 B. C., the "year in which King Rim Sin occupied the town of Dur Damigilisha."

There were four witnesses to the note. Instead of signatures the witnesses placed their seals on the document and were not liable for payment unless it was shown they knew the character of Bur Mama was bad when they swore it was good. Dr. Legrain says a shekel of silver at the time the note was made was equal to about $100 at the present time.

NOTICE TO TAXPAYERS

Notice is hereby given that the levy of the year 1920 for State and County Taxes has been made in Somerset county.

Pursuant to said levy the taxes are now in my hands for collection. A discount of three per cent. will be allowed on all county taxes paid on or before October 31st. 1920, and a discount of two per cent. if paid during November, 1920. No discount will be allowed on county taxes paid after November, 30th, 1920.

The law allowing discounts on State taxes has been abolished, therefore no discount will be allowed on State taxes.

The law provides that both County and State taxes must be paid in order to obtain the discount.

ENTRANCE EXAMINATIONS

State Scholarships In Engineering Courses

Entrance Examinations for the Department of Engineering, as well as for the College of Arts and Sciences, will be held in the Civil Engineering Building, Homewood, Monday to Thursday, September 13th to 16th, 1920, beginning at 9 a. m. each day.

Applications for Scholarships in the Department of Engineering, established under the provisions of the Laws of Maryland, Chapter 90, 1912, will now be received. If there is more than one applicant for a particular scholarship, a competitive examination must be taken Friday, September 17th, 1920, beginning at 9 a. m. Appointments will be made soon thereafter.

Each Legislative District of Baltimore City and each county of the State, with the exception of Harford, Talbot and Worcester counties, will be entitled to one or more scholarships for the year 1920–1921, in addition to those which have already been assigned. In the counties mentioned above, all the available scholarships have been awarded.

Under the provisions of the Act of Assembly, the County and City Scholarships in the Department of Engineering are awarded only to deserving students whose financial circumstances are such that they are unable to obtain an education in Engineering unless free tuition be granted to them. The scholarships entitle the holders to free tuition, free use of text-books, and exemption from all regular fees. One of the scholarships in each county and in each Legislative District of the city carries also the sum of $200.

Scholarships may be awarded to graduates of Loyola College, St. John's College, Washington College, Western Maryland College, Maryland Agricultural College, Mt. St. Mary's College, Rock Hill College.

Two scholarships may be awarded "At Large".

Applicants should address The Registrar, The Johns Hopkins University, for blank forms of application and for catalogues giving information as to examinations, award of scholarships, and courses of instruction. The next session begins Tuesday, September 28th, 1920. 8-17

Are Your Children Prepared?

Mothers and Fathers know how hard Children are on Shoes, and yet, very often, the child is blamed for wearing out the Shoes too quickly when the Shoes themselves are really too poor to stand the wear an active child will give them.

You would not spend your money for some shoes if you could cut them open and see what is inside of them. A solid leather shoe, if properly made, wears longer, holds its shape longer and, in every way, is a better shoe than one in which substitutes for leather are used. Do not buy shoes without having an opportunity to see the shoes themselves, and then study their quality and construction.

You will need more School Shoes very soon. Come in and examine our FULL LINE OF CHILDREN'S SHOES.

Three 40 Acre Farms

Friday, September 10th, 1920

BEGINNING AT 4 O'CLOCK P. M., ON THE PREMISES

This farm contains 121 acres; it is situated on the stone road leading from Salisbury to Quantico, is within sight of the city and is just opposite the "Homestead Dairy Farms" owned by Senator William P. Jackson.

We have divided this farm into three 40 acre farms, one of which is improved by a large 10 room modern home with bath, cellar, electric lights, three large barns with running water and a number of other out-buildings, there is also a large orchard of all kinds of fruit in bearing.

Another of these 40 acre farms is improved by a good 7-room house, cellar, electric lights, barns, etc., also timber. Then there is a 40-acre farm without buildings, 4 acres of which are in Asparagus.

These are really suburban properties and have all the city advantages. The land is in a high state of cultivation and the location is ideal. This land is especially adapted to the growing of white potatoes, sweet potatces, tomatoes, corn, etc.

We invite you to inspect these properties. Call on us to show them to you. You can also see plat of same by calling at the office of S. P. WOODCOCK & CO., Salisbury, Maryland.

Remember the Date, Time and Place—

It Sounds Different At Different Times

When the jolly good sport is in the thick of it, spending his money right and left, and having what he thinks is the time of his life—thrift advice is pretty sure to sound feeble to him.

But when the din has died down, and the dollars that are left look lonely, and he begins to look a little down on his luck himself—that wisdom-of-saving talk sounds very sensible and sane.

It is sensible and sane—it pays! Our patrons will back us up in this statement.

PRINCESS ANNE CHAUTAUQUA

Program For September 23rd To September 25th

On Thursday, Friday and Saturday, September 23rd, 24th and 25th, the Swarthmore Chautauqua Association will again visit Princess Anne and will present a program each afternoon and night which promises to be the best ever seen at the Auditorium. The program follows:

Thursday afternoon—Series Lecture, Chautauqua Superintendent; Concert, Ballantine Operatic Quintet. Evening—Concert, Ballantine Operatic Quintet; Lecture, "The Magic Circle," Walfred Lindstrom.

Friday afternoon — Lecture, "India Today," Bhaskr Pandurang Hivale; Concert, The McGraths. Evening—Concert, The McGraths; Lecture, "Revolutionary Europe," Dr. Frank Bohn.

Saturday afternoon—Series Lecture, Chautauqua Superintendent; Junior Chautauqua Stunt Party, by Junior Chautauquans. Evening—Comedy Drama, "It Pays to Advertise," Chautauqua Players.

Notice To Somerset Women

On Wednesday evening, September 22nd, a meeting will be held in the Auditorium to discuss the issue of registration with the women. As it is necessary that all the women of Somerset county should register and vote this year it is hoped that the meeting will be largely attended. The meeting will be held at 8 o'clock, when an address will be delivered by the Hon. W. Mason Shehan. It is expected that Senator John Walter Smith will also be present.

Mr. Spiva Now Home From Hospital

Having recovered from the injuries which he received in an automobile accident in Queen Anne county on August 2nd, Mr. William B. Spiva, cashier of the Bank of Somerset, returned to his home in Princess Anne last Saturday afternoon, accompanied by Mr. Charles C. Gelder, from Baltimore.

Mr. Spiva has been a patient at the Johns Hopkins Hospital and his physician and nurse report that he is on the way to complete recovery. His physician stated that he should spend a month or more in the open air and in physical exercise before he takes up his active duties as cashier in the bank.

Brittingham—Stanford Wedding

Miss Marian Waller Stanford and Lieutenant James Francis Brittingham, of the Twelfth Field Artillery, Camp Travis, San Antonio, Texas, were married last Thursday night at the bride's home, 221 West Lanvale street, Baltimore. Miss Stanford is the daughter of Mrs. Marian Waller Stanford and the late Henry L. D. Stanford, Associate Judge of the First Judicial Circuit of Maryland. Lieutenant Brittingham is the son of Mrs. Mamie L. Brittingham and the late Henry L. Brittingham, of Princess Anne.

The bride was given in marriage by her uncle, Mr. William J. Waller. The ceremony was performed by Rev. William G. Venable, of Mt. Calvary Protestant Episcopal Church. The maid of honor was Miss Eleanor Moore Stanford, a sister of the bride, and Mr. H. Lawrence Brittingham, a brother of the groom, was the best man. The matrons of honor were Mrs. Harrison Schuyler Royce, of Boston, and Mrs. H. Lawrence Brittingham, of Washington, D. C. The bridesmaids were Misses Martha Waller Stanford, the bride's sister, and Shirley Dashiell, of Cambridge, Md. The ushers were Messrs. Stewart Fitzgerald, Henry L. D. Stanford, brother of the bride; John Perry and Thomas S. Winder. The ribbon bearers were Miss Virginia Bowland and Miss Mary E. Wilson.

Among those who attended the wedding from Princess Anne were: Mrs. H. L. Brittingham, Mrs. L. James Wilson and daughter, Miss Mary E. Wilson, Collector of Internal Revenue Joshua W. Miles, and Mrs. Miles, Mrs. S. Frank Dashiell, Miss Mildred Beauchamp, Dr. Charles T. Fisher and Mr. Stewart Fitzgerald.

Mr. and Mrs. F. Stanley Porter, who have been on their wedding trip, spent the week-end at the home of the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Twilley C. Porter, near Loretto. Mr. Porter and Miss Agnes Christina James were married on September 4th, at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Alonzo James, at Irvington, Va. The newlyweds will reside in Baltimore.

Carnival Now In Princess Anne

Cook's Victory Shows, America's most popular out-door bazaar, started yesterday (Monday) for the entire week. For years Mr. Robert B. Cook has been playing all around us and never had the open time to play in Princess Anne. His advance agent, Geo. A. Newell, secured a most ideal place to locate the shows. He made arrangements to place it on the property located on Beechwood street and Irving avenue. He had a gang of men working on it, cleaning away the burned buildings so that everything was in readiness for Monday night's grand opening. Through the courtesy of Mr. Columbus Lankford, Miss Virgie Hayman, Mr. John F. Miles and Miss McAllen, the property owners, the out-door bazaar is made possible for Princess Anne's amusement-loving public.

The Cook shows has one of the grandest merry-go-rounds, Eli ferris wheel and Venetian swings. They carry nothing but the cleanest and most moral shows. A wonderful collection of curiosities in the animal line. They pay special attention to the ladies and children and their great aim is to have them pleased. This show has just left Delmar and will go from here to Crisfield. Both towns have had the pleasure of seeing Mr. Cook every year. Don't fail to see this wonderful land of clean moral amusements. Featuring their Georgia Minstrel troup with old time melodies, and Professor O'Hea's Athletic show. This town will be entertained all week with one of the best companies in this line. Mayor Thorington, of Delmar, speaks in the highest terms of this company.

Manokin Church Charter Amended

The Old Manokin Church, Princess Anne, Maryland, with a history reaching back at least to 1672, continues to prosper under the leadership of Rev. William L. Freund. The old charter of the church adopted in 1830, was recently amended, and the corporate name of the church changed from "The Committee of the Presbyterian Church at Manokin, in Somerset County," to "The Committee of the Manokin Presbyterian Church, at Princess Anne, Maryland." The incorporators in 1830 were Samuel Kerr, William Stewart Robert Patterson, George Handy, Henry P. C. Wilson, William W. Handy and John C. Wilson. They were all prominent men of their day. The successor named in the amended charter of 1920 are Wilmer O. Lankford, Joshua W. Miles, Z. James Dougherty, Charles W. Wainwright, E. Herrman Cohn, Columbus Lankford, Robert F. Maddox, Earle B. Polk and H. Fillmore Lankford. The church has a membership of nearly two hundred. Mr. E. Herrman Cohn was recently elected an elder, making the number five. His father, Rudolph S. Cohn, was the superintendent of the school and the leading elder at the time of his death in 1909. The old church, the present building of which was erected in 1765, is beautifully located in its attractive cemetery, on the famous Maryland State road, on the northern outskirts of Princess Anne, and occupies the site of one or more preceding church buildings. It is a matter of record that a church standing on this spot in 1747 was at that time old enough to be greatly in need of repairs.

JURORS FOR SEPTEMBER COURT

Oysters Abundant This Year

In a report last Thursday to the Conservation Commission on the condition of oyster bars in the Potomac river, R. V. Truitt of the Federal Bureau of Fisheries, who has been investigating the shell-fish situation of the Chesapeake bay and its tributaries, says:

"The examination extended from the mouth of the river to the seed area in the upper river district. From the viewpoint of condition of cultch and nature of bottoms on which the cultch rests, the Potomac river and its tributaries exceed all of Maryland's oyster territory. A stiff sand and mud bottom underlies the beds for the most part and upon this the cultch is bright, clean and hard, and consists of shells sufficiently fresh to offer fair conditions for spatting. While oysters are in fine condition for the season, and one of the best years is predicted, the size and quality of the oysters being particularly good this year.

"With the exception of Cobb's bar and one or two other lesser areas, the stock is clean and free of mussels. The tonging areas will realize normal production. The oysters taken ran on an average better than 85 per cent. merchantable. Spat appeared in sufficient number to assure a continued production in this valuable area for at least two more years, young oysters being more abundant at Ragged Point and Blackwell's Island, but in the tributaries this year's catch fell below that of last year.

"Among the places inspected were Blackwell's Island rock, Heron Island rock, Cobb's bar, Huggin's bar, Ragged Point, St. Mary's river and Smith's creek."

Fire Menace Proclamation

President Wilson, in a proclamation last Tuesday, urged state governors to set apart Saturday, October 9, as Fire Prevention Day, and to request a general observance by the public.

The need for bringing "before the people the serious and unhappy effects of the present unnecessary fire waste and the need of their individual and collective effort in conserving the natural and created resources of America," was said by the President, in his proclamation, to be especially urgent, for the following reasons:

"The destruction by fire in the United States involves an annual loss of life of 15,000 men, women and children and over $250,000,000 in buildings, food stuffs and other created resources.

"The need of the civilized world for American products to replace the ravages of the great war is especially great at this time.

"The present serious shortage of homes and business structures makes the daily destruction of buildings by fire an especially serious matter.

"A large percentage of the fires causing the annual American fire waste may be easily prevented by increased care and vigilance on the part of citizens."

The forty-fifth annual convention of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Maryland is called for September 28th, 29th and 30th in the Presbyterian Church, Ocean City. This will be a seaside convention and every local union should be represented if possible.

CALL FOR EXTRA SESSION

Governor Sets 8.30 P. M., Sept. 20th For Legislators To Meet

Governor Ritchie Wednesday issued a formal proclamation calling the legislature into extra session on September 20th. The call is limited to the enactment of such legislation as will provide ample time in which women may register and cast their ballots on election day.

By inference bills covering other subjects need not be introduced and passed as they will be doomed to veto. The Governor is daily in receipt of assurances from members of the Senate and House that they will not introduce such bills. The Governor's proclamation follows:

Whereas, The Secretary of State of the United States, on the twenty-sixth day of August, in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and twenty, proclaimed the adoption of the Nineteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States; and,

Whereas, By virtue of the adoption of said Nineteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States, the women of the several states are granted rights of suffrage equal to those enjoyed by men, and,

Whereas, It is manifest that the existing registration and election laws of Maryland do not provide adequate facilities for the registration and voting of the female population of the State, particularly in view of the limited number of registration days fixed by law for the months of September and October, in the year 1920, and of the election to be held in the month of November; and for the aforegoing reasons an occasion exists which requires a special or extraordinary session of the General Assembly of Maryland.

Now, Therefore, I, Albert C. Ritchie, Governor of Maryland, by virtue of the authority conferred and duly imposed upon me by the Constitution, do hereby call a special or extraordinary session of the General Assembly of Maryland to consider and act upon measures necessary to afford the female population of the state opportunity to register and vote in all elections held hereafter under the laws of the state, said session to begin at eight-thirty o'clock p. m., on the twentieth day of September, in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and twenty, in the City of Annapolis.

It is understood that President William I. Norris, of the Senate, and Speaker Millard F. Tydings, of the House, will be continued in their offices without the formality of election. There is some question among lawyers as to whether the presiding officers in regular sessions hold over in extra sessions, but no disposition to raise an issue is apparent.

Large Corn Crop Predicted

Corn prospects improved during August and promised on September 1st a crop of 3,131,000,000 bushels, the Department of Agriculture announced last Wednesday. This was 18,000,000 more than indicated on August 1, 6,000,000 bushels above the largest previous crop of record in 1912, more than 200,000,000 above last year and almost 400,000,000 above the five-year average.

The indicated yield per acre of 30.2 bushels has been exceeded but twice and then only by a fraction of a bushel during the last 55 years.

Forecasts of production this year for the country's principal crops, estimated at their condition September 1, or at the time of harvest, were announced as follows:

Spring wheat, 237,000,000 bushels, with condition 64.1 per cent. of normal.

All wheat, 770,000,000 bushels; condition 74.1 per cent.

Corn, 3,131,000,000 bushels; condition 86.4 per cent.

Oats, 1,442,000,000 bushels; condition 88.3 per cent.

Barley, 195,000,000 bushels; condition 82.5 per cent.

Buckwheat, 15,500,000 bushels; condition 91.1 per cent.

White potatoes, 413,000,000 bushels; condition 84.3 per cent.

Sweet potatoes, 102,000,000 bushels; condition 86.8 per cent.

Tobacco, 1,554,000,000 pounds; condition 84.6 per cent.

Apples, 223,000,000 bushels.

Peaches, 44,900,000 bushels.

Augustus Ritzel Dead

Mr. Augustus Ritzel died at his home in Westover last Friday afternoon, aged 75 years. Mr. Ritzel had been in ill health for over three years. He was well known throughout Somerset county, having been engaged in the lumber business at Westoyer for a number of years.

He is survived by his widow and two sons, Messrs. Augustus, Jr., and Edward Ritzel, and three daughters, Mrs. Nolan Ross, Misses Mary and Annie Ritzel, all of this county. Funeral services were held yesterday (Monday) afternoon from his late home. Interment was in the Catholic cemetery at Westover.

The dates for the Chautauqua to be held in Princess Anne are September 23rd, 24th and 25th. Secure your season ticket now.

CHINCOTEAGUE (VA.) HAS BIG FIRE

Business Section Wiped Out—17 Buildings Destroyed Loss $85,000

With half of its business section and three of its most important buildings destroyed by fire, which started early Monday morning, September 6th, and burned 17 structures before it could be gotten under control, the town of Chincoteague, Va., presents a desolate scene. It is the first fire the town has had since it was incorporated, approximately 50 years ago.

The entire block on the south side of Main street, from Church street to the site of the Atlantic Hotel, which is practically all of the business section on that side of the street, is in ruins.

The rapid spread of the blaze and the extent of the burned area are due to machinery trouble in the town's only fire engine. This engine was purchased about 10 years ago and never had been used to fight a fire. It was kept in condition during the first few years after it was bought, when volunteer firemen took it out and pumped water over high objects as a spectacle.

When the blaze was discovered shortly after 1 o'clock Monday morning in the ice-cream parlor of B. W. Bodley, an alarm was sounded and the fire engine was manned and brought to the place. The pumps refused to work, and it was an hour and a half before repairs could be made. In that time the blaze had spread over the entire block. The homes of William C. Bunting, J. T. Mears and Mrs. Charles Burton, among the best in the town, were burned to the ground.

When it was seen there was no means of combatting the blaze, residents of Chincoteague and men from the United States Coast Guard stations at Assateague and Wallots Island, who responded when they saw the flames, began carrying furniture and valuables from the houses threatened and money and mail from the postoffice.

The postoffice was on the first floor of the old Island Hotel, which had been converted into a modern apartment house. This building was destroyed and seven families occupying apartments were made homeless.

The most costly building to fall prey to the flames was the Marine Bank building, which was just being completed and had not yet been occupied. This was a brick structure and was so nearly destroyed that men pulled down the walls and chimneys.

After the fire engine was put in working order it supplied enough water to get the fire under control and keep it from spreading.

The damage is estimated at $85,000. The Atlantic Hotel, one of the landmarks of the town, was about the last of the large buildings to be wrecked before the fire was got under control.

Investigation into the cause of the fire led to an alleged confession Thursday afternoon of E. T. Etmanpheries that he had been hired by L. N. Baughty, proprietor of the confectionery store in which the fire started, to set fire to the building. Etmanpheries said that he was paid $10 for the deed. Baughty is said to have been anxious to go out of business and could not find a purchaser. The building and stock are also said to have been heavily insured. Both he and Etmanpheries were held under $10,000 bail for court.

Rules In Women's Favor

The declaration of intent act of 1902 does not apply to women voters. Attorney General Armstrong rules in a formal opinion to Governor Ritchie. The affidavit of removal act is also inapplicable to women, the opinion states.

In his opinion the Attorney General first considers the affidavit of removal act; then the declaration of intent law. His conclusions are as follows:

(1). With reference to the affidavit of removal act:

(a) That any woman coming into the State prior to August 26, 1920 (the date of the proclaiming of the Nineteenth Amendment) and satisfying the Constitutional requirement of one year's residence herein, is entitled to be registered at this or any subsequent registration without reference to the continuity of said residence, subject to the next succeeding conclusion.

(b) That all women of the age of 21 years or over, leaving the State on or after August 26, 1920, and taking up a fixed abode without the State, must make the affidavit of removal and otherwise comply with the provisions of that act in order to retain the privilege of voting in Maryland.

(2). With reference to the declaration of intention law:

(a) That no woman coming into the State after March 29, 1902, and prior to August 26, 1920, is required to make a declaration of intention for the purpose of registration either this year or any year hereafter, provided her residence in the State, now established, continues unbroken.

(b) That all women of the age of 21 years or over coming into Maryland on and after August 26, 1920, must comply with the provisions of the law as fully as men are now required to observe the same.

TO MODIFY THE VOLSTEAD ACT

An Organization With A Mission In View Organized

Keen and determined to modify the Volstead act in the near future, to repeal it later and then to eradicate the prohibition amendment from the Federal Constitution is the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment, which has established a firm foothold in Maryland, which has nation-wide ramifications and which will take an important and influential part in the political candidates. Realizing that the President is powerless to give relief, the activities of the association will be directed toward candidates for the Senate and House of Representatives, who alone, as the Supreme Court, has the power to amend or wipe the Volstead law off the statute books.

The association had its birth in Baltimore and has been extended to other states largely through the efforts of Capt. W. H. Stayton, president of the Baltimore Steamship Company.

The first act of the association, which established headquarters in the Munsey Building, Washington, D. C., was to place boxes in many cities in the East which contained cards. These cards contained on one side the information that the "Volstead law can be repealed; the Supreme Court says we may keep it or repeal it, just as the voters prefer."

"The Volstead law can be repealed," says the circular, "if those opposed to it will join our association and merely let themselves be counted so that congressmen may know how many of us there are."

The association also took up the "chain" system to increase its membership. This is not of a character to conflict with the regulations of the Postoffice Department, for it is only requested of members that they send to either the state or national headquarters the names of "prospects." These prospects are in turn sent circulars telling of the work of the association and by this "chain" process the organization grows monthly by the tens of thousands.

The association, which is non-partisan, intends to oppose the dry candidates and prevent them getting nominations from any political party. In the course of a few, years if the plan pans out, there will be in Congress only those lawmakers who will be in sympathy with the aim for which the association is working, as follows:

1. To repeal the Volstead act.
2. To permit every state (under the concurrent clause) to pass its own enforcement act.
3. To remove prohibition amendment from the Constitution.

"The prohibition laws are unpopular with a great majority of the voters," one of the circulars reads. "Most of us never had a chance to express our preferences. Prohibitionists frequently nominated candidates, but they never got an important percentage of votes."

The amendment was adopted largely by legislators pledged to vote as they did because in their districts prohibitionists held the balance of power. A similar balance of power in our hands will repeal it. We believe that when the voters now opposed to the Volstead act are organized for action and united for a single program they will have sufficient strength to repeal it and will work for the following objects:

(a) To get the Volstead act out of the law and keep it out.

(b) To oppose the passage of similar tyrannical laws, and to endeavor to have the enforcement of the Eighteenth Amendment (so long as it remains in force) left to the people of the several states under the "concurrent" clause.

(c) To work patiently, lawfully, fairly and patriotically for the repeal of the prohibition amendment and in the hope that the Constitution of the United States will hereafter be preserved from mutilation by an organized fanatical minority.

To offset the charge that the association is backed by the whisky or brewery interests, no brewers, distillers or those who made a living from the liquor trade can ever have a voting interest in the association. There are to be no paid officers; no expenditure of funds for lobbying and the only money spent will be for keeping records and enrolling new members and other necessary office expenses.

Two Men Killed In Saw Mill

By the explosion of a boiler at the saw mill of M. C. Hitchens, located about two miles from Parksley, Va., Monday of last week, two men were killed and one so seriously scalded that his death is expected. The dead are: Capt. James Lewis, 70 years old, married; James Phillips, 45, married; Dorsey Lewis, son of Capt. James Lewis, 24, fatally scalded about the face and body. He was removed to the Salisbury Hospital. Two colored employes received minor bruises by being struck by the flying parts of the building. The accident is said to have been caused by low water in the boiler. The feet of two mules doing work about the mill were blown from their body.

A Bissextile Boomerang.

By DORA MOLLAN

(©, 1920, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

The setting for this little comedy of love must be accredited to no lesser artist than Dame Nature herself. She alone was responsible for the maple tree, the fringe of alders growing along the brookside, the orchestral accompaniment of water slipping over the stones.

To be sure, a man acting all unknowingly the role of stage carpenter had knocked together the rustic bench which stood under the tree; but the materials were of her design and coloring. It was she who supplied the blue of the June sky, the tender green of the foliage and the neutral tints of tree trunk and shaded waters.

Into this setting came tripping a dainty maiden, fair as is the wont of leading ladies. She seated herself on the bench, spread out her skirts of yellow organdie, and opening a sweetgrass basket, took therefrom a tiny silver shuttle and a ball of thread.

After a moment spent in appreciative enjoyment of her surroundings the shapely head with its crown of dusky braids bent over the little shuttle as it busily thrust its nose in and out of the thread, forming intricate loops and knots under the guidance of tapering fingers.

"Oh, Miss Nannie! Telephone!"

The busy fingers stopped short in their task and the sweetgrass basket found itself in sole possession of the bench as the girl hurried up a path in the direction of the voice.

Five minutes later she returned, but the work lay neglected and the black eyes were bent thoughtfully upon the brown water, ever slipping over the stones. Then, from the direction whence had come the voice, sounded a cheery whistle. Hastily the shuttle started again on its bobbing way.

It was a youth whose footsteps followed close upon the whistle—a slender youth with sandy hair, who blushed like a schoolboy as he acknowledged the girl's greeting.

"I say, Nan, it's a great day! You—you look great in that dress, too. And it's gr—bully to find you alone."

"For a recent graduate of a celebrated university, Ned, your vocabulary seems woefully lacking in adjectives this afternoon." There was a hint of amusement in the girl's voice, but her eyes, downcast upon her work, were seriously grave.

"You know I'm always tongue-tied when I try to talk seriously with you. Cousin Nell is coming on the 4:10 and I promised mother to meet her. That only gives me half an hour. And I've got something I want to—to ask you."

"I'm listening, Ned." During the somewhat prolonged pause that followed the girl did not lift her eyes from the shuttle. The young man gazed at the girl, at the brook, at the alders, up at the maple tree, then back to the girl. What his lips said plainly was not at all what his brain had commanded them to say.

"I'm going to miss you like everything, Nan, when I go away."

"It's nice to be missed, Ned," Nan answered demurely.

Ned Barton looked nervously at his watch. "Only twenty minutes more! Bother Cousin Nell! I say, Nan, St. Louis is so far away, very likely I won't get up to see you more than once all winter. Dad expects me to stick there and make good, you know."

Moments passed. The girl did not reply, but apparently listened with serenity to the joyous thrill of a song sparrow that filled in the pause.

"I don't suppose that will bother you, though!" It was the pouting bitterness of self-deprecating boyhood that spoke.

The shuttle came to an abrupt stop. Nan Stacey, her eyes on the brown waters slipping by, spoke in her usual soft tone, though in her own ears her voice rang louder than the clashing of cymbals!

"Perhaps you would be happier in St. Louis, Bob, if I were there with you—as your wife."

Barton gazed at the girl for a moment in incredulous bewilderment. Then he laid his hands gently on her shoulders, turning her to him so that he could read the wonderful truth that was in her eyes: "Do— can you mean that, Nan!" And all the joyous trill of the song sparrow, the laughing of the waters, and the gentle sighing of the maple leaves were in his voice.

Half an hour elapses between the first and second acts of this little comedy.

Nan Stacey sat on the same bench, but the shuttle was idle in her lap. Her soft black eyes were again bent on the brown waters still slipping by. Her heart echoed the song of the little brown bird overhead. A whistle sounded from the direction of the path, followed by a laughing voice.

"Hello, Nan! Just saw Ned disappearing down the highway in a cloud of dust. Looked as if he were pursued by the wrath of God—or a motor cop. Don't tell me you let him put it over, after my tipping you off." Hal Carter flung himself down on the bench, rather too close to the girl.

Nan's shuttle was flying again, very diligently. "No," she answered, "Ned didn't 'put it over,' Hal. Ned hasn't your self-assurance, you know."

If there was any subtle intent in the remark it was lost upon the man. There was a hint of the bully in Hal Carter. His shoulders were too massive, his forehead just a trifle too broad for its height. "Oh, I counted on that," he laughed, "when I bet him the fifty he hadn't the nerve to propose to you this afternoon. But those shy men are stubborn, sometimes. You're a clever girl to have held him off, all the same, Nan."

"Do you think so?" murmured Nan.

"Sure do!" Hal Carter fervently indorsed his own words. "Some game was put up between us this afternoon, Nannie! I win the fifty—you get that antique silver tea pot you've wanted so much. Shall I have it marked with a 'C' or do you prefer your maiden initial?" The question was asked insinuatingly, and Carter's arm slid proprietarily around the girl's shoulder.

With an elusive change of position that left the arm resting upon space Nan set upright and looked straight at the very confident young man. "Thank you, Hal," she said, "I'll have it marked with a 'B,' please."

"'B,' Nan! Where's the joke?" Hal's heavy brow puckered in perplexity.

"On you, Hal. You forgot about it's being leap year. 'B' stands for Barton—and for boomerang."

The song sparrow up in the maple gurgled, the maple leaves rustled; for it was the kind of joke to laugh at.

HUN RAIDERS NEATLY TRICKED

Quick Wit of Chinese Cook Responsible for the Destruction of the Cruiser Emden.

Some time ago a mercantile marine officer, who during the war was on naval service, related to me the following interesting episode in regard to the capture of the Emden:

The famous German raider landed a company of men on the Cocos island in the early hours of the morning when most of the men in the wireless station were asleep. The detachment of Germans were under orders to put the wireless apparatus out of action. Near the beach they came across a Chinese—one of the cooks at the station mess. Him they seized hold of and commanded to lead them to the telegraph office. Unfortunately for the emissaries of the fatherland the cook kept his wits about him, and, unknown to his captors, managed to signal to one of his fellow countrymen, who was also a station servant and who happened to be near, that he was to convey the news of the landing with all speed to his masters.

This man slipped away post haste to the operator's quarters, and in the meantime the cook led his guards by a round-about way through the bush to their destination.

Apprised by the Chinese who had come direct as to what was happening, the operators were able to send out a wireless that the Emden was in the offing, so that by the time the Germans had arrived on the scene the Sydney had picked up the message and was making at full speed toward the enemy.

The Germans, not knowing that their presence had already been betrayed arrived at the instrument-room and soon demolished its contents, no doubt feeling they had done a good morning's work. Alas! their calculations were all upset through the presence of mind of a humble Chinese cook. The latter, I believe, was not forgotten by the British authorities, for I have reason to think he now lives a gentleman of ease and leisure in his native town. —Wuchang.

IDEAL CITY OF THE FUTURE

Will Be Attained When Every Citizen Realizes the Importance of His Part of the Work.

A city sanitary, convenient, substantial; where the houses of the rich and poor are alike comfortable; where the streets are clean and the skyline is clear as the country air; where the architectural excellence of its buildings adds beauty and dignity to its streets; where parks and playgrounds are within the reach of every child; where living is pleasant, toil honorable and recreation plentiful; where capital is respected but not worshiped; where commerce in goods is great, but not greater than the interchange of ideas; where industry thrives and brings prosperity alike to the employer and employed; where education and art have a place in every home; where worth and not wealth gives standing to men; where the power of character leads men to leadership, where interest in public affairs is a test of citizenship and devotion to the public weal is a badge of honor; where government is always honest and efficient, and the principles of democracy find their fullest and truest expression; where the people of all the earth can come and be blended into one community life, and where each generation will vie with the past to transmit to the next a city greater, better and more beautiful than the last.—The Nation's Business.

NO EXCUSE FOR UGLINESS

Man Who Today Builds an Unattractive or Commonplace House Is Behind the Times.

There is no excuse in these days for building an ugly or commonplace house. A generation ago not many capable architects were available, especially in the western country. Even when they were, the prevailing taste ran to frills of turrets and jig-saw work. The beauty of simplicity was not known, and the architect who stood out for it often found his client obdurate.

All that has changed. A comparison of the bulk of the houses built in the eighties and nineties with those of more recent years will reveal how far the country has come. The number of competent architects has increased, and of even greater importance, the stock of sound architectural ideas has become widely diffused.

Books and magazine articles on the subject have multiplied amazingly. The prospective builder ought, of course, to avail himself of the services of a good architect. But even if he fails to do this he can find in the public library excellent designs to meet his needs.

City Planning Public's Business.

Real city planning is neither a private enterprise nor a move for "the city beautiful." It is primarily a business enterprise and its benefits accrue to the public at large. A planning commission, with the aid both of planning experts and the city government, cannot hope to succeed in its work without the aid of the public.

The fact that planning must be made popular was emphasized at an important session of the realtors' convention. Whatever method is adopted, a planning commission, after first carefully preparing its plans must "sell" its ideas and aims to the people. Through constant publicity the public must be educated to see the needs and the benefits of a businesslike ordering of the city's development, and must be made to share the labor involved and to contribute to the cost.—Exchange.

Stagger Imagination.

Suggestions of distances more and more inconceivable are a feature of recent astronomical investigation. In studying the parallax of a sixth magnitude star, Dr. Robert Trumpler has found a tenth magnitude star more than eight minutes of arc from it that has the same large proper motion and the same parallax, and he concludes that the two stars must undoubtedly be connected. They are separated by not less than 13,200 times the distance of the earth from the sun. Revolving in a circular orbit around a common center, they must require hundreds of thousands of years to complete a single revolution, and yet they are so remote from the multitude of other star systems that there is no interference with their companionship.

"Ball" Lightning.

Occasionally readers report having seen or heard of a thunderbolt falling in some place, or an account appears of the damage done by a thunderbolt. Very often this can be accounted for by certain forms of lightning, particularly that known as "ball" lightning. The "ball" is probably an isolated sphere of ozone gas containing a considerable amount of energy stored in it by the action of electricity during a thunder storm, which falls earthwards as a luminous ball after a severe flash of lightning, and explodes with extreme violence on nearing the earth. The energy thus liberated is capable of causing all the damage attributed to "thunderbolts."

TO BOARD OR NOT

By JESSIE A. PARSONS.

(©, 1920, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

"That proves what I have always said," interrupted Mrs. Doane, "that two generations ought not to live together. If Molly thinks her mother interferes with the children, how much worse it would be if it were Tom's mother who was living with them."

This unfortunate comment kindled an idea in the irresponsible head of pretty Mrs. Benton, who tactlessly gave it expression.

"How is Victor's mother, dear? It didn't seem to me she was looking very well the last time I went to see her."

"She couldn't have anyone better to do for her than Kate Stephens," replied Mrs. Doane. "As to not looking well, there's nothing whatever the matter with her except that she's always brooding over the loss of her money."

"Perhaps she misses her home, Ruth. It was very lovely and Kate Stephens' house is anything but homelike, even if she is a tower of strength." Then, seeing that something was wrong, she turned her remarks into another channel. "How wonderfully warm they keep you here!" she exclaimed as she took leave.

"That's a splendid point about the Gates house," agreed Mrs. Doane.

The visitor had hardly turned the corner of the street before Mr. Doane returned for the evening meal. In the dining room a light suspended in a garish dome of kaleidoscopic glass tried to lend a festive air to the occasion and to counteract the effect of the smoke-tinged wall paper. There were two long tables and two small ones in the unoccupied corners. At one of the latter sat Mr. and Mrs. Doane. Tonight it was impossible for them to exchange a word as the occupants of one of the long tables—young men from the mill—were a little more hilarious than usual.

"The tide's out, Lizzie," bawled one youth, as he thrust into the hands of the bewildered waitress an empty milk pitcher.

Mr. Doane wearily pushed back his plate with a sigh, glad to reach the quiet of his room, where he sank into a chair near the table and began to fill his pipe.

"Don't smoke tonight," protested his wife. "I've a splitting headache," and she moved her chair near the open window.

Now Mr. Doane wanted especially to smoke, not only for the stimulus it gave his jaded nerves, but also to brace him to lay before his wife what from previous experience he knew would be an unwelcome proposition.

He laid down his pipe, however, and began. "Taylor told me today of a great bargain he has in a house. It's new, convenient, and the most attractive place in the town, and he is willing to hold it for us a day or two. Won't it be fine to have our own home, Ruth, with everything just as we want it, and get away from this distracting place?"

Mrs. Doane drew a golden tendril from her beautiful hair and wound it around her finger for a moment before speaking. Every word came slowly and deliberately from pouted lips.

"Victor, you know very well, after the time I was hurt last winter the doctor said I must be careful, so I couldn't possibly do housework. Now don't interrupt by saying there will be maids. This is a mill town, with its endless procession entering the mills and leaving one for days without any help."

Then because she hadn't yet learned that too many excuses weaken a cause, she added: "Think how horrid it would be for you if the furnace man should be sick and you might even have to shovel snow, to say nothing of the extra expenses."

After much patient arguing, Mr. Doane knew that the only thing was to tell his brother, John, who lived in a small apartment and wanted a house, about the bargain.

John's wife, Mildred, came to see Ruth the next day. She was beaming with happiness over the thought of having a real home. Although not as beautiful as Ruth, she was most attractive in her animation.

"And we've asked Mother Doane to come and live with us!" she exclaimed. "She is such a wonderful woman and misses her old home so much."

But Mother Doane died suddenly before the young people moved. Ruth put on the black gown she had worn to the funeral and went with her husband to the office of Mr. Gray, the lawyer, to hear the will read.

Mr. Gray explained that Mrs. Doane had made her will six months before, after a visit from her physician, who told her she could not live more than a year. Her money had not been lost in a foolish investment as every one but himself had thought. She merely wanted to find out how many people loved her for herself. Then, in his customary dry manner, with a slight rustle of paper and adjusting of spectacles, Mr. Gray read in a monotonous voice many things without interest until he came to the following:

"I give and bequeath to my oldest son, John, $500, to my younger son, Victor, $500, and the residue of my estate I give and bequeath to Mildred, beloved wife of my son, John."

Various minor bequests followed, and the will ended with the bequeathal of "my heavy cashmere shawl to my daughter-in-law, Ruth."

Belgian Hares.

The Belgian hare is of a mahogany color, with wide black lacings on the ears and wavy black ticking on the body; no sign of white should appear, even on the feet. There are several varieties of Flemish Giant, one being steel gray with the under part of the body nearly white, another more nearly white, another more nearly brown than gray, and another black. White Giants are pure white with pink eyes.

Put Ear to Odd Uses.

Burmese men and women delight in ear ornaments. The lobe of the ear is bored with a hole of astonishing size, and in it various articles are worn—pieces of wood, jewels, or rolls of solid gold or silver. When no ornaments are in the ears, the men often put their cigars, or any other small article in frequent use, through them, and the women use the holes for bouquet holders.

Thousands of other women have found Cardui just as Mrs. Burnett did. It should help you.

WELCOME FOR CHESS PLAYER

Devotee of Game, Traveler Asserts, Will Never Lack Companionship or Entertainment Anywhere.

If you want to travel but feel unequal to learning a supply of modern languages for the purpose, then play chess. The ideal substitute for Esperanto and Latin at last has been found, if the experiences of a scholar who lately returned from long wanderings on foot through Europe may be trusted, for he says that everywhere the enthusiast can find chess players—That he need never lack companionship or entertainment.

The speech of chess is more reliably universal than musical notation. You may employ it in hut and castle without danger of going astray from etiquette, and it has no pitfalls of double meaning. The traveler may enjoy his little game in the Alhambra, in the mosques of Stamboul and in London clubs. His chess men being his faithful companions, a partner was sure to turn up, of what nationality it mattered not at all.

Once, on a walking trip the whole length of the Italian peninsula, he visited the ancient Benedictine monastery of Monte Cassino, whose learned monks were all devoted to chess and set aside a spacious room in the great building for their games. Its furniture consisted merely of a chess table; players and spectators stood. The monks kept him two days as their guest in a continuous tournament, and he lost but one game after a banquet in his honor whereat old, rare vintages appeared in profusion. The scene of the play was dramatic, the contestants standing in the center of a circle of cowled monks, who followed every move in intense silence.

Another "continuous tournament" he played on horseback while journeying through Mesopotamia; another while drifting down the Tigris on a raft of goatskins to Mosul, where he tried his skill with the archbishop of Bagdad, a genial opponent. At Tabriz, metropolis of Persia, he played simultaneously against the eight strongest players of the city. The traveler attributes his success in a diplomatic mission to an act of great self-denial—he permitted a distinguished nobleman, commissioned by the shah to conduct negotiations with him, to defeat him in a series of games which preceded the contest of wits.

Moths Use "Wireless?"

Because scientists have found that though they place a female moth in a wooden pillbox, soundproof and scentproof, the male moth always will find its mate, they have been led to believe that moths make use of a system similar to wireless telegraphy. A Vapoorer moth in a sound-proof box will attract the male of its species from all directions. It has been proved that the males are attracted neither by sound nor scent.

The London Daily Mail says that if experiments were conducted it undoubtedly would be shown that electro-magnetic waves of a very short length are used, as both glow worms and fireflies emit light under similar conditions, and that it is not improbable that other insects use longer and invisible waves.

Moths have antennae, which, besides acting as feelers, may be employed as transmitting and receiving aerials. The antennae of the female, who is the transmitter, differ in design from those of the male, who receives. When the male alights he swings his antennae much as an operator swings a wireless direction-finding frame to find out from what directions signals come.

"Divorcee" Among Birds.

Our little feathered friends took a tumble in the estimation of their admirers, who have cited them as models of "mates for life."

"Divorces" have been discovered in birdland! The biological survey, Department of Agriculture, is responsible for this new blow at the sanctity of the marriage vows.

"Bird divorces," it says, first were suggested by information obtained from a Cleveland bird lover, the first user of trapping methods adopted by the biological survey.

"He found," says the announcement, "that in one case, at least, a retrapped bird had remated (though the former mate still was alive) and was rearing a brood with its new mate, just as it had done with its first love."

The extent to which birds "divorce" themselves from their mates and start on new material careers is one of the sidelights which will be developed in new studies now under way.—Washington Star.

Trade Dollars Coined in Italy.

A silver dollar is now being coined by the Italian government especially for its trade in the African colony of Eritrea and it is likely that this new dollar will become the medium of trade all around the Red sea. For 100 years the most widely used coin in the Red sea district has been the Austrain Marie Theresa dollar, of which about 200,000,000 were in circulation there at the beginning of the war. It is estimated that at least one-third of these have been melted down in the last seven years. The new Italian dollar greatly resembles the Marie Theresa dollar, because the Arabs are so conservative that any radical change would have prevented its introduction.

This section certainly owes a lot to the automobile

LOOK at it just from the business standpoint, compared with, say, ten years ago—or even five.

Everything speeded up—made easier. Nearly every business man depending on the automobile to transport himself and his products.

That is one reason, perhaps, why more attention is being paid to tires—why tire costs are being figured closer and people are beginning to look for better tires.

We believe that people are entitled to better tires—the best they can get.

Not only the man with the big car, but the man with the small car, and the medium sized car.

III

We represent U.S. Tires for that reason—because their policy is the same as ours—every tire as good as you can get it, regardless of the size of the car it is to go on.

It was that policy which led to the introduction of the straight side automobile tire, the pneumatic truck tire.

And you can't beat it.

IV

U. S. Tires are guaranteed for life, with no limitation of mileage.

It will pay you to talk to us about tires, if you are looking at them from a business standpoint.

THE UNIVERSAL CAR

One Hundred Per Cent. "Pep"

When your Ford car or your Ford truck doesn't display its usual quantity or quality of "pep" and dash, it's time to have a repairman who understands the Ford mechanism give it the "once over"—then make the necessary adjustments or repairs. And return it to you full of its old time power, "pep," energy, pull and service. You'll notice the difference.

We employ only skilled Ford mechanics—men who know how Ford cars are made, and how they should be kept in order to give the most efficient and economical service. And our shop equipment boasts a great many specially designed tools and time-saving devices and machinery. In our stockroom is a complete assortment of repair parts—genuine Ford parts—that are exactly the same as their tough, sinewy originals in the Ford car.

For prompt repair work or adjustments, phone or drive to our garage. Don't risk chanches, play fair with your Ford car. Keep it in the hands of its friends, the authorized Ford dealers. Insist on genuine Ford parts.

FEW ENTER "DISMAL SWAMP"

Forbidding Region in Virginia and North Carolina Extends No Hospitable Hand to Visitors.

The name "Dismal Swamp" is a byword everywhere, and a legend has grown up around it of a dreary, boggy, unknown region of snakes and dark, damp thickets, where runaway slaves fled for refuge. This region is but little better known today than it was when George Washington himself laid out a route through it.

The swamp is old historically. The first settlers at Norfolk and the region round about knew of it as a wild, impassable bit of country full of game and of valuable timber—cypress, so good for making shingles; juniper, black gum and beech. In 1728 Col. Byrd, while trying to establish the boundary line between Virginia and North Carolina, ran a survey across it, working with the greatest difficulty and making only a mile a day through the thick growth. He it was who named it the Dismal swamp.

Later surveys and government maps show that the wilderness contains about 800 square miles of wood and water lying in a tract twenty miles wide and forty-five long, and extending twenty miles into Virginia and twenty-five into North Carolina. The soil is a sort of rich black vegetable mould, dry and caky at some seasons, and saturated with water at others.

The whole region is like a huge sponge, alternately dry and wet, and as the swamp level, curiously enough, is twenty feet above tidewater, it is the source of many rivers and streams.

There are deer in the woods, but it is the wild cattle that give the best sport. The ancestors of these "reed-fed" cattle, as they are called, strayed in from the fields and took up their abode in the swamp. The result is a race of small, active, wild cattle, the flesh of which is a delicious combination of the qualities of wild game and tame animals.

There is a chance that before many years the greater part of the swamp will be redeemed from its present wildness into civilized farm land, but it will be many years before the bear and wild cattle and moccasin snakes disappear from their refuges, and before the rare plants and birds that still draw botanists and ornithologists from all parts of the country will be found only in museum show cases.

Going Into Debt to Save.

One of our advertisers frequently uses this slogan in his appeals for business: Go into debt to save. It is excellent advice. Many people have such a horror of debt that they do not differentiate between kinds of debt, but try to avoid them all. Debts incurring for running expenses mean living beyond one's income and, while sometimes necessary in emergencies, are deplorable and not to be contracted except in cases of dire necessity. But going into debt for the purpose of making conservative investments is a wise policy, is the belief of the Ohio State Journal.

Such debts get a man started right and provide him with that very important aid in saving, a positive and definite incentive. If he buys a bond, paying part down and binding himself to pay the balance in specified installments at regular intervals, he is not likely to go back on his agreement. Under such an arrangement he is more likely to save a certain sum each month than if he were merely trying to save it under no obligation to anyone but himself. It helps him stick to a good habit. Going into debt to save is a step toward independence.

Pharaoh's Throne in Philadelphia.

Part of the palace to which the Pharoh Merneptah summoned Moses and Aaron to order the Israelites out of Egypt more than 3,000 years ago is to become a permanent exhibit of the University of Pennsylvania, in Philadelphia.

The palace was discovered under the sands of centuries by Dr. Clarence S. Fisher, world famous archeologist, who has just returned after six years in the field for the University museum. It was located at the site of ancient Memphis, not far from the mouth of the Nile.

The sections of the palace obtained include the raised dais on which stood Merneptah's throne, with the steps at the sides and a ramp in front, on which, in all probability, the two patriarchs of the Old Testament stood after the plagues and heard the order to lead their people from bondage.

Wireless for Shipwrecked.

However well equipped with wireless a ship may be, an accident that results in its sinking puts an end to its distress signals, and may not even allow time to begin them, leaving its hurriedly manned lifeboats without any means of communication with each other or with a rescue ship. An eastern inventor has designed a simple and compact radio system intended as permanent equipment for one or more lifeboats on each vessel, says Popular Mechanics Magazine. The wireless apparatus, used for both telegraphing and telephoning, is inclosed in a water-tight box at the stern, and grounded through a metal plate on the bottom of the boat. To shut out extraneous sounds and add to the sensitiveness of the set, the operator is equipped with a helmet containing the telephone receivers.

The married women's vote will go for anything that promises a larger pay envelope for husbands.

Stolen fruit is sweetest, but it also produces a stomach ache that promotes the cause of retributive justice.

A lot of people who get double prices for their products are very indignant because railroad rates have gone up.

If political contributions raised from the trusts are called slush money, then money from the brewers should be a foam fund.

A lot of men who claim women aren't fit to vote can't answer some very simple questions on politics that their wives put up to them.

Many sugar dealers said to be ruined by the slump in price, but up to date no one has passed around any subscription paper for their benefit.

While the women are talking politics and the affairs of State, a lot of the highly intellectual male sex are discussing which is the prettiest girl.

The country is burning 32 per cent. more gasoline than a year ago and yet a lot of people here in Princess Anne can't understand why it advances in price.

The people who think advertising is added to the cost of goods might ask how much has to be added for keeping them on the shelves a long time in a non-advertising store.

Among the many female immigrants it is believed that some could be persuaded to become general housework girls if you give them their breakfast in bed and free use of the automobile.

The apparent speed with which the girls hustle around nowadays may not be due so much to their anxiety to get the work done as because their tight skirts compel them to take such short steps.

An inquiring reader asks what these "ethnographic frontiers" are that the papers are talking about? Well, when John Chinaman undertakes to set up a laundry on an important business street there is likely to be suspicions of one.

A lot of the girls are fitting themselves out for housework jobs with high heeled shoes, silk clothes and fancy strings of beads. And a lot of the fellows can't work in a garage or on a plumbing job unless they are wearing a silk shirt and a $60 suit of clothes.

Why should the Republican leaders pretend to be shocked by Governor Cox's charge that they are raising an enormous campaign fund to buy the Presidency? They were not shocked when Senator Newberry was convicted and sentenced to ten years in the penitentiary on the charge of spending a fortune in his campaign; they neither asked him to resign from nor threw him out of the Senate. They were not shocked at the millions spent in the primary campaigns of General Wood and Governor Lowden, but this latter was a moral and not a legal offense. Only when the offense charged might come within the province of the criminal courts do they seem to display a pretense of resentment. What has become of the claim that the G. O. P. is "the party of great moral ideas?"

THE SPIRIT OF AUTUMN

Spring is the season of budding hopes and glowing promise, autumn the time of substantial achievement. The farmer and gardner rejoices in generous rewards of his toil. Nature celebrates by her most glowing colors. Mankind enjoys the luscious products which the bounty of the Creator provided.

Some imaginative people seem to feel the melancholy of falling leaves and decay of vegetation. But more hopeful nature think of crackling fires and bins full of fruits and vegetables. Also the return of cool weather brings a tonic into the air. Where you idled away the soft days of April with the languor of spring fever, September spurs you on with her energy and tells you to go out into the world and do something worth while.

THIS RESTLESS AGE

If you take a position along a popular motor road on a pleasant Sunday the principal impression you get is of the intense restlessness of these times.

The people who are scrambling to outspeed each other, in the words of a popular song, "Don't know where they are going, but they are on the way." They hurry and rush to get to a certain city and once they get there begin to hurry and rush to get somewhere else. People have no time for thought, reading or intelligent talk. The only thing that can satisfy their vacant minds is to keep in motion. At least, so says the pessimist.

And yet many people use this activity to their advantage. They do not enjoy going out on a motor trip so much for mere motion as to observe the country. They get ideas as to what other people in the same line of business are doing. The observant man will gain more in a 50-mile ride than the merely restless fellow would in a trip across the country.

DISTRIBUTING THE IMMIGRANTS

Immigrants are now coming into this country at the biggest rate ever known. It is predicted that there may be 1,500,000 new arrivals during the coming year. Now the question arises whether these people will all settle down in great cities and create slum conditions as a result of their ignorance of language and customs.

There ought to be a systematic plan for distributing these people where they will do the most good and accomplish the most for themselves. If they are left to themselves they will be bled by sharpers who will extract high fees for finding them jobs. All these newcomers should be asked if they have employment arranged for. If they have not, they should be sent to the regular employment agencies where every one of them can be directed into the trade and locality where he can accomplish the most.

The prices of many staples are exorbitantly high and the common excuse given is scarcity of labor and impossibility of getting production. With 1,500,000 new workers coming in it ought not to be possible to make this excuse very long.

But unless this matter is sharply looked out for, a lot of the people will become non-producers. They will become fruit peddlers, sellers of candy, chewing gum and tobacco, and will go into a hundred trades and occupations that are already filled and where they render no real service.

There is great need for these workers in the mines and forests and on the farms. If the American people continue to pay high prices for their products with all this labor coming in to relieve scarcities, they are some chumps. There is need for a lot of good workers in Maryland and some authority should be heading a lot of them this way.

THE STRIKE FEVER

As a whole the country is much freer from labor troubles than it was some months ago. But once in a while the strike spirit blazes out and does enormous injury to the general public.

Wage earners sometimes think that if they get higher wages it comes out of capitalists. But the capitalists simply add the charge to their prices so that the general public pays it all, and prices keep on going up just as fast as wages and usually faster. It would not do the workers of this country a particle of good to double their wages over the present level. Prices would more than double.

The advance in prices necessitated by the raise in wages greatly increases the amount of capital necessary to do business. Employers are not able to borrow these largely increased amounts of money as there is not capital enough in the country to loan. An inflated price level discourages buyers and leads to shut-downs of factories.

Wage earners sometimes say that the only way they can get justice is by striking. That is sometimes true. But much more frequently it is true that a strike ties up production, creates a scarcity and enables the profiteers to get any old price for their goods. The strike is a two-edged weapon that is very apt to hurt the person who uses it. There should be some better way of adjusting grievances.

If the present prices for commodities could be cut in two and wages also reduced one-half, everybody would be better off. There would then be capital enough in the country to do business with and production would not be tied up by inflated credits. While there may be some inequalities that need to be adjusted in the wage level, yet unreasonable demands tie up business and keep prices mounting to still dizzier heights.

A Grateful Letter

It is in trying conditions like that related below by Mrs. Geo. L. North, of Naples, N. Y., that proves the worth of Chamberlain's Colic and Diarrhoea Remedy. "Two years ago last summer" she says "our little boy had dysentery. At that time we were living in the country eight miles from a doctor. Our son was taken ill suddenly and was about the sickest child I ever saw. He was in terrible pain all the time and passed from one convulsion into another. I sent my husband for the doctor and after he was gone thought of a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic and Diarrhoea Remedy in the cupboard. I gave him some of it and he began to improve at once. By the time the doctor arrived he was out of danger."

Senator Smith Deserves Re-election

Citizens of character and standing throughout the State are beginning to realize what would be the position of Maryland in the United States Senate should Senator Smith be defeated and Mr. Weller be elected. This is a Democratic State by a large majority when the members of that party vote their party ticket and take the proper interest in public affairs, and to permit it to be represented in the Upper House of Congress by two men who belong to that party a large proportion of whose members are illiterate and irresponsible negroes, would be little short of a crime. Now that the women have equal rights as to suffrage and citizenship, it is all the more incumbent on the conservative white people to use their best efforts to keep the control of affairs, not only in State matters, but so far as the State's participation in national affairs is concerned, in the hands of the white people.

Senator Smith really deserves a re-election at the hands of the people of Maryland without such an acrimonious and bruising contest as that which is apparently opening up at the present time. Regardless of politics, he ought to be sent back to the Senate as a reward for his long and valuable services to the State. He began his career in public life half a century ago, and from that up to the present time his record has been one of honor to himself and distinction and helpfulness to the people of Maryland without regard to partisanship or faction. Whatever differences of opinion there may be regarding the senior Senator, there can be no difference in regard to the great benefits that have inured to the public generally from what he has done. He was for several years one of the leading members of the State Senate, and while there his vote and voice were always on the side of economy and honesty in public expenditures. He was, and is, a strictly party man, but his efforts were always directed toward keeping his party in the right, and in favor of honesty, decency and economy in the administration of public affairs.

The difficulties of obtaining liquor on a physician's prescription have been increased. How to be enjoying poor health is getting to be harder and harder.

Keep Well And Be Happy

If you would be happy you must keep your bowels regular. One or two of Chamberlain's Tablets taken immediately after supper will cause a gentle movement of the bowels on the following morning. Try it.

Order of Publication

Bertie Taylor Mitchell vs. Thomas T. Mitchell.

No. 3413 Chancery. In the Circuit Court for Somerset County, Maryland.

The object of this suit is to procure a decree divorcing the plaintiff a vinculo matrimonii from the said defendant.

The bill states that the plaintiff and defendant were married in the town of Salisbury, State of Maryland, on or about the eleventh day of February, nineteen hundred and eleven; that they resided together in said town of Salisbury, and in the town of Crisfield, Maryland, until about the twelfth day of May, nineteen hundred and seventeen; that though the conduct of the plaintiff toward her said husband, the said defendant, has always been kind, affectionate and above reproach, the said defendant has without any just cause or reason abandoned and deserted her and has declared his intention to live with her no longer, and that such abandonment has continued uninterruptedly for at least three years and is deliberate and final and the Separation of the parties beyond any reasonable expectation of reconciliation; that two children have been born to said parties from said marriage, who remained in the custody of the plaintiff for a while after said separation, but are now in the care and custody of the said defendant's mother.

It is thereupon, this 19th day of August, nineteen hundred and twenty, by the Circuit Court for Somerset county, in Equity, ordered that the plaintiff, by causing a copy of this order to be inserted in some newspaper published in said Somerset county, once in each of four successive weeks before the 20th day of September next, giving notice to the said Thoma T. Mitchell, residing in Wicomico county, in said State of Maryland, and for whom two successive subpœnas have been issued and been returned non est, of the object and substance of this bill warning him to be and appear in this Court in person or by solicitor on or before the 9th day of October next, to show cause, if any he has, why a decree ought not to be passed as prayed.

Every White Woman Should Vote

The passage of the suffrage amendment, giving to the women of every State a right to vote in all primaries and elections, has brought to them another duty and responsibility which they can not dodge unless they are willing to stay still and let the country be governed by an element unfit to make laws for them. If all women would refrain from voting then of course the present status would be unchanged, but it is a well recognized fact that the worst elements in both sexes are certain to avail themselves of the right to vote. It is to counteract and overcome this vicious influence that the good men and women must get registered and vote. It is no longer an academic question that the women of the country are facing but one of facts. Whether they desired suffrage or not is not a pertinent question, for suffrage is here and here to stay.

If the white women of this country and state refuse to get registered, we shall have all public affairs dominated by a class that is not fitted for the role of masters. There is but one way to meet suffrage of women and that is to accept the duties it brings, and though registering and voting may be, and we believe is, personally objectionable to the greater number of our best women, it is now their duty to accept conditions and go to the polls determined to vote in order to protect themselves and to guarantee protection to their homes and families. There are many men who were sincerely opposed to woman suffrage because they wanted to protect the women and keep them out of the political mess, but these have failed and though they regret the necessity of having them mixed up in a matter of this kind, yet now they recognize that the safety of the country depends upon the good women consenting to exercise the right thus given.

Chronic Catarrh

Our manner of living makes us very susceptible to colds and a succession of colds causes chronic catarrh a loathsome disease with which it is estimated that ninety-five per cent of our adult population are afflicted. If you would avoid chronic catarrh you must avoid colds or having contracted a cold get rid of it as quickly as possible. Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is highly recommended as a cure for colds and can be depended upon.

THE HARDWARE QUESTION SOLVED

Are You Short of Kitchen Utensils

Do you have to keep the folks waiting for their meals because you are shy on cooking utensils? You can't make few pans answer many purposes and at the same time get up a quick meal. You are foolish even to try it, considering how little it would cost to get everything you lack.

Our kitchen utensil stock is very complete. We have many little time and money saving devices which housewives can appreciate, besides all the usual necessities.

Come in and see us the first opportunity you can find, if it's merely to look around. Make a list of what you need—then get our prices.

Start Air Mail To 'Frisco

Transcontinental air mail service to San Francisco was officially opened last Wednesday. R. G. Page, piloting an airplane specially equipped to carry 400 pounds of mail, started his westward flight at 6.30 o'clock from Mineola, N. Y. He carried in his cargo letters to the mayors of six cities along the route.

The trip is expected to be completed in three days, arriving at San Francisco forty-two hours ahead of the time regularly required for mail trains. The flight mapped out is 2,651 miles in length.

Former Senator Hubner Dead

Former State Senator John Hubner, for many years identified with the political, financial and business life of the State, died at 3.30 o'clock last Wednesday at the Maryland General Hospital, Baltimore, where he underwent two abdominal operations during the last ten days.

His body was removed to his home in the Somerset Apartments, Roland Park, where he took up his residence about three months ago. The funeral was held Friday and was private.

Senator Hubner is survived by a widow, who before her marriage was Miss Mary A. Harken, of Anne Arundel county; three daughters, Mrs. Enders, wife of the Rev. Martin Luther Enders, of Cumberland; Miss Helen E. Hubner and Mrs. Rachael Willyoung; a son, William R. Hubner, and six grandchildren, one of whom is Captain John Hubner Rice, a member of the House of Delegates.

Senator Hubner was born in Lonnerstadt, Bavaria, December 26, 1840. He emigrated to this country with his parents, landing in Baltimore in 1855, after suffering many hardships. In 1858 he went to Relay, on the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, and remained there during the Civil War.

Senator Hubner was a staunch Democrat and held several high offices. He was elected to the House of Delegates of Maryland in 1885, was re-elected in 1887 and again in 1889. During those sessions he served as chairman of the Committee on Ways and Means, and as Speaker during the session of 1890. He was elected in 1891 to represent Baltimore county in the State Senate. In 1899 he was again elected Senator and served as President of the Senate in 1900 and 1902. In recent years Mr. Hubner did not take an active part in politics, but gave most of his time to the real estate business.

A Charity Guest Worth $150,000

A little old man, wizened and gnarled by years of hardship and privation in the North, folded his hands over his breast, closed his eyes and "went out" at Bellevue Hospital, New York, last Wednesday.

But investigation of the little old man's effects has now recalled Peter Vidovitch sharply to the memory of doctors and nurses who attended him in his last hours. For the pauper patient left a sealed will disposing of a fortune estimated at $150,000. It consists of $60,000 in various Alaskan banks, $54,000 worth of Liberty bonds, $19,000 cash, a ruby ring, a diamond ring, a diamond stickpin and a gold nugget worth $10,200 and the deeds of several parcels of property in Fairbanks, Alaska.

The pauper patient applied for lodging at the New York Municipal Lodging House on August 12th and was taken in because he was destitute. Later he was sent to Bellevue, still a free patient. He was registered at the hospital as a miner of San Francisco and Alaska.

Alcohol Poison Kills Seven Men

Seven civilian employees of the Edgewood Arsenal are dead from alcoholic poisoning. One other, who was taken ill Tuesday morning at the same time as the others, is now in such condition that he is expected to recover.

Michael O'Learey, of Baltimore, is the only one who can tell just what the men drank and where they got it.

This is another grim warning of the danger that confronts those who will not control their appetite for intoxicants and are ready to take long chances to gratify it.

Why Should Man Be Denied "Ancestral Harness?"

Bride Allowed to Take Pride in Wearing the Gown in Which Grandmother Was Married, but for Him, Nothing Doing.

One reads in the report of a recent wedding in New Haven, Conn., that "the bride (Miss Dorothy W. Day) wore a gown which was worn by her grandmother when the latter was married fifty years ago."

In other cases it is not the entire gown, but the "bridal dress was trimmed with rare old lace that was part of the wedding finery of the bride's great grandmother when that estimable lady was married, about seventy-five years before."

But who ever read, "Mr. Bridegroom was quite handsome in a suit of black which was worn by his grandfather, the Hon. John Bridegroom, when the latter married Miss Mehitable Spanker in 1860?"

Nor does one ever learn from a modern wedding report: "The bridegroom's feet were clad in shoes that his great-great grandfather, Capt. Peddediah Timkin, wore at Bunker Hill and Valley Forge. The shoes, with only slight restoration necessary, are in marvelous condition and lent a distinctly revolutionary flavor to the bridal occasion."

In fact, the bridegroom's clothing never gets mention, beyond "the conventional black." If it did it would be only to relate some disaster too important, unusual or ridiculous to be omitted, even in a wedding narrative.

Two chief reasons are advanced for the lack of ancestral male garments at the bridal altar. One reason is the difficulty of making a man look even passable in his grandfather's rig, whereas a girl becomes more beautiful in the quaint garments of a bygone day. Moreover, a man appearing for his wedding in a John Hancock coat and knickers would claim more attention than the bride, and that would be fatal at any wedding.

But the real reason why a man does not marry in his grandfather's scenery is because it is not. Grandmother put her wedding dress carefully away and preserved it for her children. Granddad put his away for the nonce, but he was in no circumstances to preserve a perfectly good suit for another generation. He needed it in his own business. So eventually his bridal attire went the way of all men's clothing.

But it would be refreshing, some critics of the times say, to read once in a while in wedding reports:

"The bridegroom's svelte shape was admirably set off by the bridal pants worn seventy-five years ago by his paternal grandfather, the celebrated Squire Bingiewhiffle, on the occasion of his marriage to the beautiful Prudence Winterbottom."

Madrid Jammed With People.

Spain's abstention from the war has not prevented a housing crisis in that country. In the large cities the demand for apartments is so great that new buildings are leased from roof to basement before construction is fairly under way.

In Madrid the population has increased 30 per cent since the outbreak of the war. The recent arrivals are not only newly enriched Spaniards, but also refugees and visitors from belligerent countries, who during the war sought the Spanish capital as a peace oasis. The population of the city is now approximately one million, or an average of seventy-two for every building. Its density of population is believed to be greater than that of any other large town in Europe, or 271 per hectare (more than 100 per acre) as compared with 200 per hectare in Paris and 128 in London.

In the central part of the city the population reaches 773 per hectare. It should be recalled in this connection that the buildings do not as a rule contain so many floors as in our country. —Living Age.

New Lace-Making Machine.

Consul Hitch at Nottingham, England, reports an invention by a resident of that city which, it is claimed, will revolutionize the present methods of making imitation real laces. The inventor states that by means of his invention, which is an attachment to an ordinary Levers lace machine, he can produce the lace the entire width of the machine, either in breadths from one inch upward or the full width of the machine for allover nets. Thus, a machine 100 inches wide could be made to produce 100 breadths of one inch, or fifty of two inch, and so on. Two sets of jacquards are used, one operating the warp threads and other the bobbin threads.

Able to Carry It.

"If you take whisky for your stomach's sake, what about your head?"

"My head can take care of itself, sir," replied Colonel Jagsby. "I have the good fortune to possess, sir, the capacity of a southern gentleman."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

The Mystery of Golf.

"Does your husband enjoy playing golf?"

"Yes, but I don't understand how he can. It is beyond me how he can get any pleasure out of a game which irritates and angers him so."

Biblical Information.

The Lookout prints the following information about the Bible: "The Bible contains 3,566,480 letters, 810,697 words, 31,175 verses, 1,189 chapters, 66 books. The longest chapter is Psalm 119, and the shortest is Psalm 117. This is also the middle chapter. The middle verse, however, is Psalm 118:8. The longest name is in Isaiah chapter 8."

Muff and Mutt.

Of course there are others, but one kind of a simp is the girl who carries a muff in the summer and marries a mutt in the winter.—Dallas News.

Double Affection.

Elsie was proud and much excited over a pair of new shoes and while calling on a friend could think and talk of nothing else. To get her interested in something else, the woman at whose home she was visiting tried to take her up to an elephant made of teakwood, about a foot high, looking rather real. Baby was much afraid at first, but went nearer trembling as she went along. Finally she put her little hand on his head and, finding him harmless, put both arms around him and cried out in astonishment and joy: "He loves me—he loves my shoes!"

THE BEGINNING OF A BANK-NOTE

Little Marcia's baby dress though made of the finest linen was ultimately worn threadbare. One day it landed in the rag bag and was sold to the junk dealer. When the rag sorter touched the discarded garment he detected in a flash the fine quality of the flax and set it aside for a journey to the Bureau of Engraving and Printing at Washington. Eventually it became legal tender—a bank-note. Just how is told in one of the beautiful booklets about Our Government which we are sending each month to those interested.

Just send us your name and address and you will receive a copy of every issue of the series without charge.

Diversified Decoration.

William was leading the way to where he kept his rabbits. The visitors followed and finally reached the rabbit house, where they stopped to admire the little white, gray, and black-spotted rabbits. "Look," William exclaimed, pointing to the rabbits, "they are all decorated differently, aren't they?"

Dry Farming.

Dry farming is a scientific farming of land where there is a limited or unfavorable distribution of rainfall. Irrigation is not practiced, the fertility and moisture of the soil being managed by a system of deep cultivation, rotation of crops and the "plowing in" of green crops.

Origin of Johnny Canuck.

The word "Canuck," as applied to Canadians, is of North American Indian origin, from the word Ca-nuck-er or Kannuck. With the term Canuck is sometimes associated the word "Johnny," as "Johnny Canuck," probably because Canadians are sons of John Bull.

"The Vicious Circle."

Most people conclude that this phrase, which we hear so often nowadays, is of recent origin, but Amiel, the Swiss philosopher, who died in 1881, said, "I turn in a vicious circle." There is also evidence that the phrase was in use as long ago as 1792, so we have not even the comfort of a new discovery.

PROCLAMATION

Proposing Amendments To The Constitution of the State, 1920

Whereas, at the January Session of the General Assembly of Maryland, held in the year 1920, two Acts were passed, to-wit: Chapter 319 proposing an amendment to Section 15 of Article III of the Constitution of the State, title "Legislative Department," regulating the compensation of Members of both Houses of the General Assembly; and Chapter 565 proposing an amendment to Section 37 of Article 4 of the Constitution of the State, title "Judiciary Department," regulating the pay of Clerks of Courts, and which said Chapters 319 and 565 are in the words and figures following:

CHAPTER 319.

AN ACT to propose an amendment to Section 15 of Article III, of the Constitution of the State of Maryland, title "Legislative Department," regulating the compensation of the members of both Houses of the General Assembly of Maryland, and to provide for the submission of said amendment to the qualified voters of the State of Maryland for adoption or rejection.

SECTION 1. Be it enacted by the General Assembly of Maryland, (three-fifths of all the members of each of the two Houses concurring), That the following be and the same is hereby proposed as an amendment to Section 15 of Article III, of the Constitution of the State of Maryland, title "Legislative Department," the same if adopted by the legally qualified voters of the State, as herein provided, to become Section 15 of Article III, of the Constitution of the State of Maryland.

15. The General Assembly may continue its session so long as in its judgment the public interest may require for a period not longer than ninety days; and each member thereof shall receive a compensation of three hundred dollars per annum and five dollars per diem for every day he shall attend the session, but not for such days as he may be absent, unless absent on account of sickness or by leave of the House of which he is a member and he shall also receive such mileage as may be allowed by law, not exceeding twenty cents per mile; and the presiding officer of each House shall receive an additional compensation of five dollars per diem. When the General Assembly shall be convened by proclamation of the Governor, the session shall not continue longer than thirty days, and in such case the compensation shall be the same as herein prescribed.

SECTION 2. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That said aforegoing section hereby proposed as an amendment to the Constitution of the State of Maryland shall, at the next general election for Members of Congress held in this State, be submitted to the legal and qualified voters of the State, for their adoption or rejection, in pursuance of the directions contained in Article XIV of the Constitution of the State of Maryland, and at the said general election the vote on the said proposed amendment to the Constitution shall be by ballot, and upon each ballot there shall be printed the words "For the Constitutional Amendment," and "Against the Constitutional Amendment," as now provided by law, and immediately after said election due returns shall be made to the Governor of the vote for and against said proposed amendment, as directed by said Fourteenth Article of the Constitution, and further proceedings had in accordance with said Article Fourteen.

Approved April 9, 1920.

CHAPTER 565.

AN ACT to amend Section 37 of Article 4, title "Judiciary Department," of the Constitution of this State, and to provide for the submission of said amendment to the qualified voters of this State for adoption or rejection.

SECTION 1. Be it enacted by the General Assembly of Maryland, (three-fifths of all members of each of the two houses concurring), That the following section be, and the same is, hereby proposed as an amendment to Section 37, of Article 4, title "Judiciary Department," of the Constitution of this State, and if adopted by the legal qualified voters thereof, as herein provided, said section shall supersede and stand in the place and in stead of Section 37 of said Article 4 of the Constitution of Maryland.

SEC. 37. There shall be a Clerk of each of the said Courts of Baltimore City, except the Supreme Bench, who shall be elected by the legal and qualified voters of said city at the election to be held in said city on the Tuesday next after the first Monday of November, in the year eighteen hundred and sixty-seven, and shall hold his office for six years from the time of his election, and until his successor is elected and qualified, and be re-eligible thereto, subject to be removed for willful neglect of duty or other misdemeanor in office, on conviction in a Court of Law. The salary of each of the said Clerks shall be forty-five hundred dollars a year, payable only out of the fees and receipts collected by the Clerks of said city, and they shall be entitled to no other perquisites or compensation. In case of a vacancy in the office of Clerk of any of said Courts, the Judges of said Supreme Bench of Baltimore City shall have power to fill such vacancy until the general election of Delegates to the General Assembly to be held next thereafter, when a Clerk of said Court shall be elected to serve for six years thereafter; and the provisions of this Article in relation to the appointment of Deputies by the Clerks of the Circuit Courts in the counties shall apply to the Clerks of the Courts in Baltimore City.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted by the Authority aforesaid. That the said foregoing section hereby proposed as an amendment to the Constitution shall, at the next election for members of Congress to be held on the Tuesday next after the first Monday in the month of November, nineteen hundred and twenty (1920), be submitted to the legal and qualified voters thereof for their adoption or rejection, in pursuance of the direction contained in Article 14 of the Constitution of this State; and at the said election the vote on said proposed amendment to the Constitution shall be by ballot, and upon each ballot there shall be written or printed the words "For Constitutional Amendment" and "Against Constitutional Amendment," as now provided by law, and immediately after said election due returns shall be made to the Governor of the vote for and against said proposed amendment, as directed by the said Article 14 of the said Constitution.

Approved April 9, 1920.

Now, therefore, I, Albert C. Ritchie, Governor of the State of Maryland, in pursuance of the direction contained in Section 1 of Article 14 of the Constitution of Maryland do hereby order and direct that this Proclamation containing a full, true and correct copy of the text of said Chapters 319 and 565 of the Acts of the General Assembly of Maryland of 1920, be published in at least two newspapers in each of the counties of the State where so many may be published and where not more than one may be published then in that newspaper, and in three newspapers published in the City of Baltimore, one of which shall be published in the German language, once a week for at least three months next preceding the general election to be held in the State of Maryland on Tuesday, the 2nd day of November, 1920, at which election the said proposed amendments to the Constitution shall be submitted in form and manner prescribed by the General Assembly, to the legal and qualified voters of the State for their adoption or rejection.

Given under my hand and the Great Seal of the State of Maryland. Done at the City of Annapolis, this 23rd day of July, nineteen hundred and twenty.

Ride Farther on Goodyear Tires in Your Small Car

It is tire performance, not price, that decides what you really pay; hence, do not experiment with tires made to sell at sensationally low prices.

You can secure in Goodyear Tires, of the 30x3-, 30x3½- and 31x4-inch sizes, a high relative value not exceeded even in the famous Goodyear Cord Tires on the world's finest automobiles.

Goodyear experience and care are applied to their manufacture in the world's largest tire factory devoted to these sizes.

If you own a Ford, Chevrolet, Dort, Maxwell or other car taking these sizes, go to your nearest Service Station for Goodyear Tires; take advantage of the opportunity to get true Goodyear mileage and economy.

NOW FUEL FROM THE AIR

Western Writer Wakes Sarcastic Over Certain Enthusiastic Projects in Contemplation.

Two or three times a year, father, who has trouble getting fuel for his flivver, becomes greatly excited over the discovery of some new kind of economic fuel that may be made out of spring water, or sawdust, but his hopes are always dispelled. Nothing further is heard about the swell fuel, and he continues to fight for his gas as usual, says the Seattle Post-Intelligencer.

Just now he is greatly excited over another cheap fuel story, and this time right here at home where he can watch it. A Seattle man has been running an engine on air, has installed it on a newly devised dirigible airship and soon he expects to ascend from his Youngstown airdome and remain aloft for six days and six nights without coming back to earth for fuel, food or water. He starts his engine with an electric battery, and begins at once to generate power from the air. After that he claims to be able to generate power from air until his engine wears out.

The Seattle airship is fourteen feet long and ten feet high, the upper half being a gas chamber, and the lower occupied by engine room and bunks. There are two propellers. Five passengers may be carried, and the thing makes about 25 miles an hour when pressed. Breakfast in Seattle, dinner in New York. Some story, eh? And father is greatly excited about it.

Now that we are making fuel out of air we shall require to be more careful with it. With general adoption of the air engine the great waste heretofore apparent must be stopped. Look, for instance, at the prodigal waste that goes forward at political conventions. Look at the windy hosts sapping up the oxygen, and giving back nothing but nitrogen! An airship propelled by an air engine would meet a vacuum and have to come to earth because of the lack of raw fuel in the atmosphere.

The Youngstown inventor has our most optimistic friendship. We hope he makes his engine go. If he can win out with it fuel for winter may be procured from the air; we may run the Seattle municipal street cars on air; and we may make our electricity for light and power from it. We may practically live on air. That is what a select few have accomplished in the past, and the habit should be made common.

Fontaine

Chateau-Thierry, that place which played such a prominent part in the world war, was the birthplace of Jean De La Fontaine, who entered this world on July 8, 1621.

He was of a good family and, like many other youths of his station, was educated for the priesthood. But the profession of a cleric was not to the liking of the dreamy, irresponsible boy, which characteristics he carried throughout his life. So, forsaking his career laid out by his parents, he became a happy-go-lucky idler until his poetic talent was awakened and he began to write. In his last years he became sincerely religious. Fontaine has been termed a spoiled child of nature; simple, guileless, and exasperating to his friends, who tolerated his shortcomings because of their love for him.

The permanent value of his work in the development of French literature, especially through the fables, was early recognized. In mind he is akin to Moliere, and with him these two men are the most widely liked French writers of the seventeenth century.

The Mean Bridegroom.

Bishop Benjamin Brewster said at a wedding breakfast in Portland:

"The meanest man I ever heard of in my life was a Kansas farm hand. He rang a Kansas preacher up at 12 o'clock one night to marry him, and after the ceremony he said:

"'Well, parson, are we spliced now?'

"'Absolutely,' said the parson.

"'Spliced hard and fast?'

"'Nothing but death,' the parson said, 'can break the sacred tie which now binds you to this lady.'

"'You couldn't unsplice us again, parson, even if you wanted to?'

"No; the ceremony I have performed is irrefragible and irrevocable.'

"Then, parson, I'm goin' to stand you off for it,' said the farm hand, with a relieved look, and, taking his wife by the arm, he departed, never to return."

To Destroy Grasshopper Nests.

The breeding ground of the grasshoppers that annually spread over Sutter and Yuba counties is believed centered around the Sutter Buttes, and farmers in Sutter county are planning an aggressive campaign against the pests next year, with the idea of killing off the hoppers, before they become strong enough to migrate. The grounds around the Buttes are chiefly arid grazing lands. According to insect specialists the Buttes grasshoppers are similar to the Utah pests, in whose breeding places 25,200 eggs to the square foot are deposited.—San Francisco Chronicle.

Rolling Hotels.

Few people who ride in parlor cars realize how stupendous is the system of which the cars are a part. It is the equivalent of a hotel with 260,000 beds and 2,960 office desks at which 26 million guests register every year. It has eight thousand negro porters, owns linen worth two million dollars, and uses $60,000 worth of soap a year. —Youth's Companion.

BY DEDUCTION.

When the boy next door told Isabel that the moon was made of green cheese, she asked her grandfather if it were so.

"What do you think about it?" he asked.

"Well, I'm pretty sure it's not true," she said.

"What makes you think so?"

"Because God made the moon before he made the cows."—Everybody's Magazine.

In a Quandary.

"I'm in a tough position," declared the judge, who had resigned to resume the practice of law. "Been employed to try to get a new trial for a man I sent to jail."

"Well?"

"Shall I decline the case or shall I make myself out a mutt for convicting this man?"

Strangers.

"Is that a popular novel you are reading?"

"Not with me," replied Mr. Glithersby. "I picked it up because I liked the picture of the heroine on the cover, but after reading a few chapters I discovered that the author and the artist had never met."

A WARNING.

Lady Bug—Don't you dare smoke that cigar. Lips that touch tobacco shall never touch mine!

Self-Centered.

His hold he would never let slip;
He sailed right along in perpetual glee,
For he thought he was running the ship.

Long Words.

"You use some rather long words in your speeches."

"Yes," replied Senator Sorghum; "long words may sometimes cause people to look into the dictionary instead of into the merits of a weak argument."

Sure Enough.

"Oh, Clara!" exclaimed the young man on the sofa; "you have broken those two cigars I had in my pocket."

"It's really too bad, George," replied the sweet young thing, "but why don't you buy stronger cigars?"

Making His Rejection Sure.

Miss Sereleaf—I would not marry you if you were the last man ever to propose to me.

Mr. Costique—Ah, yes, of course. But how do you feel about it, seeing that I'm the first?

Wife Was Boss.

"Then you never kick about household expenses?"

"Nope."

"How's that?"

"My wife would tell me to run the house."

He Had One.

Judge—You say the prisoner struck you. Have you any witnesses to prove it?

The Only Kind.

OUT ON THE BRINEY.

Home Cooking.

Of all the meals that man can buy
Wherever he may roam,
There are no meals that satisfy
Like those he gets at home.

The Greater Fear.

"That peddler bites every coin he takes in to see if it's genuine."

"Isn't he afraid of microbes?"

Point of View.

Wife—Don't you really think these round steaks are as good to buy as porterhouse?

Hub—Better to buy, but they are not so good to eat.

Consistent.

Passenger (on express)—You are the most obliging porter I ever encountered.

Fudge.

"What do you think of that college fudge?" asked the soda attendant.

GOT BILL'S GOAT

He Simply Couldn't Understand About Wife's Hands.

Bill is wearing gloves!

Any time you see Bill wearing gloves know ye that something has occurred.

It may be a death and Bill may be going to attend the funeral, or it may be that Bill is bound for a wedding, or else there is always the chance that the Improved Order of Joinits is going to have some sort of a ceremonial and that Bill is going to be a participant.

It was a knowledge of this peculiarity which caused all to look at Bill in an inquiring sort of way when he came in t'other night and which prompted Joe to ask: "What's the big idea, Bill, that you've got your fins covered?"

"Wife sick."

Bill said no more. You'll agree that it was far from a satisfactory explanation. Joe voiced the sentiment when he remarked, petulant like, "that's a h——l of a reason!"

"Huh!"

It was plain Bill wasn't going to be voluble on this subject of "them" gloves. Now if there is one thing in this world that Joe delights in more than another it is in pecking away at Bill, and Bill equally enjoys seeking to harass that person's nanny.

"I said that wasn't much of a reason," repeated Joe. "My wife's been sick and I didn't wear gloves; don't see no reason on earth why you should be wearing gloves just because the Missus is ill, unless you're expecting her to pass over and are making preliminary arrangements for the services."

That nettled Bill. "Smart, aren't you," he asserted. "It's the great wonder of my life that some of the funny papers like the Undertakers' Herald haven't engaged you to conduct their humorous column. You're about as funny, as, as—as a stick of wood. Now you're so darned inquisitive, just look at them."

Bill peeled off the gloves and displayed his hands.

Say, but you ought to have seen 'em. Red! A fresh boiled lobster was a dark blue compared to those hands!

"There's the answer," says Bill. "The wife's been sick and I've been doing the housework. I didn't mind it much at first, sort of fun, you know. Made me think I was some cheese around the house. Didn't do it just because I wanted to, but because I had to. Couldn't get any help and the wife had to be cared for, had to have a bite to eat and the house had to be looked after. I did it; yes, I did. I cooked and I swept and I washed dishes and, believe me, I did some chore, but gosh almighty, I don't understand it yet, why my hands got so blasted red.

"Just look at 'em." Again Bill displayed those hands. "Look at 'em; aren't they beauties! Honest, the only thing I can think of every time I look at those hands is Joe's nose before the first of last July.

"Those hands, I say, began to get red. They got redder and redder until they're what you see displayed before you. Will they stop there? I dunno. But this here is what gets me: When the wife is on her feet doing the work, she does 100 times as much as I've been doing; she not only washes the dishes, but she scrubs the floors and washes the clothes and cleans the house and gosh only knows what and, by hookey, I've yet to see her hands when they look even slightly red. What's the answer? Tell me?" —Sam, in Lewiston Journal.

Boil New Shaving Brush.

When you buy a shaving brush, boil it, thoroughly before using it or leave it for four hours in a 10 per cent dilution of formaldehyde liquor at 110 degrees F. Either of these methods will protect you from anthrax.

Before the war there was little danger of anthrax from the shaving brush, as almost all of these were made from hair that had been thoroughly disinfected in France or Germany; but after 1914 the hair came direct from Russia and China via the Pacific ocean, and twenty cases of anthrax have been traced directly to this source.

As 64 per cent of anthrax cases are fatal it behooves us to be extra careful, in spite of the fact that human susceptibility is low—how low is indicated by the fact that only one case is known to have developed from a lot of 10,000 infected brushes.

Roundabout Way Home.

Four thousand Czecho-Slovakian men on transport bound from Siberia to France, en route home, with their Russian wives, landed in Norfolk, Va., recently to await repairs to their ship. It was impossible for them to return home through Russia, so they have had to make the roundabout trip. During the trip children were cared for by the Red Cross workers and Y. W. C. A. secretaries who had been in France and Russia during the war. The Y. M. C. A. looked after the men.

David Warned Against This.

"I shall never forget the look on her face when she found me in her pew," said the plainly dressed woman.

SOMERSET COUNTY HAPPENINGS

News Items Gathered By Our Correspondents During The Week

Deal's Island

Sept. 11—Mr. Richard Vetra, who is employed at Norfolk, Va., is home on a short visit.

Mr. and Mrs. Zack White, of Baltimore, are visiting relatives here.

Miss Catherine Benton has opened a private school for primary grades.

Mr. F. T. Webster returned home Sunday after spending the week-end in Baltimore.

Deal's Island Central School opened September 1st with an enrollment of 105 pupils.

We are sorry to report Miss Louise Anderson on the sick list. We wish her a speedy recovery.

Mrs. William Shores, Myrtle Hudgins, Emma Webster and Louise Ringgold spent Wednesday in Salisbury.

Mrs. Annie Hitchens has returned to her home in Virginia after spending some time with her relatives.

Mr. and Mrs. T. W. H. White, Jr., and daughter, Anne, spent the week-end with Mr. and Mrs. L. A. Anderson.

Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Kelley have returned to their home nl Baltimore after spending some time with Mr. Kelley's parents.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Workman, of Georgetown, Del., have been visiting Mrs. Workman's parents, Mr. and Mrs. S. S. Webster.

Mr. and Mrs. Carl Windsor have returned to their home in Connecticut after spending a few weeks with Mr. Windsor's parents, Mr. and Mrs W. D. Windsor.

Among the visitors to the Island are Mrs. Mamie Elliott, of Virginia; Mr. George Knachel, of Baltimore; Mr. Dixie Mister, of Virginia; Mrs. Lillian Edwards and daughter, Dorothy, of Baltimore; Mrs. Fannie White, of Virginia; Mrs. Emma Wilson, of Baltimore, and Mrs. Homer Ringgold.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Webster was the scene of a pretty wedding Friday, September 3rd, when their daughter, Esther May, became the bride of Mr. S. Shriner Utz, of New Market. The bride was beautifully attired in hand-embroidered white crepe meteor and carried white asters and ferns. The Rev. J. P. Outten officiated. The only attendant was Miss Dorothy Webster, sister of the bride, who wore a gown of delft blue satin. The bride, who was a former teacher in the Deal's Island Central School, was presented a small purse of gold by the pupils. Mr. and Mrs. Utz left on Friday evening's boat en route for Baltimore and a tour through the North. They will reside at Murrysville, Pa. Among the guests at the wedding were Mrs. J. P. Outten, Mr. and Mrs. Talmadge Mister and Misses Addie Bradshaw, Sadie Webster and Elizabeth Anderson.

King's Creek

Sept. 11—Mr. and Mrs. Guy Commander, of Norfolk, Va., and Mrs. Anna Sheafer, are visiting at King's Creek this week.

Miss Louise Loreman took charge of a school at Smith's Island. We wish her success, being young and her first experience; but she is very capable and full of sunshine.

Mr. and Mrs. Brickert enjoyed the recent visit of their eldest son, Mr. Everett Brickert, and wife. Having left New York they stopped for a short visit enroute to Fredericksburg, where they made their future home recently.

Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Howeth and children and Mr. and Mrs. Rollins, from Baltimore, motored from Atlantic City to King's Creek and spent a week with the family of Mr. and Mrs. Gordon H. Barnes and friends. Messrs. Howeth and Rollins enjoyed a fishing trip also. They returned to Baltimore early Sunday morning.

Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Barnes and family had a pleasant surprise on Sunday last at noon, when their friends, Mr. and Mrs. John Haines and family, motored from Gwynedd Valley, Pa., to visit them. In the afternoon they all enjoyed a few hours on the Manokin river at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Nelson, where they were cordially received and entertained. They also made a call on Mr. John Sloan, who is at Westover for an indefinite period. They left for home early Monday morning and report a fine trip.

Mr. and Mrs. Louis Metzgar, who has been visiting their daughter, Mrs. T. R. Propst, for the past ten days, left last Wednesday morning for their home in Spencerville, Ohio. They made the trip by automobile and were accompanied by their brother and sister, Mr. and Mrs. William Metzgar. While here Mr. and Mrs. S. P. Propst gave a basket picnic. There were eighty-five present and every one fully enjoyed the hospitality of the host and hostess and friends, as well as the luxuries of the season that were prepared in various ways.

More Killed By Accident Than In War

Every year about one-tenth of the total population of the United States falls downstairs, gets run over, trips into manholes, leans too far out of the window, peers into a gun that is supposed to be unloaded or, to cut it short, drowns. The result is that 11,037,000 persons are injured every year. Also 10,000 are killed accidentally every year. All of which and more came to light last Wednesday at the Health and Accident Underwriters' Conference at the Hotel La Salle, Chicago.

During the war 31,000 Americans were killed in battle, whereas right at home with no battle going on 126,000 Americans died of accidents during the same period, according to figures produced at the conference.

Stamps Separated.

To separate stamps that have become stuck together, lay a sheet of thin paper over them and iron with a hot iron. This will take them apart and the glue will still remain.

Mt. Vernon

Mr. Irving Austin and family, of Baltimore, are visiting relatives here.

Miss Louise Hopkins, after spending the summer at Ocean City, has returned home.

Mr. O. E. Furniss, of Chester, Pa., spent the week-end with relatives at this place.

Mr. Fred Furniss, of Chester, Pa., after visiting his sister, Mrs. Guy Bailey, has returned home.

Misses Loleta and Bessie Sterling, of Crisfield, are visiting Misses Lois and Myra Jackson, at this place.

Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Dashiell and Mr. Harry Dashiell motored to Baltimore Monday. They will be away about a week.

Mr. Guy M. McIntyre, after spending a few days with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. G. B. McIntyre, has returned home.

Miss Sadie Webster, of Hebron, Md., after spending a few days with her parents at this place, has returned home.

Unwoven Persian Rugs.

The author of a book called "When I Was a Boy in Persia" says that certain rugs used in Persian houses have not yet found a place in the American market. These are large felt carpets called lumta. They are made, not by weaving, but by beating the wool together and then pressing it. They are very thick, warm and noiseless, with red, cream and white borders, and with a field dotted with red, black, white, green, blue and golden circles of wool—quite a Joseph's coat in color.—The Outlook.

Celluloid.

Celluloid, from which many toilet articles and imitations of ivory are made, is composed from the cellulose found in cotton cloth or raw cotton. It is treated with a solution of nitric acid which forms it into a pulp very much like paper pulp. It is then washed with water, which removes most of the acid. It is partially hardened and camphor gum mixed with it, when it is rolled into sheets and thoroughly dried. To manipulate it, it is softened by steam and then hardened by drying.

Why Frankfurt.

King Carl the Great (Charlemagne) was once defeated by the Saxons, and fled with his Franks to the Main. But they could find no fording place by which to escape the pursuit of their enemies. Suddenly a cart appeared and made for a spot where it crossed easily, thus showing the Franks where the river was fordable. So they came across the Main, and the place has ever since been called "Frankfurt" (the ford of the Franks).

Monarchistic Europe, which finds it difficult to have a change of government without a revolution, may talk and practice revolution if it chooses, but the United States turns itself upside down peacefully every four years.

To Start Sunday-School Drive

At a meeting of the presidents of the Sunday-School Association of the Eastern Shore counties held at Easton this week it was decided to inaugurate an intensive campaign for the betterment of the work in this section of the State. Senator L. Atwood Bennett, of Salisbury, presided. He is a vice-president of the Maryland State Sunday-School Association. Abner E. Brown, general secretary of the State Association, was also present.

The object of the meeting was to lay plans for progressive Sunday-school work on the Eastern Shore and eventually for a resident Sunday-school superintendent for this part of the State.

Mr. Brown gave out some figures on the work of the Sunday-school in the nine counties on this side of the Chesapeake. There are 400 Sunday-schools and 3,800 officers and teachers, with a Sunday-school population of 36,000, he said. They are spending $236,000 for education. Three counties have 40 per cent. of the entire Sunday-school population, while the average for each county is only 18 per cent., he said. Efforts will be made to increase this percentage of attendance.

BACKACHE IS A WARNING

Backache is often nature's most frequent signal of weakened kidneys. To cure the pains and aches, to remove the lameness when it arises from weakened kidneys, you must reach the cause—the kidneys. If you have pain through the small of your back, urinary disorders, headaches, dizzy spells, or are nervous and depressed, start treating the kidneys with a tested kidney remedy.

Doan's Kidney Pills have been proved good and are especially for weak kidneys. Doan's have been used in kidney trouble for over 50 years. Read Princess Anne testimony.

Mrs. K. L. Smith, 106 Beckford avenue says: "Some years ago I was in a bad way from severe backahce. My back was very painful, especially when I stooped over and sharp pains caught me when I straightened up. I was very miserable and one day I learned of Doan's Kidney Pills. After using two boxes, I was rid of the trouble. I can say nothing too good for Doan's Kidney Pills."

ENTRANCE EXAMINATIONS

State Scholarships In Engineering Courses

Entrance Examinations for the Department of Engineering, as well as for the College of Arts and Sciences, will be held in the Civil Engineering Building, Homewood, Monday to Thursday, September 13th to 16th, 1920, beginning at 9 a. m. each day.

Applications for Scholarships in the Department of Engineering, established under the provisions of the Laws of Maryland, Chapter 90, 1912, will now be received. If there is more than one applicant for a particular scholarship, a competitive examination must be taken Friday, September 17th, 1920, beginning at 9 a. m. Appointments will be made soon thereafter.

Each Legislative District of Baltimore City and each county of the State, with the exception of Harford, Talbot and Worcester counties, will be entitled to one or more scholarships for the year 1920-1921, in addition to those which have already been assigned. In the counties mentioned above, all the available scholarships have been awarded.

Under the provisions of the Act of Assembly, the County and City Scholarships in the Department of Engineering are awarded only to deserving students whose financial circumstances are such that they are unable to obtain an education in Engineering unless free tuition be granted to them. The scholarships entitle the holders to free tuition, free use of text-books, and exemption from all regular fees. One of the scholarships in each county and in each Legislative District of the city carries also the sum of $200.

Scholarships may be awarded to graduates of Loyola College, St. John's College, Washington College, Western Maryland College, Maryland Agricultural College, Mt. St. Mary's College, Rock Hill College.

Two scholarships may be awarded "At Large".

Applicants should address The Registrar, The Johns Hopkins University, for blank forms of application and for catalogues giving information as to examinations, award of scholarships, and courses of instruction. The next session begins Tuesday, September 28th, 1920. 8-17

The COUNTRY GENTLEMAN

It's a safe farm weekly to read—a journal of farm facts. It costs $200,000 a year to gather the articles which make it what it is—and they're mighty well-spent dollars at that.

Trained investigators scour the country to seek out the material for THE COUNTRY GENTLEMAN'S practical and helpful stories on every aspect of the farm business—those meaty, sensible articles in crystal-clear, forceful English that help make almost 700,000 buyers better and more prosperous farmers. Mr. E. V. Wilcox, whose remarkable series on Farming With Water is now running, traveled over 25,000 miles to get the real facts before he put pen to paper! That's THE COUNTRY GENTLEMAN idea of Safe Service. Just $1.00 will bring you 52 book-size installments of this service, in 52 inspiring and colorful weekly issues crammed from cover to cover with reliable farm guidance and wholesome family entertainment — which, allow me to remark, is about as big a job as the 1920 dollar ever gets a chance to perform.

After all, isn't it true that experience is the best teacher?

In the case of a bank, long years of diversified experience are necessary in order to develop an ability to meet financial problems conservatively and with good judgment.

While we are proud of the thirty-one years that this bank has been in business we can point also to a wide range of banking experience which has made these years count for the utmost in schooling us for the kind of service we are now able to render our patrons.

FARMERS' PICNIC OCTOBER 7TH

Prominent Speakers—Tractor Demonstration—Music All Day

The first annual Field Meeting of the Somerset County Agricultural Association will be held Thursday, October 7th, on the farm of Mr. F. M. Cline, near Princess Anne, on the river road leading to Revell's Neck.

A tractor demonstration will be held in the morning beginning at 10 o'clock. Ten of the leading makes of tractors will take part in the demonstration and will give the farmers an opportunity to compare the tractors in field operations of plowing, discing and harrowing.

There will be an inspection trip to a nearby pine woods conducted by Assistant State Forester J. A. Cope. Mr. Cope will give a demonstration in the proper thinning of pine woods and the best methods of handling the farm wood lot will be explained.

There will also be a talk by Dr. I. K. Atherton on the single and double treatment for the control of hog cholera. A number of farmers have shown an interest in the double treatment of hogs, which renders them immune against cholera for life.

A basket picnic lunch at the noon hour and refreshments will be sold on the grounds, and music during the day will be furnished by the Crisfield band.

The afternoon program will include addresses by prominent speakers from the National and State organizations with which the county association is affiliated.

The farmers of the county should keep in mind the date and arrange to bring their families as it is planned to make this meeting the largest and best farmers' meeting ever held in the county.

Crisfield Threatened By Fire

Fire, supposed to have started from a carelessly dropped cigarette, consumed the large stables in the rear of the home of the late Nelson Poleyett, just above Immanuel M. E. Church, Crisfield, Monday afternoon of last week, and threatened to sweep out a large portion of the town before it could be checked.

The barn was used for the storage of barrels, a large number of which had been kerosene containers, and the entire contents of the building was very inflamable. With a heavy wind blowing, the flames began to spread as soon as they burst through the building, and at one time 14 other buildings, some of them an eighth of a mile away, were ignited by the blaze.

Army Worm Appears In County

The army worm is causing considerable damage in several fields in the county. One field of 12 acres of rye has been destroyed by the insects during the last two weeks. The insects have also caused some damage to corn. The pests may be controlled by plowing furrows and digging a small trench along side of the field in the direction which the insects are working and then destroying with kerosene. Poison bran mash is also of value in checking the spread of the insects when spread thinly over the ground ahead of them.

Farmers should closely watch their fields, and at the first appearance of the insects the county agent should be notified and he will gladly assist in controlling them.

Dr. Fisher Located In Salisbury

Dr. Charles T. Fisher, former superintendent of the Maryland General Hospital, Baltimore, has located in Salisbury with offices in the Advertiser building on East Main street.

Dr. Fisher is a native Eastern Shoreman, having been born in Princess Anne, where he at one time enjoyed a lucrative practice, leaving this community to accept the high post at the Maryland General Hospital in Baltimore. He is widely known in Somerset, Worcester and Wicomico counties, from which territory he will no doubt attract a broad practice. He is a son of Mrs. Charles T. Fisher, of this town, and a brother of Dr. William Henry Fisher, of Centerville, Md.

Baum--Todd Wedding

The Wicomico Countian, published in Salisbury last Saturday, says:

"Of much interest to the people of this community is the announcement of the wedding last Thursday of Mrs. Maud Lotta Baum to Mr. Samuel Houston Todd, both of this city.

"Mrs. Baum, who is a trained nurse, is the daughter of the late Edward A. Jones and Mrs. Jones. She is a widow and has one daughter, Miss Dorothy Baum.

"Mr. Todd is prominent in younger social circles. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. H. S. Todd and is associated with his father in the wholesale tobacco business."

OBSERVE THE GAME LAWS

The State Game Warden Gives Advice To Huntsmen

As the hunting season is approaching it would be well for our sportsmen to take the advice of State Game Warden E. Lee LeCompte, contained in the following letter which he requests us to publish:

Broken game laws mean less game and less sport for the hunter, and less business for the sporting goods people connected with the industry. Every person has a personal influence which counts in their community and can preserve a great majority of the game for future generations by helping prevent violations. This can be done by the public of this community to not only observe the game laws, but working in co-operation with the State Game Department for the upbuilding of the natural resources of this State.

If game of any kind is plentiful in your locality try and keep it so by insisting that all hunters thoroughly observe the game laws of our State. Had there been a bag limit and the same had been observed in years past, there would be today an abundance of birds and game animals in every locality of this State. In fact it is not too late now to save enough game this season to assure the sportsman ample shooting for another season by observing the bag limit and leave brooders in our covers to propagate during the season of 1921. It is a fatal mistake for any person who hunts to try and kill the last bird in a bevy or the last piece of game they can find. After a bevy of quail is shot down to from 4 to 6 birds, they should not be interrupted any more during the hunting season, but left alone as brooders to prapogate for next season. As time and experience have proven that unless we have production during the breeding season, we will not have good hunting during the open season on game, and to get production the sportsmen, landowners and others must unite and work in co-operation with this department to see that the birds in their locality get the proper amount of protection and food during the time when they need it the most, which is not only during the breeding season but also during the winter season when food is scarce, especially when the earth is covered with snow and sleet, and food is unavailable for birds and game.

Women's Ballots To Cost $100,000

Approximately 25 carloads of paper will be used to enable the 27,000,000 enfranchised women to mark ballots in the voting booth, says the American Forestry Association.

If half that number of lead pencils were to be put in to meet the extra election day business, 13,500,000 pencils at a cost of five cents each would mean an additional expense of $675,000 for the election boards.

About 13,400 reams or about 804,000 pounds of paper will be penciled by the women, either with a cross at the top or by scratching the ticket. Careful estimates of the association show the paper will cost $60,000 and that the press run on the ballots will equal $20,000. The total cost, including cutting and wrapping at $5,000, will be $100,000.

This figure does not take into consideration the fact that tons of paper will be used up in registering the women in order that they may vote. The association has only made estimates on the presidential election and the average size of the ballot in such a case is 16 by 22 inches. The association says registration, which is done in books, will probably use up as much more paper.

An Old-Fashion Apple Peeling

A very pleasant social affair was given on Monday evening of last week when the Misses Elizabeth and Mildred Martin entertained a number of their friends in honor of their guest, Miss Sarah Hasting, of Princess Anne, with an old-fashion apple peeling at their home at "Cedar Hall." After the apples were peeled games were played and refreshments served.

The guests present were: Misses Susie, Margie and Lula Custis, Cecil Benson, Stella and Hazel McGee, Lottie Taylor, Vivian Marriner, Daisy Taylor, and Messrs. Stokeley Dix, Austin Taylor, Willie Ennis, Willis Hall, Solomon Small, Elias Benson, Milton Howard, Garland Bull, Joshua Hall, Maurice Howard, Edgar Benson, Russell McGee, Ceylon Chum and Edwin Martin.

Movies Next Monday Night

Due to the Chautauqua being held in the Auditorium this week—Thursday, Friday and Saturday—Saturday night's attractions, the 6th episode of "The Trail of the Octopus," Sunshine comedy, "Lightweight Lover," and a Kinogram will be shown on Monday night, September 27th. This will make "The Trail of the Octopus" more interesting as the 7th episode will be on Saturday, October 2nd.

TO THE WOMEN OF SOMERSET COUNTY

You are urgently requested to attend a meeting, for the purpose of discussing registration of women voters, in the Auditorium, Princess Anne, to-morrow (Wednesday) night at 8 o'clock. Hon. W. Mason Shehan will address you. It is expected that Senator John Walter Smith and other prominent speakers will be present.

BOMB EXPLOSION IN NEW YORK

Wall Street Blast Kills 37 And Injures Over 200

A mysterious explosion in Wall street, near Broad, believed by train Department of Justice and police investigators to have been caused by an infernal machine, rocked the heart of New York's financial district at noon last Thursday, leaving death and destruction in its wake.

Twenty-nine persons are believed to have been killed, more than 200 were injured, the banking house of J. P. Morgan & Co., the Subtreasury and the Assay Office were partially wrecked and property damage estimated in excess of $1,000,000 was caused by the blast.

The noon hour had struck and an endless stream of office workers had just started pouring into the streets from buildings in the neighborhood, when suddenly a cloud of yellowish black smoke and a piercing jet of flame leaped from the street outside the Morgan office.

Then came a deafening blast. A moment later scores of men, women and children were lying prostrate on the ground and the streets were covered with debris from thousands of broken windows and the torn facades of adjacent buildings. Two minutes later the Stock and Curb Exchanges, the financial pulse of the world, had closed. Panic and confusion reigned in the heart of New York's financial district.

Thousands of clerks and stenographers fled in terror from adjoining structures. Scores fainted, fell and were trampled on in the rush. Meanwhile the noise of the explosion, which was heard throughout lower Manhattan and across the river in Brooklyn, brought thousands of the curious to the scene.

There can be little doubt that the explosion was no accident. The police, gathering up the sash weight slugs, went about the district and found that in no building within many blocks were such sash weights used. Dr. Charles Norris, chief medical examiner for the police department, examining the dead bodies and the injured, declared the explosive TNT.

But that does not lessen the mystery. Whether the stuff was hauled into the district in a rickety and badly kept wagon that stopped at the curb in front of the United States Assay Office a minute before the explosion, is not known. The wagon, once red and bearing, according to witnesses, the name of the Dupont De Nemours Company, was converted into dust and small kindlings by the blast. The dejected nag that dragged it along was blown to pulp.

Republicans Win In Maine

Maine gave an overwhelming plurality to the Republican ticket in the State election Monday of last week. With a total vote larger than 55,000 than the biggest ever previously cast in the State, Frederic H. Parkhurst, of Bangor, was elected Governor by a margin of 65,000 over his Democratic opponent, Bertrand G. McIntire, of Norway. The plurality was 17,000 more than the largest obtained by any other Gubernatorial candidate in the history of the State.

Four Republican Congressmen were elected by large pluralities. Congressman Wallace H. White, Jr., John A. Peters and Ira G. Hersey retained their seats and in the First district, where Congressman Louis B. Goodall, Republican, did not seek re-lection, Carroll L. Beedy, of Portland, Republican, was chosen.

Every member of the State Senate will be a Republican, while of a membership of 151 in the State House of Representatives the Democrats succeeded in electing 15. In the last Legislalature there were two Democratic Senators and 41 Democratic Representatives.

The increase in the total vote was very largely accounted for by the presence of women at the polls for the first time. All over the State women showed themselves eager to grasp the opportunity of exercising their new privilege and they were undaunted by a heavy downpour of rain in the afternoon. The result showed that most of them voted the Republican ticket.

NEW BISHOP IS CONSECRATED

Ceremony First Of Its Kind In The History Of Eastern Shore

The consecration of the Rev. George William Davenport as Bishop of the Diocese of Easton took place last Wednesday in Trinity Cathedral in Easton. Eight bishops, including the Rt. Rev. Daniel S. Tuttle, of Missouri, the senior Bishop of the church, took part in the solemn consecration exercises, which were followed that afternoon by a luncheon.

At the luncheon the new bishop pledged his support to the diocesian clergy, and while declining to state a definite policy, declared that he hoped to build up the Easton Diocese to a standard equal to the best. One of the things that he promised was to fill every empty parish in the diocese.

The consecration exercises were attended by a notable throng of churchmen, principally from the local diocese, but representatives of many other dioceses were present. Among the prelates of the church who took part in the ceremonies were Bishops Tuttle, who presided; William A. Leonard, of Ohio, and Beverley D. Tucker, of Southern Virginia, who were the consecrators; Frederick F. Reese, of Georgia, who preached the sermon; Frederick Burgess, of Long Island, and Edward C. Acheson, of Connecticut. The presenters were Bishop Arthur C. Thomas, coadjutor of Southern Virginia, and the Rev. Dr. A. R. Mansfield, superintendent of the Seaman's Institute in New York and deputy registrar of the Protestant Episcopal Church of the United States.

Every parish of the Easton diocese was represented by clery and laity. Many women prominent in church life on the Eastern Shore also were present at both the services and the luncheon afterward. The consecration guests were entertained by members of Trinity Cathedral and Christ Church congregations.

The diocese which Bishop Davenport will hold sway over comprises parishes in Caroline, Dorchester, Kent, Queen Anne's, Somerset, Talbot, Wicomico and Worcester counties. The standing committee, the supreme conference body of this diocese, is composed of the Rev. Dr. George C. Sutton, Oxford; the Rev. Henry Davies, Easton; the Rev. Henry B. Martin, Chestertown; Judge William H. Adkins, Easton, and Edwin Dashiell, Cambridge.

Bishop Davenport has brown hair with a decided reddish tint. Despite the fact that he is 50 years old he would not be taken for more than 35 or 40. He is of medium build, has a pleasing personality with an ever ready smile and uses much force in his delivery. He married Miss Jennie Platt Briggs, of Vermont, early in life. He has three children.

Legion Names Officers

State Commander—Chas. F. Macklin, Baltimore.

First Vice-Commander—Amos W. W. Woodcock, Salisbury.

Second Vice-Commander—William A. Huster, Cumberland.

Third Vice-Commander—A. Dana Hodgdon, Leonardtown.

State Treasurer—Robert Griswold, Baltimore.

Historian—Miss Ethel Johnson, Annapolis.

Chaplin—Rev. F. C. Reynolds, Baltimore.

A resolution indorsing the bill recently passed by Congress for the organization of an army for national defense, presented by the Military Committee was adopted. Several changes in the State constitution were made, including the section increasing the dues to the State Department from the various posts from 5 cents to $1 per year for each member.

The resolution indorsing the plan to have the State Memorial Building erected in Baltimore, which was adopted, drew a minority report from the committee which planned to have the money appropriated by the State Legislature distributed to Baltimore city and each of the 23 counties, to establish memorials. It was pointed out that this program would result in having erected slip-shod club-houses as against a $1,000,000 building that would be used as a historical depository and a memorial.

The September term of the Circuit Court for Wicomico county convened Monday morning of last week with Judges Bailey and Duer on the bench. The docket was the smallest for a jury term ever known in that county. The grand jury completed its labors and was discharged on Wednesday.

CHAUTAUQUA HERE THIS WEEK

Secure Season Tickets For The Big Event At The Auditorium

Next Thursday, Friday and Saturday will be Chautauqua days in Princess Anne. An attractive and interesting program will be furnished each afternoon and night.

On Thursday the Ballantine Operatic Quintet will give two concerts—afternoon and night. In the Ballantine Quintet are Anna McLaughlin, soprano; Lillian Vogel, contralto; Wm. Schwartz, tenor; Alfred MacIsaac, baritone, and Henry Swislowsky, pianist and accompanist.

Wearing the costumes for the various parts, they enact the famous scenes from the operas they sing. They bring with them the training of ther former experiences and drive home in vivid fashion the conceptions of the composers who wrote the operas. Their ability lies not only in singing, but in acting the scenes from the operas in their repertiore. At night Walfred Lindstrom will lecture on "The Magic Circle," a discussion of one of the most important problems before the American people today, the rural problem, involving proper visualization of the all important part which agriculture and the agriculturists play in the scheme of our national life. Mr. Lindstrom is practical in every way and holds up the ideals of life in a manner that appeals to all his hearers in a sensible way.

Friday the McGrath Brothers, banjo artists, will give two concerts—afternoon and night. The two brothers toured the world as a banjo team and their successes are chronicled from Maine to California. With them, as soprano and pianist, will be Miss Henrietta Fraser. Miss Fraser is a Chicagoan and an artist of successful Chautauqua and Lyceum experience. Lovers of banjo music will be favored with an entertainment of high calibre on the second day. At night Dr. Frank Bohn will lecture on "Revolutionary Europe." Dr. Bohn was traveling in Germany at the war's beginning; then he withdrew to Switzerland and has subsequently been through the seething countries of central Europe. He will give the facts of the hour and their far reaching results. Hear his lecture on the second evening.

Saturday night the Chautauqua players will present "It Pays to Advertise"—one of the most successful of modern plays. It is so well balanced in basic human values that it cheers the heart and diverts the mind at the same operation.

The central idea of "It Pays to Advertise" is an old one. It is the familiar story of the rich father and the idle son. The father makes a wager with his stenographer that she cannot induce the son to go to work. She succeeds in getting him interested in a business proposition. He forms a partnership with a fellow who believes with all his heart and amazing nerve that it pays to advertise.

The father is a soap manufacturer and the young fellows enter the same field, flooding the field with ads of their soap. The ad campaign was a tremendous success but the young enthusiasts forgot to make soap. The public demands the new soap and the youngsters force the soap trust to buy them out at an enormous price.

The refreshingly clean tone and genial humanity of "It Pays to Advertise" will mark it as the big feature of the entire program.

Reorganization of Washington College

Saturday evening, September 4th, there was held at Washington College, in Chestertown, the largest and most enthusiastic alumni meeting that has ever gathered on the Eastern Shore. About one hundred and seventy-five persons attending representing all parts of the country.

After an excellent dinner served by the ladies of Chestertown, plans were submitted for bringing about a reorganization of the college, for lifting the present debt, for creating an endowment fund and for increasing the attendance at the college.

The educational policy of the college was announced to be service to the Eastern Shore of Maryland. Toward this end it is proposed to establish at an early date a department of commerce and a department of farm life, both of which are to deal primarily with topics of interest to the Eastern Shore. It is also proposed to improve the women's dormitory and to establish a department of domestic science. All of these advances wait only upon the securing of funds by the financial committees.

When Some One Cares

By R. RAY BAKER

(©, 1920, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Jack Reynolds, in a fur coat and heavy head-dress, sweltered under a June sun, as he stood on a Texas flying field and conversed with three men clad in army olive-drab.

Nearby was an airplane, loaded with gas and oil, the motor tuned to perfection. Several mechanics were going over the machine to see that every nut and bolt was tight, every connection secure.

About the field a crowd had assembled. Predominating in the assembly were many men, although a number of civilians and several women, old and young, were on hand.

The three men grouped about Jack were arguing with him.

"I tell you it can't be done," one of them, a venerable officer, with white mustache, protested. "If you should get up 40,000 feet you'd die from cold and lack of oxygen; besides, the air would be too rare to hold the ship up."

"Nevertheless," said Jack, firmly, "I'm going up 40,000 feet if there's any possible way of getting there. Major Schroeder made it 36,000 feet at Dayton, you know."

"You'll never live to tell of it," said another of the group. "Schroeder nearly paid with his life, you'll remember. He was lucky, that's all. Better let him keep the altitude record."

"I'm going to try for it, anyhow," declared Jack, expelling a cloud of tobacco smoke.

"If you don't think anything of your own life," said the third member of the group, "have a thought for those you leave behind and who will suffer because of your foolhardiness. Think of your father, your mother, your brothers, your sisters—your sweetheart."

Gradually Circling Higher and Higher.

Jack smiled, somewhat grimly.

"I have none of those," and he turned to the waiting plane. "If I had just one of them I'd stay down here on the ground."

He mounted to the seat and tried the controls. His lifebelt was buckled round him, the engine started by an assistant, and the big bird took a quick run and soared aloft, gradually circling higher and higher until it became a speck.

The group of three kept vigil in a building at an edge of the flying field. The officer with the white mustache sat at a wireless telephone.

"I've got him," he announced, after listening for some time. "He says he's up 25,000 feet and still going."

In the attic of a modest dwelling in a middle western city a girl sat in an old rocker and untied a blue ribbon from a bulky pack of letters.

The girl was pretty, although her form was rather frail. She had an abundance of burnished-gold hair. There was much graveness in her looks and demeanor, and something expressive of sadness about the downward curves at the lip corners.

She sighed as she separated the letters one from the other, and selecting one haphazardly drew it from its envelope.

"Good old Jack," she said, somewhat wistfully, as she read, and after she had finished she sat holding it idly in her hand while she looked through the attic window at—nothing.

She resumed her perusal of the messages from the past, but as she separated the letters her eyes suddenly took on an expression of astonishment, and she held up a bulky envelope, addressed to her, but unopened.

"Here's one I never read!" she exclaimed. "How could it have happened? Possibly when I was down at the lake last summer little sister got this from the post office."

She looked at the postmark and made out that the letter had been mailed in Texas just a year ago, lacking a few days.

"It must have been his last," she decided, and suddenly she tore open the envelope. As she read her face became pale.

"This—this is a tragedy," she breathed, but this time she did not hold the letter idly and look out the attic window at—nothing.

She left the rest of the letters on the floor and rushed down to the library, where she busied herself with paper and pen, and wrote a telegram. Calling the telegraph office on the telephone, she read the message. Then she sat and again perused the closing lines of the letter she had unearthed in the attic. These lines were:

"I know it may be a forlorn hope—this hope that you will consent to marry me; but I just can't keep still any longer. So consider this a proposal, and I will look for your answer by return mail. If I do not receive a letter I will know that your answer is 'no,' and then—well, then, I shall enter the aviation service, as I have been considering doing for some time.

"With love, JACK."

The earth was so far below it looked like a hazy dream world. Many clouds intruded between the distant globe and the aviator; it was like tossing about in a boat on a white-capped sea, looking down through the depths to an ancient city engulfed by a flood.

Frost covered the flyer's clothing; it hung to his eyebrows and his nose, and a film of it held his mouth shut. What little of his face showed through the headdress was almost devoid of blood. He was breathing heavily but he was smiling, somewhat grimly, as he looked at his altimeter and saw that he was 30,000 feet above the earth.

Mechanically he pulled back the stick and began climbing further. As he went up the difficulty of breathing became more pronounced, and frost gathered; but he did not hesitate. Into a wireless telephone strapped about his shoulders he called:

"Hello, Major; 31,000 feet now."

He was struggling to breathe, but he managed to speak the few words rather calmly, although the effort was prodigious.

"I'm a fool to go up any farther," he thought, "but what's the use of returning to the sorrowful old world? There's not much sunshine any more—since Elsie went back on me."

He pulled back the stick and continued the climb, and his suffering increased with every foot he mounted. He began to grow weak and his head to roar; but he did not falter.

"Hello, major; 33,000 feet," he said faintly into the phone. The major's voice came back:

"Hello, Jack. Listen, here's a telegram I received for you. It just arrived. Do you want it now?"

Jack was surprised. Who would be sending him a telegram? He wondered if it was a ruse to make him go down.

"Let's have the message," Jack called into the phone.

"Here it is," said the major across the expanse of space.

"Somebody mislaid your last letter to me while I was away, and I just found it today. If you still mean what it says, my answer is, Yes, yes, yes."

Jack stopped gasping. He hesitated a moment, and looked at the altimeter with a peculiar smile.

Slowly he moved the stick forward and gradually the plane began to descend.

As far as Jack Reynolds is concerned, Major Schroeder can keep the altitude record.

WANTED REST OF HER NAME

Churchgoer Had Missed Sermon but He Was Keen for Information on the Subject.

A tired-looking individual entered a downtown church on a Sunday evening. Finding a pew, he made himself comfortable and awaited the sermon. The minister, after the usual formalities, announced that his topic would be "Saved by Grace."

The stranger, yielding to the soothing atmosphere of the house of worship, fell asleep almost immediately after the announcement of the sermon subject. Half an hour later he awoke, almost simultaneously with the close of the sermon, and, suddenly remembering the topic, whispered to a nearby fellow-worshiper: "Wasn't his subject 'Saved by Grace?'"

"Yes," was the reply.

"Grace who?" was the next question.

Naturally there was no answer.—Rehoboth Sunday Herald.

Heritage of Hate.

I know four men, all old bachelors who live together. They are all well educated, have good professions, and are what the world calls successful, but they all abhor womanhood. They were adopted from an orphan asylum when children by a rich old man who had been disappointed in married life and was an avowed hater of women.

He educated the boys and left them his money, but lived long enough to instill in their minds distrust and suspicion of all womankind, and as he was their best friend (in fact, all the friend or home that they ever had) they naturally loved him and believed absolutely in all his teachings.

I have often thought when I see these men, good citizens, what a pity that a man who had such influence, and capable of raising such boys, should have such a warped side to his nature.—Chicago Tribune.

A Wise Prophet.

"I thought you told me you had a good idea of who was going to be elected."

"So I had. I knew it would not be any of the people who had not been nominated."

Permanent Whitewash.

Mix six pounds of whiting with cold water, taking care to leave no lumps. It should be about the consistency of thick cream. In an old jar steep three ounces of size in cold water for 12 hours. Then make it very hot, but be careful not to let it boil. Pour it while hot into the whitewash. It is most essential that the size be fresh or the smell of it will be quite intolerable. Any coloring—green, pink, blue, or fawn—may be added.

Great Man's Queer Fancy.

Daniel Webster had a curious fancy for painting the faces of his cattle. One week the poor beasts would walk around with blue faces, and the next would appear with red ones. The effect was so novel that it pleased him, and from that time forth he changed the color whenever he had a few minutes to spare, and would laugh heartily at the astonishment of his friends when they saw the queer-looking beasts.

Rubber-Using Insects.

When Para rubber trees are tapped, after the gum has run into receptacles and stiffened a species of large black ant is accustomed to cut out pieces of the rubber and carry them away. Bees also find use for India rubber, and some species in South America actually cut the bark of trees that produce resinous substances in order to cause a flow of the sap. The gum is employed by the bees as a ready-made wax for their nests.

Peculiar Amusement.

Francis Bacon was so fond of fine clothes that he spent his odd time in trying to devise new styles and features of dress. During his life he made some 1,200 drawings of freakish costumes. When he could not get anybody to wear them, he hired a number of men to don the grotesque attire and to promenade the streets for his pleasure.

Unearth Tombstone of 1769.

The tombstone of "Johnathan, son of Robert and Esther Plume, deceased December 16, 1769," was unearthed by workmen excavating for a sewer connection in Branforth place, Newark. It is known that during Revolutionary days a cemetery was located in this vicinity. —New York Evening Mail.

Race Won by the Slowest.

At Saint Cloud, Paris, there was once a novel cycling race. The course was laid down a very steep hill, and the contestant who came in last was declared the winner. Brakes were prohibited, and riders were not permitted to set foot on the ground or to tack across the course.

Costly Nibbling.

A St. John chocolate manufacturer who told the Canadian industrial relations commission that his employees last year nibbled up $18,000 worth of goods, employs 190 persons, so the mode of self-help chosen by them amounted to almost $100 each.

Elephant Labor a Necessity.

It is said that Siam's teak forests could not be worked without the assistance of elephants, as hauling machines could not be used in the inaccessible places where teak trees grow. An elephant can handle from fifty to seventy logs in a season.

Childish Vocabulary.

The number of words used by children two years old varies from a very few words for the backward child up to 1,000 words for more precocious children. The average number is put at between 200 and 400.

Tallest Spire.

The record is held by the spire of Norwich cathedral, England, which is 314 feet high. The original spire was destroyed by lightning in 1463, the present spire being about 450 years old.

Men Not Practical.

Men are sentimental gossips. They are not practical enough. Women are. Since the beginning of time it's women that have had to do the practical things.—George Bernard Shaw.

Figuring on a Crowd.

Gasoline Vs. the Rod.

The old-fashioned father who used to whip his son for a violation of the rules of the house has a new method of punishment. He locks the garage. —Los Angeles Times.

Greenland.

Greenland was so named because of the mantle of mosses, grasses, shrubs and flowering plants which cover it in summer, literally making it a "green" land.

Embarrassing.

Green Maid (announcing a caller)—"Please, mum, is this the lady you told me always to say you was out to?"—Boston Transcript.

On the Level.

Never Change.

Mystery Solved.

A moving picture bears the interrogation title, "Whom am I?" Easy! You're Cyril.—Boston Transcript.

OUR SENIOR SENATOR

It should be the pride of Maryland to re-elect Senator John Walter Smith by an overwhelming majority.

In all of Maryland's splendid history there has never been in either branch of Congress a Maryland member who achieved a finer record of usefulness in all the substantial results. He has given his state great returns. Maryland's interests have been safe in his hands and no consideration of partizanship has ever stood in the way of high, patriotic service for all the people. It is not too much to say that he has been the most productive representative Maryland has ever had in either the House or the Senate. He takes care of his State; he looks after the affairs of Marylanders, without respect to party; he is a high-grade, typical Marylander always on the job and full of zeal and courage.

John Walter Smith was born in this State of fine Maryland ancestry. He was educated in Maryland; his business success has been in Maryland; he has spent his money at home and he has passed his life among Maryland people. He was a member of the Maryland Senate for ten years and was president of that body. He became a member of Congress and served until called to the governship of the State. His four years as governor will be known as the great constructive term of that high office. Then in 1908 he was elected United States Senator for the unexpired term of the lamented William Pinkney Whyte and was twice re-elected. This long experience covering Maryland's modern life and its most intimate and important affairs is not only unique in itself but constitutes an asset of the first-class to the State and the people. Through Senator Smith Maryland has extraordinary efficiency in its contact with national legislation and operations, and if any Marylander desires advice or help Senator Smith is ever ready with the offer of his knowledge and assistance.

This personal service is a very fine and attractive phase of Senator Smith's long career in politics. We Marylanders have our party divisions and differences but at heart we are all neighbors who like to aid one another. In Senator Smith this virtue is wonderfully strong. He is a good, honest, open partisan, but when it comes to service he is the friend of all Marylanders and he has been of constant and successful help to men, women and children of all parties. Any ordinary person would have broken down under the strain of responding to the calls that came to him, but Senator Smith is an extraordinary man with the genius of organization and quick decision and thus he has been enabled to perform a quantity of work and attend to a variety of tasks that would appal the ordinary man, even though he be in the United States Senate.

From the standpoint of service and usefulness it is to the best interest of Maryland that Senator Smith should be re-elected.

There is a further consideration which we must bear in mind. Senator Smith is among the few members who stand out as controlling factors in our national government. He makes excellent speeches when there is need of them, but he does not speak for the sake of talking. In the hard tasks of the Senate he is an assiduous worker and here is where his value is beyond all estimate. His ripe judgment, his wide experience, his splendid vision and his safety and sanity are priceless in these troubled times, and they make him a true senator in the national sense, one who is needed to help guide the ship of state through the aftermath of the World War.

To the knowing and discerning voter there can be no hesitation this year. Mr. Weller is not a typical Marylander. He was born in this state but his business life and ideals belong to the business of stock-broking as it is peculiarly developed in Boston. Mr. Weller's only service to the State was as head of the road system for a few years and his claim that he built the good roads of Maryland is grotesque. While Mr. Weller was politically the chief of the work the real building was done by Major Shirley, a fact so well-known that there can be no dispute about it. Nor need there be any dwelling upon why and how Mr. Weller became the Republican candidate for the United States Senate. The point is that neither in ability nor in experience nor in Maryland quality can he be preferred to Senator Smith.

It thus follows that in addition to the solid vote of his party Senator Smith should secure the support of thousands of Republicans and of all the independents. These are new days in politics and government and we need the wisdom and stability of the safe and solid men whose worth and safety have been proven by years of faithful service.

Senator Smith is one of the great senators and Maryland cannot afford to lose his services.

(Democratic State Central Committee)

There are 2,000,000 more women than men in England and Wales. And now that they are getting into parliament, they are in a position of asking the men what they are going to do about it.

One advantage of being a dark horse in a campaign for a presidential nomination is that the dusky one does not, so to speak, have to dig very deep into the pockets of his friends to "influence" the primary vote.

SOUR STOMACH INDIGESTION

Thedford's Black-Draught Highly Recommended by a Tennessee Grocer for Troubles Resulting from Torpid Liver.

East Nashville, Tenn.— The efficiency of Thedford's Black-Draught, the genuine, herb, liver medicine, is vouched for by Mr. W. N. Parsons, a grocer of this city. "It is without doubt the best liver medicine, and I don't believe I could get along without it. I take it for sour stomach, headache, bad liver, indigestion, and all other troubles that are the result of a torpid liver.

"I have known and used it for years, and can and do highly recommend it to every one. I won't go to bed without it in the house. It will do all it claims to do. I can't say enough for it."

Many other men and women throughout the country have found Black-Draught just as Mr Parsons describes—valuable in regulating the liver to its normal functions, and in cleansing the bowels of impurities.

Thedford's Black-Draught liver medicine is the original and only genuine. Accept no imitations or substitutes. Always ask for Thedford's. E 98

UNCLE HENRI

By JACK LAWTON.

(©, 1920, Western Newspaper Union.)

Beatrix and Dora were learning for the first time what it meant to be strangers. They never had been strangers in the home city where hospitable doors were opened in welcome at their coming. This renting a tiny cottage in Wellstown village was one of Beatrix's ideas. Both girls were studying ambitiously for their future chosen careers.

It was Beatrix who heard the remark which first rankled and later brought amusement. The two girls wondered vaguely, after a time of residence elapsed, why their village neighbors failed to return their overtures of friendliness.

"I was leaving the post office," Beatrix said, "and Miss Callie, the postmistress, thought I was out of hearing.

"'Those queer girls in Barton's cottage were at the lawn fete last night,' she told a caller, 'but I guess they found out that Wellstown doesn't take notice of strangers who belong to nobody.'"

Dora looked up from her French.

"So we are strangers," she said. "Shall we send for the mayor of our city to present us, or settle down resigned in our ignored state?"

"I am going to astonish this exacting village with my commendable relations," Beatrix precisely answered. "adopt—say an uncle and aunt of renown and send to them lovely intimate post cards—via Miss Callie. Who shall the receiver be? I'll add a line to the effect that 'uncle' need not reply to my postal messages."

"Stop raving," Dora interrupted, "I've thought out your man—your uncle, I mean. As we are not sisters he can't be my uncle, too." Don't you remember the name Henri Smith on that big lumber factory over in Gaston? Some one said that Henri Smith was a millionaire, owned most of the town. Smith's a good universal name. How would you like an Uncle Henri?"

"Fine!" agreed Beatrix.

Merrily she ran for some village view cards, and with a giggling observer, inscribed her first postal.

"Dear Uncle Henri," it read, "Dora and I are having a quiet time in Wellstown, hope to go over to see you soon. Your loving niece ——."

Beatrix hesitated.

"Just sign Trix," Dora suggested. "No one has ever called you Trix."

The card was not returned. Neither was a second, which told Uncle Henri how the girls had enjoyed his short visit with them at "Rose Lodge." Love to Aunt Elna was added to this communication. The girls congratulated themselves over the naming of the imaginary aunt.

"Might be her family pet name," Beatrix said.

Miss Callie was certainly interested. Moreover, certain heretofore distant resident Wellstown women smiled and bowed to the strangers in passing. The postals had done the work. A niece of the great lumber manufacturer was worth cultivating.

"Reckon," Miss Callie said soundingly, as she handed over a square white envelope, "that's an invitation for you to the usual midsummer celebration at Green Acres, your Uncle Henri Smith's place. We always read in the paper of the famous garden party he gives each year."

All at once Beatrix was possessed of an uncomfortably guilty feeling. The letter that Dora had merrily mailed from Gaston during her shopping trip of the day before, might seem opportune, but the joke was going a little too far. It was weighing heavily on the girl's conscience. She wished desperately that the prank had never started. It must stop now and with some explanation. But what could the honest explanation be? A man was waiting on the steps of Rose Lodge when she returned, a youngish kindly-faced man with a quizzical smile.

"Miss Fairfax?" he inquired.

Beatrix wonderingly nodded.

"I am Henri Smith of Gaston," the man appallingly announced. "I have received several communications from a certain Miss 'Trix' of Wellstown. As I spell my name Henri, to distinguish it from the other Henry Smiths, I could not think the address mistaken. Yet I have no niece. So upon driving through your village today I asked your postmistress experimentally, if she could direct me to the niece of a certain Henri Smith. Directly she sent me here. I'll confess," the man added frankly, "that I was curious concerning the solution of the small mystery."

And then—the overburdened conscience of Beatrix found its relief. Honestly she made confession.

"You cannot think more contemptuously of it all than I do myself," she ended. But Mr. Henri Smith was really a great man. Great enough to understand the humor of the circumstance and to sympathize in its humiliating outcome. So he sank back in the rocker on the flower bordered porch, waiting to meet, he smilingly said, "his niece's friend." It was after he had returned to Gaston that a second square envelope came with a genuine invitation to the two girls for the famous garden party at Green Acres. The invitation began informally "Dear Trix," and was signed "Your Uncle Henri."

Below in small letters was written:

"There is no Aunt Elna—I'm an eligible bachelor."

NOTICE TO TAXPAYERS

Notice is hereby given that the levy of the year 1920 for State and County Taxes has been made in Somerset county.

Pursuant to said levy the taxes are now in my hands for collection. A discount of three per cent. will be allowed on all county taxes paid on or before October 31st, 1920, and a discount of two per cent. if paid during November, 1920. No discount will be allowed on county taxes paid after November, 30th, 1920.

The law allowing discounts on State taxes has been abolished, therefore no discount will be allowed on State taxes.

The law provides that both County and State taxes must be paid in order to obtain the discount.

State taxes bear interest from October 1st, 1920, at the rate of six per centum per annum. County taxes bear interest from January 1st, 1921, at the rate of six per centum per annum, and interest is charged for the full month from the first day of each month.

R. MARK WHITE,
Treasurer and Collector of State and County Taxes.

Ford
THE UNIVERSAL CAR
One Hundred Per Cent. "Pep"

When your Ford car or your Ford truck doesn't display its usual quantity or quality of "pep" and dash, it's time to have a repairman who understands the Ford mechanism give it the "once over"—then make the necessary adjustments or repairs. And return it to you full of its old time power, "pep," energy, pull and service. You'll notice the difference.

We employ only skilled Ford mechanics—men who know how Ford cars are made, and how they should be kept in order to give the most efficient and economical service. And our shop equipment boasts a great many specially designed tools and time-saving devices and machinery. In our stockroom is a complete assortment of repair parts—genuine Ford parts—that are exactly the same as their tough, sinewy originals in the Ford car.

For prompt repair work or adjustments, phone or drive to our garage. Don't risk chanches, play fair with your Ford car. Keep it in the hands of its friends, the authorized Ford dealers. Insist on genuine Ford parts.

Vain Warnings.

An eminent actor-manager tells a story concerning a clergyman and his actor son. Prior to his going on the stage the father wrote to the manager, saying, "My son, John, has threatened to go on the stage, and I want you to stop him." However, shortly afterward, the son did go on the stage, and the manager, meeting him one day, asked how his father took it. "I have not seen him," was the reply, "but he takes some interest in me, because whenever any actor is charged with a crime he underlines the report of it in the newspapers and sends it to me."

Nine Points of the Law.

It has been said that success in litigation requires a good deal of patience, a good deal of money, a good cause, a good lawyer, a good counsel, good witnesses, a good jury, a good judge, and, last but not least, good luck. But the saying is really a part of the proverb which says that "possession is nine points of the law," and that anybody is welcome to the tenth if they can get anything out of it.

Ancient Dentistry.

Interesting specimen of Etruscan dentistry is now in the civic museum at Corneto of the Necropolis of Tarquinii and consists of three teeth, or, more properly, four abutment attachments and three supplies, the attachments being gold rings and the teeth supplied being the central incisors and bicuspids. The two central incisors are made from a single ox tooth grooved down to give it the appearance of two upper central incisors.

Significant Borders.

On certain fete days in some parts of Brittany the marriageable girls appear in red petticoats with white or yellow borders around them. The number of borders denote the portion the father is willing to give his daughter. Each white band denotes 100 francs per annum; each yellow band represents 1,000 francs a year.

Make Address Sure.

When wrapping magazines for the mail, the important thing is to make sure that the magazine and its wrapper will not part company. Lay a cord lengthwise inside the magazine, and after sealing and addressing the wrapper, tie the cord once the long way and once around the middle of the roll.

Thought He Had Treasure Trove.

Harry Lee, a negro laborer, helping to pull down an old residence in Baltimore, unearthed a metal box about a foot in diameter, expectantly removed the rusty lid, and found inside a sack containing several old coins, dated in the early part of the eighteenth century, and two old flints.

The Goddess Vesta.

Vesta was the goddess of the home and fire, and her temple was the oldest in Rome. It contained no image of the goddess, but had a fire which was rekindled by friction on the Roman New Year and attended constantly by the vestal vergins.

The Way of a Man.

If a man's car is on time every day for a month he accepts the service with a grunt. If it is late ten minutes one day he throws a conniption fit of dissatisfaction and wants to overturn something that is right side up.—Toledo Blade.

Modern Girl.

A Clay Center physician sent the office girl out to do collecting, according to the Dispatch. She was back in less than an hour with a ring, a marriage certificate, a man, and $1, all of which she had collected.—Kansas City Star.

Quite a Send-Off.

From an English paper: Rev. E. Thomas will preach his farewell sermon on Sunday next. The choir will render an anthem of joy and thanksgiving specially composed for the occasion.—Boston Transcript.

Value of Ton of Gold.

The mint value of gold does not vary, but remains constant at $20.67183462 per troy ounce, or $18,84151 avoirdupois. Basing a calculation upon this value, a ton of gold would be equivalent to $602,928.

Apostle-Spoons."

"Apostle-spoons," called also "gossip-spoons," were gilt spoons given by the sponsors, or "gossips," to a child at its christening. They were so called because each spoon had a figure of an apostle on the handle.

String Holder.

A convenient string holder may be made of a small funnel hung in a corner of a kitchen. A ball of string should be put in the funnel, the loose cord extending down through the stem.

That Is, Some Men.

Before marriage a man has been known to declare himself unworthy of his sweetheart's love, and after marriage to spend about two-thirds of his time proving it.—Chicago News.

Efficiency's Reward.

Efficiency, like virtue, has to be its own reward and when a man does a big job well everybody says anybody could have done it.—Ohio State Journal.

Aren't People Queer?

Exchange—"Mr. John Roberts has gone south following his recent illness." Foolish to follow it; he should be glad to get rid of it.

The "good mixer" does not necessarily mix any drinks.

It spite of Gen. Apathy, the candidates are all going to vote November 2nd.

Regret and reform both begin with the same syllable, but the similarity often ends right there.

The umbrellas you buy nowadays will wear a long time provided you leave them unopened in a closet.

Safety Congress to meet at Milwaukee where the local idea of safety is mostly a well stocked and secured cellar.

The pantry shelf where the housewife formerly use to mix her home-made bread is now occupied by her husband making home brew.

This country pays its movie stars several hundred times as much as its teachers and yet people kick because the schools don't go to work.

Within a few years people who used to run to the window to look at an automobile passing by, now scarcely look out when they hear an airplane overhead.

A girl may not be able to drive an automobile, but if her hair is swatted over her ears in the latest style she comes down among the crowded traffic confidently.

The miners who go on a "vacation" just when the winter supply of coal has to be dug are likely to find some one else on a vacation when groceries have to be delivered.

Some people favor democracy, others want aristocracy. The world has just been fighting against autocracy and plutocracy is universally condemned, but a lot of people will never be satisfied until they get foolocracy.

Some one asks how people will be able to travel on the crowded roads when everyone in the country has an automobile? O well, about half of them will be laid up at any one time as the result of smash-ups, so what's the use of worrying?

When the taxpayers of Somerset county put up their good money to build highways, it was not as some people seem to think for the purpose of establishing automobile race tracks. Also the motorists who holler for good roads are reminded that their speeding cars are wearing out two miles of highway for everyone that the taxpayers at present feel able to improve.

Governor Cox and Franklin Roosevelt keep the vital issues of the campaign as expressed by the campaign slogan: "Peace, Progress and Prosperity." That is to say, they stress the League of Nations, the progressive ideals of government and the economic and industrial features of the platform and reduction of taxation. These are the real issues that appeal to men and women alike, as demonstrated by Governor Cox in West Virginia and Indiana and by Mr. Roosevelt on his western trip, where he found the people progressive, strong for the league and against Mr. Harding's plan to make the high cost of living a litte higher.

CONTINENTAL AIR FLIGHT

As the first trip of the air mail service between New York and San Francisco carried 16,000 letters the demand for this service is no mere fad. It means a lot to a business man to cut in two the time needed to deliver a letter to a distant customer.

It is now going to take 54 hours to deliver a letter from coast to coast by this route. This schedule should be cut down. When it is demonstrated to be a paying proposition, relays of planes will carry on pouches without delay. As aviation improves faster flights will be made. It seems reasonable to suppose that mail within a few years will be delivered from coast to coast in 24 hours.

When the California farmer can get the missing part for his truck from Detroit in one day the vast extent of this country will cease to interpose many obstacles in the way of industry.

"BOYS, GET THE MONEY"

There may be some dispute and some debate about the exactness of Governor Cox figures of the Republican slush fund, but there can be no denial of the fact that he has shown by official Republican documents that commercialism is written all over the Republican campaign-organized commercialism. "Boys, get the money" is the refrain that runs through every line of the Republican campaign.

"Harding and Coolidge have the confidence of the people—but, boys, get the money. The platform is sound enough to hold the weight of the Nation—but, boys, get the money."

This is simply another example of Republican reaction. It is back to Dudley's "blocks of five;" it's a return to Quay's "shaking the plum tree."

The general staff of the Republican party in their plan of campaign do not rely on appeals to reason, to patriotism and right; they rely on money. The candidate is a great and good man—but, boys, get the money; America first—but, boys, get the money; an understanding amongst the nations of the world is great and glorious—but, boys, get the money.

Too many American boys have recently died for their country for us to put the Presidency up for sale to the highest bidder this year.

A Grateful Letter

It is in trying conditions like that related below by Mrs. Geo. L. North, of Naples, N. Y., that proves the worth of Chamberlain's Colic and Diarrhoea Remedy. "Two years ago last summer" she says "our little boy had dysentery. At that time we were living in the country eight miles from a doctor. Our son was taken ill suddenly and was about the sickest child I ever saw. He was in terrible pain all the time and passed from one convulsion into another. I sent my husband for the doctor and after he was gone thought of a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic and Diarrhoea Remedy in the cupboard. I gave him some of it and he began to improve at once. By the time the doctor arrived he was out of danger."

THE WONDERFUL CORN CROP

With the biggest corn crop on record now practically assured, the United States can not be otherwise than prosperous. Many conditions may be unfavorable, but with abundant food and some to sell to Europe, there is bound to be good business.

The experiences of the war taught people to use corn more than formerly. Where wheat and oats were almost exclusively used as cereal breakfast foods, now you see many popular brands of corn products in every grocery and they almost exceed in common use those derived from wheat.

Not merely should this abundant harvest bring down prices of all these foods but it should reduce the cost of feeding swine, cattle and poultry and thus make possible very reasonable prices for meat.

Chronic Catarrh

Our manner of living makes us very susceptible to colds and a succession of colds causes chronic catarrh a loathsome disease with which it is estimated that ninety-five per cent of our adult population are afflicted. If you would avoid chronic catarrh you must avoid colds or having contracted a cold get rid of it as quickly as possible. Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is highly recommended as a cure for colds and can be depended upon.

The* COUNTRY GENTLEMAN

That's why you find this great national weekly championing every cooperative venture among farmers—it knows that whether it be in the purchase of farm machinery, the canning of milk or the shipping of hogs, working together is the plan that pays.

THE COUNTRY GENTLEMAN'S stories of cooperation among farmers are famous the country over. You doubtless know about Dean Davenport's articles on the Farm Bureau Federation; quite as important are Harry R. O'Brien's discussions of successful farmers' associations and Stuart Blythe's studies of the marketing groups.

Next week's issue is typical of this service to cooperatives: John R. MacMahon tells why the next Premier of Canada is likely to be a farmer; E. H. Taylor describes Double-Track Cooperation among milk producers; Stuart Blythe describes cooperation's share in making $44,000,000 worth of butter in one state!

All this is just a small part of the 52 big issues that will begin coming to you next week if you—

Many and Varied Accidents Befall Humanity.

Files of Insurance Companies Are Full of Cases Where Injuries Have Been the Result of Most Trivial Happenings.

Accident insurance, or insurance which pays benefits in case of temporary disability, is carried by a great many people. The claim agent whose business it is to investigate reported injuries often meets with amusing incidents. The following were furnished by an agent of a large insurance company:

"Some captive rattlesnakes in a restaurant escaped from a box in which they were confined and so frightened one of the patrons that in his haste to get out he fell in front of me, and in getting up, came up underneath me, tossing me over his head."

"I was in bed and dreamed that a burglar was bending over me. I struck at him so hard that I was thrown on the floor with arm extended and broke my collarbone."

"Assisting a lady who had an umbrella under her arm, to board a car, the point of the umbrella was thrust into my left eye."

"In a playful mood I kicked at my wife while barefooted and accidentally struck her on the knee, thereby spraining the big toe of my left foot."

"My arm encircled the neck of a young lady. I suddenly withdrew it and the thumb of my left hand came in contact with a brooch, penetrating the thumb almost to the bone."

"My wife was curling her hair. I ran against her and the hair curler struck my eye."

"I was embraced by a friend who playfully said that he could make me cry—fractured my rib."

"On a private yacht, I had just had a highball, got up, the boat gave a lurch and I sat down on the glass."

"Looking for a leak in a natural gas pipe with a lighted match—explosion followed."

"I missed my train and while walking on the country road I fell over a cow lying in the road. As I fell the cow got up, striking me and also stepping on my foot."

"Sitting in a chair in a barber shop and billiard parlor, a ball from a pool table nearby struck me on the nose, breaking nose and injuring one eye."

"I had been talking with another man, and as I started to walk along didn't notice a woman had pushed a baby carriage directly in front of me—fell over it."

"I was going down the walk in front of my house when an automobile wheel which had come off two blocks away rolled down the hill and struck me, fracturing both bones of the right leg."

"I was riding in an automobile when it struck a hole in the road, causing my teeth to come together with such force that the lower jaw was fractured."

"I was looking for burglars, and was accidentally mistaken by one of my neighbors for the man we were looking for, and he shot me in the arm."

Another "Dickens Original."

One by one the little band of remaining "Dickens originals" are being gathered to their fathers. The London Morning Post chronicles the death in Strood infirmary of Mrs. Regden, the Betty Higden of "Our Mutual Friend." She was one of the lesser characters of the great novelist's creation, but as Gilbert Chesterton so truly says: "Dickens not only conquered the world; he conquered it with minor characters. They appear only for a fragment of time, but they belong to eternity. We have them only for an instant (like the young man with the lumpy forehead, who only says 'Esker' to Mr. Podsnap's foreign gentleman), but they have us forever." How great Dickens really was is seen from the fact that not more than one or two men have been found capable of creating even a single character in their books of equal vitality and individuality. Perhaps the two most outstanding instances are Sherlock Holmes and Captain Kettle. But where Conan Doyle and Cutcliffe Hyne created one famous character of that disciple Dickens created fifty.

Irish Police Hunt Illegal Stills.

Enormously increased prices of spirits in Ireland, due to the heavy taxation on them, have led to the widespread manufacture of poteen, a very strong home-made product that dodges the exciseman. The police hunt for illegal stills, like all other normal police activities, has been hampered by the fact that the chief job of the Irish police has been to protect themselves from attack. So the Sinn Feiners who have taken over the task of punishing thieves have added to their function the capture of illegal still.

Dust Rolled Out of the Carpet.

For cleaning carpets, very satisfactory results have been obtained from a big open-work drum of wood which is turned by a gasoline engine. The carpets to be treated are placed inside and the drum turned and after about 30 minutes of this the carpets are thoroughly cleaned and are none the worse for treatment. The beating process is sometimes disastrous to carpets which are well worn, but this rolling process does them no injury.

In spite of claims, there is no record of farmers swapping jobs with the hired man "to get the best of it."

The agitation for a 2-cent coin long ago ceased to be pertinent. Why not abolish the nickel and the dime?

"The Vicious Circle."

Most people conclude that this phrase, which we hear so often nowadays, is of recent origin, but Amiel, the Swiss philosopher, who died in 1881, said, "I turn in a vicious circle." There is also evidence that the phrase was in use as long ago as 1792, so we have not even the comfort of a new discovery.

Double Affection.

Elsie was proud and much excited over a pair of new shoes and while calling on a friend could think and talk of nothing else. To get her interested in something else, the woman at whose home she was visiting tried to take her up to an elephant made of teakwood, about a foot high, looking rather real. Baby was much afraid at first, but went nearer trembling as she went along. Finally she put her little hand on his head and, finding him harmless, put both arms around him and cried out in astonishment and joy: "He loves me—he loves my shoes!"

THE BEGINNING OF A BANK-NOTE

Little Marcia's baby dress though made of the finest linen was ultimately worn threadbare. One day it landed in the rag bag and was sold to the junk dealer. When the rag sorter touched the discarded garment he detected in a flash the fine quality of the flax and set it aside for a journey to the Bureau of Engraving and Printing at Washington. Eventually it became legal tender—a bank-note. Just how is told in one of the beautiful booklets about Our Government which we are sending each month to those interested.

Just send us your name and address and you will receive a copy of every issue of the series without charge.

"Our country has never had a national costume, but now the overall and calico clubs are trying to give us one.

The rule apparently still holds good that "the presidency, like kissing, is not to be sought and it is not to be declined."

Another way to reduce the high cost of clothing would be to buy the cloth and let mother make your suit, as in the olden days.

The manufacturers of overalls, particularly, will view the popular movement to get into denim as a splendid exhibition of common sense.

The French police have just discovered a plot to restore czardom in Russia and probably found it about the easiest job they ever had.

If the prince of Wales becomes proficient on the ukulele while visiting at Hawaii, his royal parents will be sorry they sent him around that way.

Manufacturers are advancing the cost of clocks 10 per cent. While there may be a saving of daylight there apparently is to be no saving on time.

"Tingling toes," the new affliction the doctors have discovered, was doubtless started by an impulse to kick the crescendo out of the jazz band.

PROCLAMATION

Proposing Amendments To The Constitution of the State, 1920

Whereas, at the January Session of the General Assembly of Maryland, held in the year 1920, two Acts were passed, to-wit: Chapter 319 proposing an amendment to Section 15 of Article III of the Constitution of the State, title "Legislative Department," regulating the compensation of Members of both Houses of the General Assembly; and Chapter 565 proposing an amendment to Section 37 of Article 4 of the Constitution of the State, title "Judiciary Department," regulating the pay of Clerks of Courts, and which said Chapters 319 and 565 are in the words and figures following:

CHAPTER 319.

AN ACT to propose an amendment to Section 15 of Article III, of the Constitution of the State of Maryland, title "Legislative Department," regulating the compensation of the members of both Houses of the General Assembly of Maryland, and to provide for the submission of said amendment to the qualified voters of the State of Maryland for adoption or rejection.

SECTION 1. Be it enacted by the General Assembly of Maryland, (three-fifths of all the members of each of the two Houses concurring), That the following be and the same is hereby proposed as an amendment to Section 15 of Article III, of the Constitution of the State of Maryland, title "Legislative Department," the same if adopted by the legally qualified voters of the State, as herein provided, to become Section 15 of Article III, of the Constitution of the State of Maryland.

15. The General Assembly may continue its session so long as in its judgment the public interest may require for a period not longer than ninety days; and each member thereof shall receive a compensation of three hundred dollars per annum and five dollars per diem for every day he shall attend the session, but not for such days as he may be absent, unless absent on account of sickness or by leave of the House of which he is a member and he shall also receive such mileage as may be allowed by law, not exceeding twenty cents per mile; and the presiding officer of each House shall receive an additional compensation of five dollars per diem. When the General Assembly shall be convened by proclamation of the Governor, the session shall not continue longer than thirty days, and in such case the compensation shall be the same as herein prescribed.

SECTION 2. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That said aforegoing section hereby proposed as an amendment to the Constitution of the State of Maryland shall, at the next general election for Members of Congress held in this State, be submitted to the legal and qualified voters of the State, for their adoption or rejection, in pursuance of the directions contained in Article XIV of the Constitution of the State of Maryland, and at the said general election the vote on the said proposed amendment to the Constitution shall be by ballot, and upon each ballot there shall be printed the words "For the Constitutional Amendment," and "Against the Constitutional Amendment," as now provided by law, and immediately after said election due returns shall be made to the Governor of the vote for and against said proposed amendment, as directed by said Fourteenth Article of the Constitution, and further proceedings had in accordance with said Article Fourteen.

Approved April 9, 1920.

CHAPTER 565.

AN ACT to amend Section 37 of Article 4, title "Judiciary Department," of the Constitution of this State, and to provide for the submission of said amendment to the qualified voters of this State for adoption or rejection.

SECTION 1. Be it enacted by the General Assembly of Maryland, (three-fifths of all members of each of the two houses concurring), That the following section be, and the same is, hereby proposed as an amendment to Section 37, of Article 4, title "Judiciary Department," of the Constitution of this State, and if adopted by the legal qualified voters thereof, as herein provided, said section shall supersede and stand in the place and in stead of Section 37 of said Article 4 of the Constitution of Maryland.

SEC. 37. There shall be a Clerk of each of the said Courts of Baltimore City, except the Supreme Bench, who shall be elected by the legal and qualified voters of said city at the election to be held in said city on the Tuesday next after the first Monday of November, in the year eighteen hundred and sixty-seven, and shall hold his office for six years from the time of his election, and until his successor is elected and qualified, and be re-eligible thereto, subject to be removed for willful neglect of duty or other misdemeanor in office, on conviction in a Court of Law. The salary of each of the said Clerks shall be forty-five hundred dollars a year, payable only out of the fees and receipts collected by the Clerks of said city, and they shall be entitled to no other perquisites or compensation. In case of a vacancy in the office of Clerk of any of said Courts, the Judges of said Supreme Bench of Baltimore City shall have power to fill such vacancy until the general election of Delegates to the General Assembly to be held next thereafter, when a Clerk of said Court shall be elected to serve for six years thereafter; and the provisions of this Article in relation to the appointment of Deputies by the Clerks of the Circuit Courts in the counties shall apply to the Clerks of the Courts in Baltimore City.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted by the Authority aforesaid. That the said foregoing section hereby proposed as an amendment to the Constitution shall, at the next election for members of Congress to be held on the Tuesday next after the first Monday in the month of November, nineteen hundred and twenty (1920), be submitted to the legal and qualified voters thereof for their adoption or rejection, in pursuance of the direction contained in Article 14 of the Constitution of this State; and at the said election the vote on said proposed amendment to the Constitution shall be by ballot, and upon each ballot there shall be written or printed the words "For Constitutional Amendment" and "Against Constitutional Amendment," as now provided by law, and immediately after said election due returns shall be made to the Governor of the vote for and against said proposed amendment, as directed by the said Article 14 of the said Constitution.

Approved April 9, 1920.

Now, therefore, I, Albert C. Ritchie, Governor of the State of Maryland, in pursuance of the direction contained in Section 1 of Article 14 of the Constitution of Maryland do hereby order and direct that this Proclamation containing a full, true and correct copy of the text of said Chapters 319 and 565 of the Acts of the General Assembly of Maryland of 1920, be published in at least two newspapers in each of the counties of the State where so many may be published and where not more than one may be published then in that newspaper, and in three newspapers published in the City of Baltimore, one of which shall be published in the German language, once a week for at least three months next preceding the general election to be held in the State of Maryland on Tuesday, the 2nd day of November, 1920, at which election the said proposed amendments to the Constitution shall be submitted in form and manner prescribed by the General Assembly, to the legal and qualified voters of the State for their adoption or rejection.

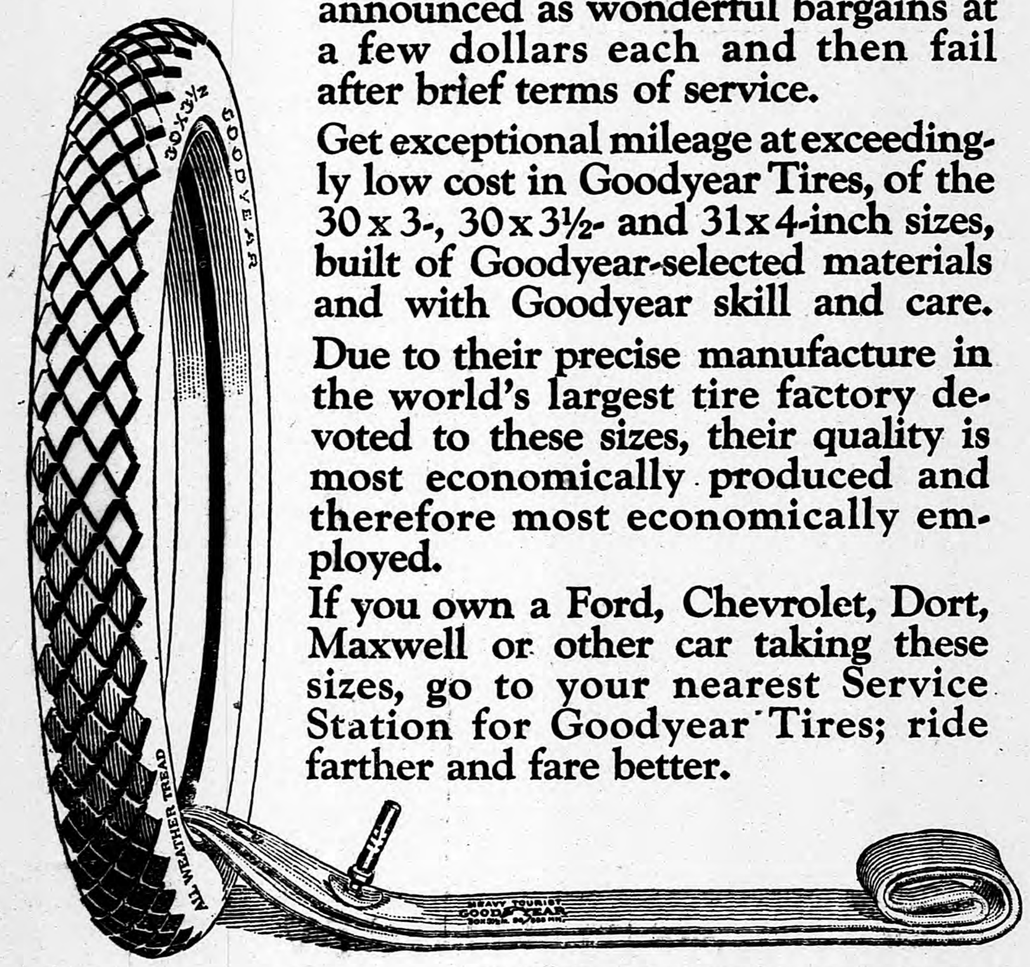
Goodyear Tires for Small Cars Are Popular Because Economical



There is nothing but disappointment in buying cheaply made tires that are announced as wonderful bargains at a few dollars each and then fail after brief terms of service.

Get exceptional mileage at exceedingly low cost in Goodyear Tires, of the 30 x 3-, 30 x 3½- and 31 x 4-inch sizes, built of Goodyear-selected materials and with Goodyear skill and care.

Due to their precise manufacture in the world's largest tire factory devoted to these sizes, their quality is most economically produced and therefore most economically employed.

If you own a Ford, Chevrolet, Dort, Maxwell or other car taking these sizes, go to your nearest Service Station for Goodyear Tires; ride farther and fare better.

West African Town Not Always A Quiet Spot.

Considered Thoroughly Up to Date Today, It Was the Scene, Twenty Years Ago, of Grim Tragedy of Frontier Warfare.

Marjorie and Alan Letheridge, the special correspondents of the London Daily Telegraph in West Africa, write as follows from Coomassie, capital of the British colony of Ashantiland:

At the present day Coomassie looks more like an Indian town than any other on the coast, and it is the pride of its residents that socially it is also like India. There are real grass tennis courts, a real regimental band, and, before the war, there was the best polo team in the colony. Such it is today, and yet, only twenty years ago, the quaint little fort in the center of the town was the scene of one of the grimmest sieges of Britain's many frontier wars.

Only the fact that all eyes were turned on South Africa at that time prevented the siege of Coomassie from taking its proper place in history. But we who have experienced the inconveniences and discomforts of trekking "de luxe," and who knows how much is needful in this part of the world to make life even bearable, can appreciate somewhat the sufferings borne by the defenders of the fort and the agonizing suspense that they endured until they heard the first shots of the relieving force.

The chief commissioner of Ashanti now lives in the fort which gave its meager protection to Captain Bishop, Lieutenant Ralph and Dr. Hay, with their 125 soldiers, during those interminable weeks. One now has an evening gin and bitters on the very spot from which those three officers could see the fires of burning villages and hear the wailing of starving women and children. The Ashantis themselves seem to have shot their last bolt in the way of "frightfulness," however, and no longer rank among the brave tribes of the colony. Only one trace of the romance of the past remains.

Where is the golden stool of Ashanti? It disappeared in 1896 and has never been seen since. On it the Ashanti chiefs had sat and dispensed their own peculiar form of justice from the earliest days and, so far as is known, it is still concealed in the innermost recesses of their land. But it would be a brave European who openly attempted to track it to its hiding place, and there is just a possibility that it has been privately sold during a period of financial stress.

Kofe Karikari, the King of Ashanti in 1878, behaved in an even more sacrilegious manner. He secretly opened the mausoleum of his ancestors and robbed their bodies of the golden ornaments without which no Ashanti of any means is ever lowered into the tomb.

It would never have been discovered had not the lynx eyes of the queen-mother observed that the favorite wives of the king were inexplicably wearing rings and bracelets of antique workmanship. A little investigation and she denounced him publicly.

An admission of his guilt was the only thing left for King Kofe. He had sold the major proportion of his plunder, so he magniloquently informed his chiefs that he intended to blow himself and them up with gunpowder in order to obliterate his shame. "We are quite ready to die as you request," was their reply, "but blow yourself up first." It is perhaps superfluous to add that King Kofe did nothing of the sort.

Wood Alcohol.

The wood alcohol used in the United States is obtained chiefly from the destructive distillation of wood—hard wood, birch, maple, oak, elm and alder being those most frequently used. The chief uses to which it is put are for the denaturing of grain alcohol; for various purposes in lines of common manufacture (especially as a solvent in the preparation of shellac, varnish, dyes, etc.); as an ingredient in medical and pharmaceutical preparations; in the chemical industries and as a fuel and illuminant. Only within recent years has wood alcohol become so dangerous to life and sight. Formerly it was a dark, bad-smelling, bad-tasting fluid which no one was tempted to drink. Later a process was developed by which this color, smell and taste are removed. Wood alcohol, when purified in this way, looks, smells and tastes like grain alcohol, and may thus be easily substituted for it by unscrupulous persons.—Illinois Health News, October, 1919.

To Restore Respiration.

The method introduced by Schafer is the simplest, least injurious and most effective in restoring a person who has been rescued from drowning.

"The subject is laid on the ground in a prone position, with a thickly-folded garment under his chest. The operator kneels by his side or athwart him, facing his head and placing his hands on each side over the lower ribs of the subject. He slowly throws the weight of his body forward, and thus presses upon the thorax of the subject and forces air out of the lungs; he then gradually relaxes the pressure by bringing his body up again but without removing his hands. This is repeated regularly at the rate of 12 or 15 times a minute, until normal respiration begins, or until all hope of restoration is given up."

TOWN LEADER IN GOOD WORK

Sherburne, in New York, Praised for Its Inception of Systematic Tree Planting.

The state of New York passed a law in 1912 making it possible for counties, towns and villages to acquire, by purchase, lease, gift, or condemnation, lands having tree growth or forests thereon, or lands which are suitable for the growth of trees.

The advantages to be obtained are numerous, besides the income to be derived from the sale of forest products there are the benefits of regulation of stream-flow, protection of the watershed, shelter from winds and storms, protection to birds and game, and a healthful resort for the people of the town and community.

Sherburne, a village in Chenango county, New York, has been planting trees systematically since 1912, and the work was begun without the knowledge that state laws were being enacted which might make tree-planting something of an inducement. It therefore deserves all the more credit for its interest in forestry. To Dr. Homer G. Newton, for many years a resident of that village, is due the honor of having initiated the policy of tree-planting and watershed protection. The development of this project should be followed with much interest by towns or villages that contemplate similar plantations or forests.—Bulletin of the American Forestry Association.

OUTDOOR ADVERTISING TO GO

Cities Generally Are Taking Concerted Action to Do Away With the Unsightly Billboards.

Our most progressive towns have nearly all demanded safety and sanitation in billboard construction, and a number of places limit the signs to business districts, or else require the written consent of a majority of the property owners before a sign can be inflicted on a residential block.

The billboard companies have fought reform strenuously. In some states, civic associations claim that they have defeated legislation; in others, it was said that they tried to have ordinances put into effect which would not restrict use of boards to any extent, but which would make it appear that the town had settled the question.

Now that the courts are deserting them, some of the bill-posting magnates seem to be falling into line with community improvements and agreeing to the restrictions imposed. They still claim, however, that outdoor advertising is a legitimate and highly efficient method of business promotion. They point to the undeniably artistic signs painted by Maxfield Parrish as a sample of what a thing of beauty the billboard can be. They ignore the fact that Mr. Parrish has painted only a few ads of thousands displayed.

Advantages of a Garden.

A garden is a great thing to possess in more ways than one. If you do the work yourself it rewards you with health and an appetite and adds years to your life. It gives you something to do when loafing around the house has grown wearisome.

But aside from that it has one other large advantage. It is an excellent thing to have when you want to let your temper cool off. You can go out into the garden, when things have gone wrong inside the house, and say anything you want to the roses and hollyhocks and the phlox and the cosmos and the weeds and they never talk back. The man who owns a garden, and knows enough to get into it when he should, has few regrets, for he leaves bitter thoughts unsaid.

Horse Coming Back.

Saddlers and others interested in the horse profess to believe the day of the equine is about to dawn again. They point to the fact that saddle horses are frequently seen in Central park and that more horse-drawn vehicles are to be observed on the city streets. Every now and then a landau, barouche or plain, plebeian buggy can be seen in Fifth avenue, while in the outlying districts the horse appears to be again asserting his right to live and be. It is regarded as significant that the bridal party of the recent Vanderbilt-Littleton wedding, the largest wedding noted here in a decade, arrived at the church in a horse-drawn conveyance.—New York Times.

Lawn Means Much to Home.

A well-kept and well-planted lawn is essential for every home. Most anyone can erect a shelter of boards or cement, but some thought must be put into making that shelter a home. Comfort, convenience, and beauty ought to be found there. They are all needed if young people are going to stay long in the home.

Beautifying Home Grounds.

The home is the dwelling place of the family and should be made as beautiful and inviting as possible. Trees and flowers will serve a good part in doing this, with a little work done in the right direction.

Armor for the Golfer.

"Golfers who fear snakes," says a traveler, "might try the 'tin armor' tactics resorted to by wanderers in the tropical swamp lands. It is the custom of some explorers to fasten a bright tin disk over their ankles. This gleaming spot attracts the reptiles, which invariably strike at it and nowhere else. The stroke is thus rendered harmless and leaves the snake in a position to receive a knockout blow at the intended victim's discretion.—London Chronicle.

Dentist's Memorial.

It is a far cry from the powdered hen-bane seeds, the incantations and pain, the gold rings and ox teeth of the forgotten past to the work of a modern dental surgeon, but like his predecessors in the profession, the modern operator leaves behind him his monument. It may be a cross of gold which he erects to his memory as a product of his mechanical skill, or maybe he has taught the children of the world the secrets of health or the esthetic value of a pleasing smile.—Exchange.

Children and Books.

It does the child no harm to make the acquaintance of books which were not written for children. In a home where the great books that have inspired or amused successive generations are accessible an active-minded child is likely at some time to get at them. If we want our children to fall in love with the better kind of books let us provide them with opportunities for meeting such books without too much formality.

Jefferson's Aim.

Jefferson sought to create in the university of the state an institution that would not only through traditional culture values give to the state "legislators and judges . . . and expound . . . structure of government," but would also "harmonize and promote the interests of agriculture, manufacture and commerce, and by well-formed views of political economy give free course to public industry."—Edward Kidder Graham.

Austria's Salt Monopoly.

The Austrian monopoly on salt ruined all the salt industries for a period of 146 years. There are no data up to the time of the partitioning of Poland, but it can safely be said that the salt mines of Galicia supplied about 100,000 tons of salt yearly, Wieliczka about 24,000 tons and Bochnia 17,000 tons. There were no other salt mines in Poland in the year 1772.—Baltimore American.

"Crooked Usage."

This curious name for a London street possibly arose from the fact that the word "usage" in former times was applied to the strips of common land, or paths, between private plots of cultivated land. London's "Crooked Usage" street was probably one of these paths.

Evolution of the Harp.

The modern harp has been evolved from types found among the Egyptians, Assyrians, Hebrews and various Celtic nations. No doubt the harp originated in the archery of olden times, and the twang of the released bow string.

Waterspouts and Cloudbursts.

A cloudburst is simply a sudden copious rainfall, as if the whole cloud had been precipitated at once. Waterspouts are bursting rain-clouds, accompanied by whirlwind, which whip the rain into dense, whirling columns of water.

Washington's Peculiar Hobby.

George Washington's principal diversion was training baby foxes. He was fond of fox hunting. He took the animals home, and trained them in all kinds of tricks, which he often exhibited to friends.

Worth Cultivating.

Is it not a thing divine to have a smile which, none know how, has the power to lighten the weight of that enormous chain which all the living in common drag behind them?—Victor Hugo.

We Had Forgotten.

Of course it is some trouble to clean a spark plug, but do you remember what a task it was to go over an entire horse with a brush and curry comb?—Dallas News.

Jud Tunkins.

Jud Tunkins says some of the people who founded free libraries could have made a much bigger hit with the populace by founding free motion picture exhibitions.

Tribute to Agriculturist.

"The agricultural population," says Cato, "produces the bravest men, valiant soldiers, and a class of citizens the least given of all to evil designs."

Detriment to the Community.

The man who misleads himself is unfortunate, but the man who misleads others for personal gain is an undesirable citizen.

Reduced to Minimum.

West Australia's Vast Size.

West Australia, the largest state in the continent, has an area of over 975,000 square miles.

Non-Sensational.

One secret that is not common gossip is the secret of success.

JOHN WALTER SMITH

Few men have been so greatly honored by the people of Maryland as has been Senator John Walter Smith. None has deserved the honors he has received more justly nor has served the people of his native State more faithfully or more effectively. He has been elected to office many times by his people and has never been defeated in any election where the people had a voice. He won their confidence in the beginning of his career and he has never forfeited it. He has served the people in public offices to which they elected him, nearly thirty years. In that time he has gone through many fierce campaigns but in none of them have any of his political adversaries and opponents been able to point to a single personal, political or official act which savored of wrongdoing or corruption. He has won golden opinions from all sorts of people and has been clear in every office he has held. His defeat in the coming election would be a grievous loss to the people of Maryland regardless of politics.

Coming from pious and honorable parentage, Senator Smith was left an orphan at an early age. Upon leaving school, at the age of eighteen years he started business life as a clerk, and at twenty-one he was in business for himself, without inherited wealth or influence made his own way in the world by industry, business sagacity and fair dealing.

He devoted himself to his business until his people of Worcester County in 1889 elected him to the State Senate, and so well were his constituents satisfied with him that he was twice re-elected, the whole term for which he was elected being twelve years. But before the end of his third term, to wit, in 1898, when the whole State was going Republican, he was called upon to redeem the 1st Congressional district for his party, having declined the nomination in 1892 when his election would have been almost uncontested. But when his party has been in need of him he has always answered the call and so he made the fight in 1898 and was elected. At this time he was State Senator from Worcester County.

In 1899 when the Democratic Party was in the minority and had suffered two crushing defeats, the Republicans having elected the Governor in 1895 and a majority of the General Assembly in 1895 and again in 1897, Senator Smith was again called upon to redeem the State from the Republican Party. Mr. Smith was unanimously nominated by the Democrats and as was his custom, he accepted the trust. It was a critical time with the party and a hard fight was expected, but Mr. Smith won and was elected Governor by a majority of 12,123 over Governor Lowndes, probably the most popular Republican in the State. Senator Smith's record as State Senator, as Governor and as United States Senator will be discussed in subsequent articles.

(Democratic State Central Committee.)

Even a rough neck is to be preferred to a stiff one.

Once we were too proud to fight. It seems now we are too proud to quit.

Anyway, the home garden goes well with overalls and bungalow aprons.

Another nice thing about overalls is that you can scratch a match on them.

Uncle Sam is "no man's land"—the state of being neither at war nor in peace.

Perhaps a "one-lump" club would be effective in bringing down the price of sugar.

Too many people in this country want to revise the Constitution by blowing it up.

The charges against the profiteers are not one bit more serious than the counter charges.

The sugar bowl could run away with the spoon at this time and neither one would be missed.

ENDORSED AT HOME

Such Proof As This Should Convince Any Princess Anne Citizen

The public endorsement of a local citizen is the best proof that can be produced. None better, none stronger can be had. When a man comes forward and testifies to his fellow-citizens, addresses his friends and neighbors, you may be sure he is thoroughly convinced or he would not do so. Telling one's experience when it is for the public good is an act of kindness that should be appreciated. The following statement given by a resident of Princess Anne adds one more to the many cases of Home Endorsement which are being published about Doan's Kidney Pills. Read it.

W. T. Gibbons, farmer, Route No. 4, Princess Anne, says: "I was troubled with backache and mornings I felt tired out on account of losing a lot of sleep. When I got up after sitting, pains shot through me like a knife-thrust. My kidneys were acting too frequently, making me get up at night. The kidney secretions were highly colored and I was in a bad way in general. I got Doan's Kidney Pills at O. A. Jones' drug store and, after taking two boxes, I was rid of kidney trouble."

Price 60c, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills, the same that Mr. Gibbons had. Foster-Milburn Co., Mfgrs., Buffalo, N. Y.

The old fight over who won the war has been eclipsed by the battle over who lost the peace.

Conditions in Fiume having been as critical as possible all winter, now become "more critical."

Hens in Russia having been "nationalized," they will probably learn to crow and cease to lay.

Still, the technical state of war can hardly distract attention from baseball as did the real war.

"Every effort should be made to have checks become more completely the Nation's real currency; the circulation of currency for the payment of accounts, when checks would be safer and more adaptable, is unwise and unsafe."

CIRCUIT COURT NOW IN SESSION

Convened Yesterday Morning—Short Term Expected

The September term of the Circuit Court for Somerset county convened yesterday morning at 10 o'clock with Judges Duer and Bailey on the bench.

The following are the jurors for the term, the grand jury not having been drawn as we go to press:

Arthur W. White, Wilmer O. Lankford, Sr., Shanley Ford, Michael O. Baltz, Lyda W. Hall, Isaac Fred Phoebus, Ernest H. Townsend, Edward T. Landon, George T. Beauchamp, William R. Tull, Alonzo E. Tull, William G. Lankford, Thomas O. Long, E. McD. Moore, Robert F. Bounds, Olin Horner, James Bailey, Charles W. Parks, Philip O. Layfield, Isaiah H. French, William W. Evans, Charles T. ## Democratic Meeting Well Attended

A Democratic meeting was held in the Auditorium, Princess Anne, last Wednesday night for the purpose of meeting the new situation caused by the adoption of the woman's suffrage amendment and in the interest of the election of Democratic candidates. The attendance was very good, about three hundred being present, of which about one-third were women.

Col. Henry J. Waters presided, and introduced the speakers who were Hon. T. Allan Goldsborough, candidate for Congress; Hon. W. Mason Shehan, of Easton, and Collector of Internal Revenue Joshua W. Miles. Senator John Walter Smith could not be present as it was stated that he was compelled to meet engagements in Baltimore.

The speakers dwelt principally upon the adoption of the Nineteenth Amendment, emphasizing the fact that since woman's suffrage has become an actuality, it was the duty of white women to register, affiliate and vote at the coming election.

It is difficult to judge what percentage of white women will register in the county this fall. There has been in the past a tremendous opposition upon the part of the women in Somerset county to the adoption of woman's suffrage and the usual estimate heard now is that not more than 20 per cent. of the white women will register this year. On the other hand, many of the Republican leaders are stating that a large percentage of the negro women will register. One estimate heard last week was that 75 per cent. of the negro women would register in this county. A meeting was held last Thursday night in this town to instruct the colored women in registering.

Burn Or Bury All Dead Animals

The regulations governing the disposal of carcasses of all domestic animals, which became effective April 1st, 1920, is as follows:

As the practice of allowing dead animals to remain unburied is a menace to the health of the live stock of the community, and a frequent cause of the spread of disease, it is hereby required that horses, mules, asses, cattle, swine, or other domestic animals, having died from any cause, be burned, or buried at a depth of at least three feet, or sent to some establishment where dead animals are disposed of in a manner to prevent their becoming a menace.

The carcasses of animals known to have died of a contagious or infectious disease must be disposed of in accordance with the requirements as set forth in Article 58 of the Annotated Code of Maryland.

Officers Of Princess Anne Grange

The Princess Anne Grange meets the first and third Tuesdays in each month, in the hall over the law office of L. Creston Beauchamp, at 8 o'clock p. m.

The officers are: G. A. Widdowson, master; H. B. Twining, overseer; T. D. Nicholls, lecturer; J. S. Noel, treasurer; L. T. Widdowson, secretary. Refreshments served third Tuesday night of each month. Every farmer should be a granger.

Things are not always what they seem. The fellow who bets on a sure thing often wishes he had taken a chance.

Women of Somerset

Bear in mind that Tuesday, September 28th, is Registration Day. Go to the polling place in your district and put yourself in position to exercise the right of suffrage for the first time in a great national election. Questions of overwhelming importance are at issue. Weigh carefully the issues to be determined. Study the covenant of the League of Nations framed to prevent conscription, militarism and war. The Republican party opposes this covenant. The Democratic party insists it is imperatively demanded in the interest of humanity; that the way to escape another world war is to join with other nations in a League to make war impossible.

Two More Registration Days

The new election law passed by the recent special session of the Maryland Legislature adds two more days for registration in the counties and changes the hours formerly from 8 a. m. to 7 p. m., to 9 a. m. to 9 p. m. On election day the polls in the counties to be open from 9 a. m. to 9 p. m. The present hours are from 8 a. m. to 6 p. m. The new bill also provides for additional election officials, if necessary, and for increased compensation for those officials.

The law makes the registration days in the counties of Maryland as follows: Tuesday, September 28th; Tuesday, October 5th; Saturday, October 9th; Tuesday, October 12th, from 8 o'clock a. m. to 8 o'clock p. m.; and for revision only on Tuesday, October 19th.

Good Tractor Demonstration

One of the largest tractor demonstrations to be held on the Eastern Shore will be held in connection with the Farmers' Picnic to be held Thursday, October 7th, near Princess Anne, on the farm of F. M. Cline, on the river road leading to Revell's Neck.

The demonstration will include plowing and preparation of a seed bed. The following tractors have entered the demonstration at this time: Fordson, Moline, Samson, Wallis, Cleveland, Happy Farmer, Frick, Case, Huber and Utilitor. Other tractors which probably will be entered are the Titan, I. H. C. and Twin City.

Farmers interested in tractors should arrange to attend this demonstration which will start promptly at 10 o'clock in the morning.

There are more ways to fill an aching void than by going to the dentist.

A PRETTY CHURCH WEDDING

Miss Dorothy E. Bissell Becomes Bride Of Albion M. Aucker

St. Paul's Methodist Episcopal Church at Westover was the scene of a pretty wedding last Tuesday, when Miss Dorothy Edna Bissell and Mr. Albion M. Aucker were united in marriage by the Rev. W. H. Smith, pastor of the church.

The ushers were the young ladies of the Golden Rule Sunday School class taught by Miss Bissell. These young ladies were charmingly dressed in white and at the appointed hour they formed an aisle through which the wedding party approached the altar. Mrs. William B. Long played Mendelssohn's wedding march as a processional and The Bridal Chorus as a recessional on the organ.

The bride entered the church on the arm of her brother, Mr. Paul F. Bissell, of Pocomoke City, who gave her in marriage. She was attended by Miss Rose Lankford, of Pocomoke City, as maid of honor, and little Miss Dottie Aucker, sister of the groom, as flower girl, dressed in Pink and white. Mr. Aucker was attended by Mr. Theodore Bissell, brother of the bride. Miss Bissell was dressed in a simple but lovely dress of white, with hat of same material, and carried bride roses. The material of which the dress was made was an exquisite foreign fabric which was brought from Siam a number of years ago by a missionary aunt of the bride. Miss Lankford was gowned in pink organdy with hat to match and carried pink roses.

After an informal reception at the home of Mr. Salisbury, uncle of the bride, Mr. and Mrs. Aucker motored to Princess Anne and took the train for points in the east. They will be at home after October 1st, in Philadelphia, where they have furnished apartments.

Mr. and Mrs. P. W. Aucker, parents of the groom; Misses Dorothy Aucker, Annie Mullen and Clothilde Aucker, all of Philadelphia, were in attendance at the wedding. Among the beautiful presents were a handsome cut glass dish from the Golden Rule class, a case of canned fruit from the Canning Club Girls and a cut glass vase from the Home Makers' Club.

Rural Carrier Examination

The United States Civil Service Commission has announced an examination for the county of Somerset, Md., to be held at Crisfield and Princess Anne on October 23rd, 1920, to fill the position of rural carrier at Princess Anne, Md., and vacancies that may later occur on rural routes from other postoffices in the above mentioned county. The examination will be open only to citizens who are actually domiciled in the territory of a postoffice in the county and who meet the other requirements set forth in Form No. 1977. Both men and women, if qualified, may enter this examination, but appointing officers have the legal right to specify the sex desired in requesting certification of eligibles. Women will not be considered for rural carrier appointment unless they are the widows of U. S. soldiers, sailors or marines or the wives of U. S. soldiers, sailors or marines who are physically disqualified for examination by reason of injuries received in the line of military duty. Form No. 1977 and application blanks may be obtained from the offices mentioned above or from the United States Civil Service Commission at Washington, D. C. Applications should be forwarded to the Commission at Washington at the earliest practicable date.

Republicans Dreaming Of Victory

Vice-President Thomas R. Marshall, who left Chicago last Friday on a campaign tour in the interest of Governor Cox, predicted the election of the Democratic ticket in November. Mr. Marshall made his first talk that night at Decatur, Ill.

"Great questions are confronting the people of this republic," he said. "They are questions which can only be solved by men of broad vision and strong mind—questions upon which the future of more than 100,000,000 souls depend.

"They must be met and they must be solved right. After all, there is but one way to solve a problem and that is the right way. There can be no halfway solution.

"I hope the Republican party, as well as its managers, will continue to believe that it has a walk-away. I would not say a word to wake them up while they dream of place and pomp and power, yet candor compels me to add that 'dreams are dreams', and that it is a far cry from what they think they know about the average American to what the average American knows of himself."

The great beauty about castles in the air is that they entail no taxes or insurance.

WILL WE HAVE FIRE PROTECTION?

The People Of The Town Subscribed $7,000 Toward Fire Engine

The firemen and citizens of Princess Anne desire to know what is the present status of the movement to purchase a new fire engine and fire-fighting equipment for the town and what further steps are to be taken to afford more adequate fire protection. The situation as it now stands is set forth by the Princess Anne Fire Company, Charles F. Matthews, chief, in the following communication:

"It was clearly demonstrated at the disastrous fire here on April 12th last, that the present equipment is entirely inadequate and it was proposed that a new engine and new equipment should be obtained as speedily as possible. It was decided furthermore that the proposition should be financed by popular subscription, and in response to the appeal made at the time about $7,000 was subscribed by the people of the town for this purpose.

"The amount so subscribed was announced at a public meeting held in the Auditorium about the first of last May, at which time it was also decided that this amount was sufficient to justify the town in purchasing an engine and necessary equipment.

"At this same meeting a resolution was passed authorizing the appointment of a committee of five members to obtain plans of the different types of fire engines and prices of same and equipment. It was furthermore understood that later on another public meeting should be called to which a full report should be made of all data, prices and information gathered by this committee.

"The firemen understand that this committee did obtain plans and other information about the different types of engines and the prices on same; that the committee has had this information for about three months, but no public meeting has been called by the committee to decide what type of engine should be obtained and no further steps have been taken to afford better fire protection to the town.

"The firemen desire, furthermore, to point out that the new fire house is practically completed and ready for occupancy and an electric siren, which can be operated from all parts of the town, has been purchased by the firemen at a cost of $700 and is ready to be installed.

"The firemen insist, however, that the most essential thing is to obtain a fire engine with proper equipment, and that until this is done the town will be without proper and adequate protection. The firemen are being constantly asked by the town people what steps are being taken to obtain better protection, which shows that the people are just as anxious for the engine and equipment as they were after the fire last April and are just as willing to pay the cost of obtaining it.

"The firemen are very much discouraged over the situation as it stands at present, with apparently nothing being done to afford better protection to the town, and the purpose of this letter is to place the situation in detail before the people and to insist that the committee of five call a public meeting as early as possible, submitting to such meeting all plans and other data obtained about the different types of engines and permit the people of the town to decide whether or not the new equipment should be purchased."

All White Women Should Register

All women, as well as men, over 21 years of age, citizens of the United States, should register if possible today, but in case they are unable to do so today, the will have another opportunity on Tuesday, October 5th; Saturday, October 9th, and Tuesday, October 12th. The registration offices will be open from 9 o'clock a. m. to 9 o'clock p. m.

There is nothing difficult about getting registered, and there need be no embarrassment to the women, as they will be required to answer but few questions, as follows:

Residence, postoffice address, name, party affiliation, (if the registrant desires to affiliate with either the Democratic or Republican party), age, place of birth, color, term of residence in the county and State, whether naturalized or not, and if naturalized, the date and court granting papers. These questions are simple and easy to answer.

Women who have come into Maryland from other States need not comply with the Declaration of Intention act this year. If they have been residents of Maryland one year, they may vote. They should register in the county or legislative district in which they have lived six months.

Mere size doesn't always count. It is seldom the biggest man that does the tallest lying.

WOMAN RUNNING FOR OFFICE

Mrs. Lang, of Maryland, Candidate For Congress On Labor Ticket

Mrs. Ada Smith Lang is the first Maryland woman to seek election to public office. She is a candidate for Congress in the Fourth district on the Labor ticket. Her husband is running for an office on the same ticket.

"The Labor party," Mrs. Lang says, "is the only political party in America which is exclusively for the laboring class. The object of the party is to better the general conditions among the workers, as we feel that this is their greatest need. The laboring class of our country has been asleep; they must wake up to their responsibilities and learn the power of their votes.

"People are naturally good," she stated, "and it is entirely the fault of circumstances if they go wrong. The present system of capitalism can account for the present criminal tendencies of the many degenerate members of the great working class. Capitalism has outworn its usefulness, and with the birth of socialism the country will awaken to a new era of prosperity and general happiness.

"Before anything can be accomplished the workers must solidly organize, and then we will correct the existing troubles among the labor unions, which are in reality working against themselves. It is our purpose to organize industrially, and in this way we will secure the co-operation of the workers."

PRESENTS A SCHOOL PROGRAM

Governor Makes Four Suggestions For Reconstruction

In a letter to Dr. Albert S. Cook, State Superintendent of Schools, Governor Ritchie suggests that preliminary measures looking to the program of educational reconstruction be initiated. The Governor's letter says:

I am very anxious that steps should be taken to put in concrete shape during the coming winter the ideas I have very briefly discussed with you and others relative to educational matters in this State. Speaking broadly, the things which are in my mind are these, and, of course, they are inter-related.

1—The determination of such amendments as may be necessary to make the present school law the best practical working law that can be secured.

2—The determination of what may be necessary to put the elementary and high schools of the State on the highest possible plane, and place education in them within the reach of every one.

3—A careful study of the colleges and higher institutions—those supported and those aided by the State with the view of determining what can be done—(a) towards eliminating necessary overlapping and duplication of work and overhead, both among these colleges and institutions themselves, and between them and the high schools, and (b) towards placing higher education (including professional studies), within the reach of all.

The general idea, I think, should be to chart a pyramid, whereby boys and girls could start in the elementary schools, at the bottom, and proceed steadily and systematically up until they graduate from the University of Maryland, at the top. Of course, the relation of this system to other Maryland institutions, such as the Johns Hopkins University, is important to be considered.

It seems to me that the best way to begin is for Dr. Woods, Mr. Reavis, and yourself to discuss the subject together, at your convenience, during the next two or three months, and thus work out tentative plans. Then we can go into these in detail, with the aid, if you think well, of other educators—such, for example, as Dr. Goodnow, and of others with experience, such as the members of the State Board of Education, and men like Mr. Griswold, Mr. Shehan, Senator Maloy, Mr. Coleman and many others I might name. You might also think the aid of the foundations desirable.

Cox's Campaign Train Wrecked

Governor Cox's presidential campaign train was wrecked about 4.30 o'clock last Wednesday, 14 miles north of Phoenix, Arizona, while en route to Prescott, Arizona.

The Democratic presidential candidate and his party were severely shaken when an engine and four cars of the special train were ditched, but all escaped serious injury. The most seriously injured was Charles A. Nichols, engineer, of Prescott, who had a leg broken in jumping from his cab when his engine toppled over.

Spreading rails were assigned by railroad men as the cause of the wreck, which compelled the Governor and his party to return to Phoenix that night and cancel his evening address at Prescott. His future itinerary also was upset.

Last Tuesday officially ushered in the fall season, although the two mornings prior to that had all the evidence of fall mornings. The days are growing shorter and shorter, and the weather prophets are predicting an early winter.

LEGISLATURE ENDS SESSION

Administration Election Bills And Few Minor Measures Pass

The extra session of the Legislature, called to provide additional registration and voting facilities for the newly enfranchised women of Maryland convened at Annapolis Monday night of last week and both houses of the Legislature organized and quickly got down to business.

Senator Norris, of Baltimore, was re-elected president of the Senate. Millard E. Tydings, of Harford county, was re-elected speaker of the House. Before the House met there was talk of a candidate to oppose Mr. Tydings, but it did not materialize.

After Speaker Tydings had been re-elected Mr. Coblentz introduced a resolution re-electing the desk clerks, sergeant-at-arms and other employes who served during the regular session. The resolution was unanimously adopted.

Mr. Jones, of Baltimore, introduced a resolution addressed to the Senate proposing the appointment of a committee of five to call on the Governor and inform him of the organization of the General Assembly and to inform him that it was ready to proceed with business.

Another committee was named to escort the members of the Senate and Governor to the hall of the House of Delegates.

In the presence of the members of the two houses the Governor read his message addressed to the General Assembly. In this message he declared that the Nineteenth Amendment to the Federal Constitution having become a law it is now Maryland's duty to amend the registration and election laws in order that full facilities may be given women and other new voters to register.

Governor Ritchie was liberally applauded as he entered the hall of the House. This message, which he read himself, was frequently punctuated with applause.

After he completed the reading of his message the senators returned to their chamber and the House resumed its session. To the surprise of the Speaker and other leading members, there came a rush of bills.

By a vote of 50 to 47 the House Tuesday afternoon declined to table a bill introduced by the Frederick county delegation to raise funds up to $75,000 to repair and improve the electric plant at Frederick. Then the flood gates opened and an inundation of local bills overwhelmed the House.

After many moves to stem the tide of bills being introduced had failed, Willis R. Jones introduced a rule that set Tuesday as the time limit for introduction of further measures. When this measure finally passed, 49 to 47, the administration forces were jubilant for the first time. This will effectively head off persons who might otherwise storm the State House with new measures.

Late Wednesday afternoon the House by a vote of 82 to 4 and under a suspension of the rules passed the administration election bill as amended and passed Tuesday night by the Senate.

Owing to a misunderstanding of the agreement as to when this bill was to come up a number of delegates voted against the measure, but afterward changed their votes on explanations from both the majority and minority floor leaders.

The Legislature adjourned sine die last Wednesday night just a little more than 48 hours after it had convened. The Senate adjourned at 9 o'clock and the House at 10.15.

The bills passed were the Administration's registration and election measures, with two slight amendments; the appropriation bill for the legislature's expenses, increased from $10,000 to $15,000; half a dozen minor registration measures and two affecting the finances of Cumberland and Frederick.

The program of the Republican leaders, including ratification of the suffrage amendment, was lost, as was the Gambrill Prohibition Enforcement bill, favored by the Anti-saloon League.

Agreement covering the administration bills, minor registration and Cumberland and Frederick measures was reached late Wednesday afternoon, after both the Democrats and and the Republicans in the House had caucussed, and Emory L. Coblentz, Democratic floor leader, and Vernon N. Simmons, Republican floor leader, had been in frequent conferences.

Miss Laura Bunting, of Pocomoke City, and Mr. I. A. Singleterry, of Carkton, N. C., were married at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. Geneve Bunting, last Wednesday night at 9.30 o'clock, by the Rev. J. W. Lacey, pastor of the Presbyterian Church, of Pocomoke City.

Fisherman's Luck

By KATE EDMONDS

(©, 1920, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

The cottage basked in the warm sun, the sea was a golden glimmer of lights winking, blinking, the waves came creaming in on the sand to break in lace-like foam and draw back again to come rushing in once more. Seagulls dipped and careened against the fresh wind or floated in the water like painted toys.

Roger stretched himself luxuriously and left the hammock to sit on the steps. His mother had advertised for a cook, and she had asked him to keep watch and to hire the very first promising applicant.

"They all promise," yawned Roger.

Mrs. Latimer never worried. She was perennially young looking and optimistic to the ninth degree. "I feel it in my bones she will be a love of a cook. Remember the last one, Roger? Old Chloe?"

"M-mmmm!" purred Roger, reminiscent of fried chicken and waffles — and the fickle Chloe.

"Well, I felt just that way about Chloe." She laughed as the car bore her away.

So Roger waited patiently, dutifully, but not one applicant appeared in answer to his mother's advertisement or to their agonized telephone messages to the employment bureaus in the city.

"It is too late, now," he told himself as he strolled down to the beach. "The last train was in an hour ago."

The beach was deserted save for a girl who sat patiently upon a rock holding a fishing-line.

"What is she catching?" he asked as he went up to her, and he repeated the question when he reached the rock.

"Nothing," she answered.

"Why try here—you'd have to go out in a boat to catch anything. You might dig some clams—if you are determined to have something," he suggested.

"What Is She Catching?"

"Thanks, I will try. How do you catch them?" she inquired hopefully.

He helped her down from the rock and regarded her with approval. She wore a blue cotton dress and a sailor hat and rather shabby shoes, and she was delightful to look at.

"Dig for them—but it is messy—must you have them now?"

She smiled and nodded. "I'm camping—I want them for my supper."

"Not alone?"

"Yes," her defiance was near to tears. "I worked in a store in town. I haven't been strong—the doctor said to go away to the shore—I just boarded, you know—and—well—I lost my job this morning and so I came down here. I'm going to work in the hotel as waitress tomorrow—isn't it beautiful here?" she breathed deeply of the salt tonic-laden air.

"Where will you sleep?" he asked.

She nodded toward the rocks. "The dryest cave there—I have a suitcase—"

"At high tide you would be drowned—I am Roger Latimer—I would like to have you meet my mother—can you cook?"

"Yes. My mother kept boarders years ago before she died—I used to help."

"My mother is looking for a cook—good wages, comfortable home and this—" sweeping his arm around sea and sky.

"If I could only do it!"

"Try," he urged. "We are starving—May I carry your bag, Miss—?"

"My name is Mary Wood—if I am to be a cook, you must call me Mary," she said independently.

Roger led her into the kitchen and showed her where chaos reigned. "It's the way they left it," he said plaintively.

"Never mind, I'll clean up for my supper, anyway, and if your mother doesn't want me to remain, that will help," she said brightly as she put on an apron and went to work.

Mrs. Latimer came home an hour later. Her delicate nose was lifted. "Fried chicken," she breathed rapturously. "Chloe has come back. My bones never failed me yet!"

She found her way to the kitchen, catching a glimpse of the cool dining room windows open to the sea. The table daintily laid, with a cutglass bowl of flaming nasturtiums in the center.

"Well!" she exclaimed, closing the kitchen door and peering through a thin blue haze of smoke at the pink face of the young cook. "I am glad to see some one here—Mary!" she screamed.

"Yes'm, that's my name," laughed the girl as she piled a dish with snowy mashed potatoes. "Do you like gravy with fried chicken, ma'm?"

"Where did you come from?" demanded Mrs. Latimer.

"Town. Lost my way from the station here—no taxi—walked along beach—tried fishing from a rock to amuse myself—along came a young man asking curious questions—so I made up an interesting tale—and when he found out I could cook he looked hungrily at me and brought me here."

"To cook your own dinner!" wailed Mrs. Latimer tragically. "Where is that idiotic Roger?"

"I sent him to the confectioner's for ice cream for dessert—I believe he's coming now—dinner's ready as soon as I change my dress—please put the ice cream in the refrigerator and break the news to him, dear Mrs. Latimer!" and Mary Wood, house guest of Mrs. Latimer disappeared up the back stair as Roger came into the kitchen door.

Mary Wood faced a very pink and embarrassed young man across the dinner table. "He never even asked for a reference," she said plaintively. "I might have stolen all the spoons," she reproached him, but her eyes were dancing.

"I thought you were fishing for a job," he said frankly, "and I felt a pretty lucky fisherman to land you!"

"I shall cook for you both until you find a thoroughly satisfactory handmaiden," declared Mary.

"I shall never hunt another one," decided Roger, and they all laughed, but there was a queer little smile of satisfaction on Mrs. Latimer's face.

"It will be hard to explain," she said to Roger one day when love was hovering all about and the young people were deliciously and uncertainly certain about each other.

"About Mary being our cook. Her father is a rich man."

"Pooh!" scoffed Mary, biting into a delicious doughnut she had fried that morning.

Roger reddened under his healthy tan. "Suppose I tell folks that cooks were scarce and so—my wife came to the rescue."

"Oh!" cried blushing Mary.

"Ah," smiled Mrs. Latimer, slipping into the house.

FOR SCIENTISTS TO PUZZLE

Age-Old Question As to the Development of Men and Animals From the Beginning.

The Wapiti, or American elk, was widely distributed over North America 500 years ago. But the northern limit of its natural habitat appears to have been, and still is, in southern British Columbia.

Leaving this borderland of wapitiland and traveling northward to Bering sea no other trace is found. In northern Siberia, Manchuria and Mongolia there is no trace of the species, or any variations of it, but in far western Mongolia and along the borders of Turkestan and Sungaria, it occurs again in the Altai mountains. The elk as if he might have been transported from Montana, the only perceptible difference being a more reddish coloring of the coat of the Altai elk.

The gap of 7,000 miles contains no trace of the living animal and so far as is known, no bones.

This has again raised the question among men of science whether man and the animals spread from some common center, or whether there were separate developments of creation in each continental division of the earth.

A Wicked Waste.

"This is rather a curiosity," remarked an artist who was entertaining a lady in his studio.

As he spoke he produced a small but exquisite painting.

"It is nice!" gushed his visitor.

"I was out in the country one day," he went on, "and had all my materials with me except a canvas. But I was so keen on painting this scene that I took out my handkerchief, stretched it upon my case, and painted the picture."

"Dear me!" exclaimed the lady. Then a look of horror came over her face as she went on: "But you'll never be able to wash all that paint out of it."

Foreign Brides Assorted.

The total number of American soldiers' marriages abroad is computed at 5,000. Of the brides whose nationality was recorded, 2,295 were French, 1,101 British, 79 Belgians, and only 31 Germans.

High Wind Velocity.

The highest wind velocity ever observed below ten kilometers' altitude was 83 meters a second or 186 miles an hour, observed from a pilot balloon over Lansing, Mich., at a height of about four and a half miles, on Dec. 17, 1919.

Ancient Lighthouse.

The Pharos of Alexandria, one of the seven wonders of the world, and the prototype of modern lighthouses, cost Ptolemy Philadelphus, its builder, $1,000,000. Though it cast rays for 16 centuries, its site is now a matter of surmise.

Travels of the Potato.

It is believed that potatoes were first grown in South America and that the Spaniards took them back to Europe when they overran Peru. Potatoes were later introduced to Italy, France, England, Ireland and to North America, in the order named.

Marble Cheaper Than Pine.

The United States commercial attache in Rome reports that imported pitch pine now costs more than native Italian walnut, and that builders save money by making stairways of marble instead of yellow pine.

Furs and Climates.

The furs of animals whose habitat is in warmer countries is not so durable, does not form as good leather and is less supple than the furs from the animals living in colder climates.

One Proper Pride.

WHAT SENATOR SMITH DID FOR THE PUBLIC SCHOOLS

Senator John Walter Smith has always manifested the deepest solicitude for the Public Schools and public education. In 1896 and before that time the working people of Maryland, and the farmers, did not have as much money as they have today. Senator Smith found that many poor people were keeping their children from school, and that these children were being denied an education because their parents had no money to buy school books and were too proud and self-respecting to go as paupers to ask for the books. He thought that all the children of the State, rich or poor, white and colored, should have an equal opportunity to get an education and equip themselves for making a living. He believed that the school should be free in fact as well as in name, and they could not be really free schools unless children could attend them without cost. He, therefore, prepared a bill at the session of the General Assembly in 1896, and introduced it into the Senate appropriating $150,000 a year for the purchase of school books, for the free use of all the pupils in the public schools, rich and poor alike, so that all should be equal and that there should be no class distinctions and that no child should be deprived of an education because its parents were unable to buy books.

Senator Smith's strong personal influence, and the justice of his cause prevailed and his bill was enacted into law as Chapter 135 of the Acts of 1896. When he introduced this bill Senator Smith made a powerful speech which carried conviction to the Senate.

Senator Smith's law required the various Boards of School Commissioners to purchase the necessary school books and to furnish them free of cost to all pupils in the public schools. The act requires the School Commissioners to furnish annually to the State Board of Education the title, the name of the publisher, and the net price paid for each text book purchased.

For this splendid law all the people of Maryland whose children attend the public schools—white and colord alike—have reason to be grateful to Senator John Walter Smith.

As Governor also Senator Smith did a fine service for the public schools in taking them out of politics by the reorganization of the system and making provision for the appointment of a State Superintent of Education.

Grades of Witches.

In the olden times there were three classes of witches. The black witch was a harmful affair, and the white witch was a helpful spirit. Then there was the gray witch who was sometimes harmful and sometimes helpful. Indictments against persons accused of witchcraft had to state the complexion of the spirit that bewitched.

Drink Water When Tired.

Dr. Eliza B. Mosher of Brooklyn urged the members of the Women's Medical society of New York state to drink a glass of water at 10 a. m. and others at 3, 4 and 5 p. m. This, she told them, would dilute the products of fatigue which were entering the blood and causing that tired feeling.

Harvesting by Machinery.

The beginning of practical methods in the direction of harvesting by machinery was not made until 1831.

Fall Brings Handsome Suits

EARLY fall has come along, bringing with it suits so altogether satisfying to women of good taste that they are more than thankful for them. There is real joy in their many excellencies—all up to the level of the most discriminating and sophisticated of demands. The colors, lines, cloths, trimmings and the marvelous tailoring combine to place them a little ahead of anything else in our regard. We may expect to see our streets filled with women so well outfitted that it is a pleasure to look at them.

All those velvety, luxurious looking materials that are soft and pliable and that seem to show colors at their best, are at hand for designers, and seem to have inspired them. Lines are conservative and pleasing and there is sufficient variety in styles. Furs we would expect to find in the company of fabrics that resemble and suggest them and they are used with great discretion on the new suits.

Two smart models illustrated here tell better than words can the virtues of the new modes. The suit at the left, of taupe velour, is a Russian inspiration with coat fastened at the left with large buttons set on a curved line. The back of the coat is longer than the front, and this feature is emphasized by embroidery in a handsome band. At the front there are rows of narrow bands or braid. The sleeves have deep flaring cuffs ornamented with buttons, and there are interesting slit pockets at the sides, crescent shape and finished with arrow heads. The choker collar is of beaver fur. The skirt is plain and rather full.

UNSAFE AS WELL AS UGLY

Anti-Signboard Argument Made by Chicagoans Effective in Curtailing General Nuisance.

Of course, a signboard is designed to attract attention. In some cities they appear to be attracting attention which threatens their existence in certain districts. This is a good thing, for at their best they have not been much of a scenic attraction and at their worst they have been pretty bad.

In Chicago, where a good deal of thought has been given to city planning, an ordinance was passed prohibiting signboards on roofs of buildings and requiring majority consent for permission to erect signboards in residence districts. The signboard people fought this ordinance to the United States Supreme court and were worsted. And the decision gave the people the right to have no signboards in the neighborhood of their homes if the majority agreed.

It is interesting to note that the arguments on which this case was defended by the people had to do rather with public safety and health than esthetic considerations. The boards were to be kept from the roofs for fear of their falling into the street, and the charge was made that they were a fire menace and a convenient ambush for robbers in residence districts.

Perhaps these practical phases afford the most convenient point of attack for the present, but from an esthetic point of view the signboard is forever and everywhere an offense. —Detroit News.

CURVE PROPERLY HANDLED

The appearance of this retaining wall is improved rather than marred by the semicircular curves introduced to save the large trees which border the property. Weathering of the top is prevented by the neat concrete coping.—From Popular Mechanics Magazine.

Prophetic Fire.

The death of Levi P. Morton reminds me of a strange occurrence at Canajoharie years and years ago, before Mr. Morton became vice president. He was the guest of the late Senator James Arkell, they having long been intimate friends. During Mr. Morton's stay at the Arkell home a fire occurred in which the guest's suitcase, marked "Levi P. Morton," was burned on one end in such a manner that all the letters of the name were destroyed but the "v" and "P." Just at that time Mr. Morton was being mentioned in connection with the Republican nomination for either president or vice-president, and the versatile Senator Arkell ventured the opinion that the strange work of the fire pointed toward success in that "v" and "P" meant vice president. A few months after the fire Levi P. Morton was nominated for and later elected to the vice presidency.—Fort Plain Standard.

Old Saloon Made Over.

An old saloon in the Italian section of New York has recently been taken over by the Y. M. C. A. and turned into a community center for Italian women and girls. The brown woodwork has been painted blue and lively chintz has been hung at the windows. The old place is hardly recognizable. This center is being used during the day as a nursery for children whose mothers are working, for a babies' clinic, and for mothers' club meetings; in the evenings for social times for girls who work during the day.

Why the Buffalo Wallow.

The water buffalo of China, writes C. O. Levine, associate professor of animal husbandry, Canton Christian college, in the Journal of Heredity (Washington), has few sweat glands in its skin, and for this reason cannot endure hard work in the sun for a long period, unless its body is wet with water. This accounts for the desire of the buffalo to wallow in mud or water. The animals are easily overcome by heat if worked hard in the sun and sometimes they go crazy and become very dangerous.

Costly Production.

In producing Sir Rider Haggard's famous story of "King Solomon's Mines" for the movies, $50,000 worth of ostrich plumes were used as part of the headdresses of the opposing armies. The film was produced in South Africa, where fortunately ostrich feathers are plentiful.—Brooklyn Eagle.

Another factor in the general extravagance is that a man so dislikes to take his $20 shoes into a crowded street car that he hires a taxicab.

If wooden shoes should become popular the best grades, in order to be satisfactorily expensive, must be mahogany or rosewood. Or, perhaps, sandalwood.

Mary Magdalene.

It is a fairly general opinion that Mary Magdalene derived her name from the town of Magdala, to which she belonged. Some scholars think that they have found her name in an old Hebrew root, and from that derivation they call her Mary of the embroidered hair. Nobody really knows why she was called Magdalene; but she is described in the Gospels as that woman out of whom Jesus Christ cast seven devils. There is no scriptural reason for identifying her with a woman of light character.

The White House.

John Adams was the first president to occupy the White House, in 1800. In those days it was gray, having been built of Virginia free stone. After the British burned it in 1814, white paint was used to cover the marks of the fire, and since that time this paint has been renewed regularly. The White House grounds within the iron fence contain 18 acres, while the adjoining White House lot has 70 acres.

PHONE COMPANY WILL MAKE BIG IMPROVEMENTS

$3,000,000 Program Scheduled For Maryland

Approximately $3,000,000 will be spent in the immediate future in extending telephone plant facilities and improving the service in Maryland. This announcement by the Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Company, following closely upon the establishment of new rates by the Public Service Commission, indicates clearly the steps the Company is taking to bring the service up to the highest standards of efficiency.

F. S. Whitman, division manager of the C. & P., said that the Company expects to spend $10,000,000 on improvements in the next three years. The new rates enable the Company to go ahead with a comprehensive program, he said, and projects totaling $3,000,000 have already been approved and operations started in many cases. A good deal now depends on the Company's ability to get the materials needed, but every possible effort is being made to secure them.

The construction schedule is a lengthy one. In Cumberland, the growing requirements of the city will be met by extensive additions to the underground and overhead cable systems. Cumberland's population has been jumping rapidly and it is expected to double within the next four years. To take care of the increased demand for telephone service, the Company's plant is now being enlarged by a pole line, 15,210 feet of overhead cable and approximately 7,800 feet of underground cable. Several other branch cable and pole lines will be needed later.

In Hagerstown, increased facilities will be provided by the installation of a new switchboard section and 500 additional subscriber lines, bringing the total number of lines which can be served up to 2,600. The present method of handling toll calls will be changed and improved, and audible ringing apparatus will be installed.

In Montgomery County, repairs will be made on the toll lines between Washington and Frederick, Gaithersburg and Damascus and Gaithersburg and Poolesville.

Some of the more important projects to be undertaken in and near Baltimore are building and equipping a new central office, equipping a school for student operators, new cables and extensions in various parts of the city and its suburbs, and the equipment of a new central office at St. Helena.

In addition to these, there are scores of operations to be undertaken in other parts of the State that are of lesser magnitude, but of first importance to the communities where the improvements will be made.

Music of the Shepherds.

In the stillness of the night, what more beautiful or soul-elevating than the mournful music of a flute? It was this instrument which the shepherds of Bethlehem were playing that memorable night, when the angels interrupted to announce to them the birth of the Savior.

Powerful Home Influence

The blessed influences that radiate from a home well ordered and happy are countless and far-reaching; the unselfish love there kindled and nourished shines forth as a beacon light to encourage the world's hopes and faith in humanity.—Madam Willard.

A Good Trencherman.

The phrase originated at the time when people ate their food off trenchers. These were usually clean white wood, probably maple, and were often hollow on both sides, so that meat could be served on one side and pudding on the other.

About Ideal Small Boy.

There is something that always makes me feel good—that is a red-haired, freckle-faced little boy that can whip all in his gang and at the same time is not a bully.—Exchange.

Grain Quickly Ripened in Norway.

It is a curious fact that grains ripen earlier in Norway than in the south of Europe, an advantage due to the long days and short nights of the summer in the north.

Moon's Time for Sleep.

A little girl of three, seeing a cloud of smoke enveloping the moon, said, "Auntie, the moon is going to sleep now; see 'em pulling the sheet up over it?"

Democratic Ticket

For President of the United States
JAMES M. COX
of Ohio

For Vice-President of the United States
FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT of New York

For United States Senator:
JOHN WALTER SMITH
of Worcester County

For Representative in the Sixty-Seventh Congress
THOMAS ALAN GOLDSBOROUGH
of Caroline County

It is all very simple. The producer feeds the cow, the middleman milks her and the consumer pays for the milk.

The people who couldn't get away from Princess Anne for any vacation, spent the summer in a mighty good place.

Never before in the history of housekeeping has the masculine element devoted so much time to cleaning up the cellar.

After serving half-sized portions of food the restaurant proprietors feel they are entitled to great credit for reducing prices.

Not merely are the candidates getting throat trouble but some of the voters find difficulty in swallowing the things presented to them.

Although women are commonly supposed to talk fluently, a lot of anxious politicians can't get them to say how they are going to vote.

The coal miners who are striking all the time are probably kicking because manufactured goods cost more as the result of scarcity of fuel.

The politicians who are trying to win votes out of social unrest may regret it some day when they have a relative blown up by a bomb explosion.

The people who keep their feet on the ground often get them stuck in the mud and those who hitch their wagons to a star sometimes fall in the ditch.

There would be very little public regret if the people who drive an automobile while drunk get thoroughly smashed up while being transported to jail.

While a lot of girls have put on overalls and have gone out to help the farmers, a lot of the boys have gone into the cities to sell chewing gum over the counter.

The people who allow dead leaves to lie around their grounds until the wind blows them off are encouraging their neighbors to deliver them an equal supply by the same means.

One million two hundred and fifty thousand tons of old paper burned annually and some folks who help burn it will kick when the publisher has to raise the price of his sheet on account of the cost of news print.

THE FORCES OF DESTRUCTION

While police forces are doing their best to hunt down the authors of the terrible crime apparently committed by anarchists at the Morgan offices in New York, it will be well to ask what can be done to remove the state of mind that prompts such outrages.

If this act corresponds to many others to which it seems similar, some one has set out to kill innocent people in order to promote revolutionary ideas. Such a man must be looney. If he had any sense he would know that such a deed would create detestation and abhorrence for his cause.

The man who commits such a fearful crime is not always the one most responsible for it. He has commonly a weak mentality. The people who put false ideas into his head bear the heaviest blame.

The world is full of propaganda which calls for an overturn of the structures of society that has been built up after 5000 years of patient effort. Many evils exist which ought to be remedied, but no lasting reform is accomplished all at once. Changes have to be worked out gradually through experiment, one thing at a time.

The promoters of revolution have no idea how they would go to work to create a new social order and they would make a ridiculous failure of it if they had the chance, as they have done in Russia.

They spread around the most grossly exaggerated statements and fantastic lies. A lot of sincere and well meaning people accept their statements as gospel truth. Their falsehoods fall into [illegible] unbalanced minds which meditate [illegible] wrath until they explode in [illegible] terrible act as has just failed [illegible] at New York.

[illegible] when false statements [illegible] ought not to be permitted to go unchallenged.

THE READY SERVICE MEN

It was a notable feature of the terrible disaster in Wall street that the ex-service men seemed to be the first to recover their presence of mind. They knew what to do. This was not merely because they had been through scenes of carnage. It was also because their experiences in the army made them quick thinkers and practical in an emergency. Former officers of the army and navy were at work within two minutes after the crash came and already were loading injured people into automobiles and starting them for the hospitals.

An incident like this proves what many people have been claiming, that men who went through the army experience would be very valuable in the exigencies of daily life. Quick thinkers count everywhere and the discipline of the service created that capacity.

THE REMEDY FOR GASOLINE SHORTAGE

The country is using enormous quantities of gasoline for pleasure cars. The use of tractors and trucks for production and distribution is multiplying. Gasoline has become one of the basic necessities of business. Yet the supply is far from sufficient and the reserves of oil are diminishing.

The scientists are working on substitutes for gasoline, as yet with somewhat doubtful results.

The president of the Standard Oil Company, of New Jersey, urges people to stop buying high-powered motor cars which use such a great quantity of this indispensable fuel. In England where gasoline costs almost $1 a gallon people have learned to make it go further. America is the only country that insists on high-powered and heavy cars and they waste the gasoline recklessly.

EFFECTS OF THE HOUSE SHORTAGE

Formerly there were in most places a plenty of houses or apartments to rent. Many good houses would stand vacant a long time. But as the result of lack of building the shortage of dwellings is now estimated at from one to several millions, and great numbers of people are at their wit's end to find a comfortable home. Some young people who have left Princess Anne to live in distant places have encountered discomforts they did not anticipate.

Many people solve the problem by living with relatives and rooms in boarding and lodging houses are eagerly sought after. Multitudes live in one or two rooms and do light house-keeping with some meals at restaurants and a lot of canned and package stuff. It is not usually a good substitute for a nutritious home table.

Whether the boarding and lodging house element ever can develop home and family feeling seems doubtful. Children must spend more time on the street and separations and divorces must become more common.

Of course bright and ingenious people always find a way to meet difficulties. The pioneer ancestors lived in one room cabins and developed a fine type of citizenship. In the matter of space the little family living in a tiny apartment is back pretty near to the pioneer basis.

People can get along on small space if they give up trying to surround themselves with luxury. They can get along with but a few things and live comfortably and inexpensively. Wonders can be done with cooking on oil and gas stoves. But husband and wives and children must love each other or their cramped quarters will mean constant friction.

A Grateful Letter

It is in trying conditions like that related below by Mrs. Geo. L. North, of Naples, N. Y., that proves the worth of Chamberlain's Colic and Diarrhoea Remedy. "Two years ago last summer" she says "our little boy had dysentery. At that time we were living in the country eight miles from a doctor. Our son was taken ill suddenly and was about the sickest child I ever saw. He was in terrible pain all the time and passed from one convulsion into another. I sent my husband for the doctor and after he was gone thought of a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic and Diarrhoea Remedy in the cupboard. I gave him some of it and he began to improve at once. By the time the doctor arrived he was out of danger."

Wilson And Penrose

One of Senator Penrose's characteristically brutal attacks upon President Wilson, in which the essentially coarse nature of the speaker appears in his use of such words as "the hypocrisy, effeminacy, incompetency and inefficiency" of the President of the United States, has brought forth a well-deserved rebuke from another Pennsylvanian, also a graduate of Harvard like the Senator, but a man whose spiritual elevation is in marked contrast to the strictly materialistic mentality of the recluse of Spruce street. This is Rev. Dr. E. Ellsworth Shumaker, a native of Muncy, and a well-known Congregational clergyman, who now makes his home in Cambridge, Mass. In a letter to The Springfield Republican, in which Dr. Shumaker says that he was brought up a Republican and never voted for Wilson, after praising the President's great war record, he goes on to say:

I believe that not ten years will go by before his name, by almost universal consent, will be written with the names of Washington and Lincoln and Roosevelt. And he has done a more difficult and greater work than either of them.

I never voted, I said, for Mr. Wilson. But if I had the opportunity tomorrow I would vote for him with both hands up.

It is unbelievable, the vast, heartless, calculated and prolonged propaganda of character assassination that has been carried on against Mr. Wilson. I never have contemplated its like. It is one of the dark chapters of shame.

Compare the spiritual and noble face of Mr. Wilson with the gross face and figure of Senator Penrose. A volume of revelation in one look! I sat in the gallery and watched and studied our Senators by the hour. As I have looked at the Senator from Pennsylvania and looked at the others, I have thought, "You are the Caliban of the United States Senate."

By the hour I have forecast his votes on the different questions. Always hit it. Never failed once. Always voted against labor and for capital; always against the people and for privilege. Yet this is the man who traduces President Wilson. And this is the leader of the Republican party—Senator of my native State, the rose of Pennsylvania and leader of my father's party! I am covered with shame.

Mr Cox will be the next President if my vote can help make it so.

There are thousands of Republicans who, like Dr. Shumaker, are filled with indignation and righteous anger at the persistent villification of the President of the United States by a conscienceless gang of G. O. P. machine politicians, whose resentment against the occupant of the White House is largely due to the fact that for nearly eight years they have been deprived of the patronage so dear to them. Such Republicans, both men and women, will carry their rebuke of such methods to the polls in November, and their number will be sufficiently large to make a very decided impression—Philadelphia Record.

Chronic Catarrh

Our manner of living makes us very susceptible to colds and a succession of colds causes chronic catarrh a loathsome disease with which it is estimated that ninety-five per cent of our adult population are afflicted. If you would avoid chronic catarrh you must avoid colds or having contracted a cold get rid of it as quickly as possible. Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is highly recommended as a cure for colds and can be depended upon.

W. C. T. U. At Ocean City

Woman temperance leaders of Maryland will attend the forty-fifth annual convention of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of the State today, (Tuesday), Wednesday and Thursday at the Presbyterian Church of Ocean City. Among the speakers will be Miss Anna A. Gordon, the national president; Dr. Daniel A. Poling, president of the United Society of Christian Endeavor, and Miss Rose Davidson, of the New York Training School on Americanization. Officers of the Maryland Union are Mrs. Mary R. Haslup, president; Mrs. Pauline W. Holme, vice-president; Mrs. Annie D. Starr and Miss Rebecca T. Miller, secretaries; Mrs. Katherine A. Lips, treasurer, and Mrs. Howard Lloyd, musical director.

Don't forget that today is the first registration day. If you are a Democrat, whether man or woman, and not registered, be sure to get your name on the registration books.

Mr. R. L. King, a former resident of this town, but now employed as a telegraph operator for the Pennsylvania railroad at Norfolk, Va., spent the week-end with his sister, Mrs. G. L. Brewington.

Women Voters Must Tell Age

"Tell your age to registration officials, or stay off the books!" This is the dictum of Boards of Supervisors in Baltimore city and the counties to women who want to enroll as voters, but who are not willing to reveal their ages. It was hoped that the Legislature would enact the law exempting women from complying with that provision of the registration law which requires the giving of ages, a provision which was originally designed as a safeguard against repeating. The hope was a vain one. Because of the failure of the General Assembly to act favorably on the bill all women must tell their age when they register.

Governor Scrutinizes Bills

Governor Ritchie and Attorney General Armstrong were engaged last Thursday afternoon in going over the bills passed at the special session of the Legislature. The Governor has already signed two measures—the administration's election bill, which was slightly amended in the Senate, and the appropriation bill. This latter measure was amended to make an appropriation of $15,000, rather than $10,000, for the special session. The Governor said he would sign the remainder of the bills, which are almost entirely local measures dealing with registration and elections, in Baltimore this week.

Cholera Appears In County

Cholera has made its appearance on several farms in the county. Cases of this disease have been found in the vicinity of Tull's Corner and Venton. Farmers in these communities should keep a careful lookout for this disease appearing in their herds and keep their hogs under quarantine and arrange to have them inoculated.

Dr. I. K. Atherton, government veterinarian in charge of Hog Cholera Work in Maryland, will explain at the Farmers' Picnic Thursday, October 7th, near Princess Anne, the single and double treatment and other important considerations in the control of hog cholera. Farmers should hear this discussion as this disease is one of the most serious factors in raising hogs in this section of the State.

The people who are constantly changing their minds are usually satisfied to get small change for it.

GIVE IT TO MOLE

Little Animal Hereby Qualifies as a Samson.

Venerable Fisherman Tells Story That Should Remove All Doubt Concerning the Strength of the Small Earth Disturber.

"Do you want to know the most powerful animal for its size in the world?"

The question was asked just after a venerable fisherman had landed a fine eastern brook trout, says Howard M. Wright in the Portland Oregonian. We were standing on the shore of one of the lakes well back in the Cascades.

I had only a few moments before unslung my pack at his cabin, and, taking a trail that led to the lake, had found him right in his glory. I, of course, was interested in getting all the data the old fellow had to offer and we sat down on a log and as he produced a Missouri meerschaum I handed out a box of tobacco. He proceeded to fill up with what he called his favorite brand next to H. O.

That gave me a clew and I knew at once the ancient angler could tell some big ones. He fired up deliberately and crossed his legs in a leisurely manner.

"Well, sir," he started out, "I reckon, according to what one of them scientists told me that happened in here a while back that the mole has got 'em all stopped. I had been telling some stories about being towed around in a boat by a big fish off'n the Newfoundland banks and after I got through he waited a little while and then said:

"'Well, captain, I have never had a lot of experience with big fish, but I certainly had my eyes opened one day. I had accidentally caught a live mole, and for no particular reason I brought it into the house and put it on the floor. It began to wander about the room and finally came up against the leg of a chair which happened to be up close to the wall. The mole smelled it over a little, backed up a little, sniffed some and put his nose in between that chair and the wall and pushed her aside as if she had been a puff ball.

"'That certainly got my interest, so I said to myself. "Looka here, Mr. Mole, we'll try you out and see what your limits are." I hunted around until I found a Webster's dictionary and a big family Bible. I placed these on the chair and piled other books on top of them until that chair would hold no more and waited for him to try it out.

"'Pretty soon he came, keeping close to the wall. This time he never stopped to sniff, but walked right through.

"'That got me, but I scratched my head a little and when I saw Mr. Mole coming up for the third time I jumped on top of the pile of books. But it was no use; he kept right on going and slid the whole business of us right to one side.

"'Well, I was somewhat amazed, but suddenly a thought came to me and I went out and called in my neighbor, a big, fat man, weighing a few pounds under 300. He straddled aboard.

"'On came the mole, this time his muscles fairly standing out to get into the fray. But he was no foolhardy young mole. He took time to size up the situation, sort of shrugged his shoulders and acted as if he was spitting on his hands. Finally he poked his nose in between the legs of that chair and the wall and raised those mighty shoulders. The chair creaked a little, moved slowly to one side and the mole passed—but the chair broke and the fat man came down with a thud on the mole's back. And, do you know, that mole hesitated only a moment and then started for the corner of the room, carrying the fat man on his back.'"

Not All Flattery.

The wife of an Indianapolis traveling man is a poor correspondent. Her letters are short and sometimes do not arrive within a week of each other. Naturally before they reach him he is often rather worried over home affairs as to family health and such things. So on his last trip home he said: "No matter how far away I am from Indianapolis the first day I fail to receive a letter I shall come straight home."

Since then his daily letters have come regularly and are also newsy and long. At first he was much gratified, but now, since he has more time to reflect, he is beginning to wonder whether or not he should feel flattered.

Had Their Tribulations.

Ten years ago George L. Verity and Jennie S. Turney, Chicago, first cousins, were pronounced man and wife by a minister in a Gretna Green marriage at St. Joseph, Mich. Both being Catholics they were married again by a priest when they returned to Chicago. Two years later they were separated, because the statutes of Illinois and Michigan forbid first cousins to marry. Now they have just been married again in Kentucky, where the marriage of first cousins is legal.

Seeking a Rare Plant.

In 1803 a scientific man named Drummond discovered one solitary aronia plant in the woods of St. Tammany Parish, Louisiana, and it is cherished today at the Arnold Arboretum. Now Harvard has written to New Orleans asking to have Louisiana searched again for the rare growth.

After Thorough Trial a Detroit, Mich., Man Endorses Pe-ru-na

The following letter written from Detroit, Michigan is no snap judgment expressed on the merits of Pe-ru-na, the well-known catarrh remedy, but rather a mature, sober opinion formed after a full year's trial.

This is the way Mr. Michael Fako of 906 East Palmer Avenue, in the Michigan Metropolis, writes: "After using PE-RU-NA for about one year will say I have found it a very good medicine for catarrh. It has helped me a great deal and I am very well satisfied. I have gained in weight, eat and sleep well, my bowels are regular and better color in my face.

"PE-RU-NA has done wonders and to me is worth its weight in gold. I shall continue to use PE-RU-NA as long as I live and recommend to my friends who are troubled with catarrh."

Nothing can be more convincing than an endorsement of this nature from an actual user. There are many people in every community whose experience, in using Pe-ru-na, has been identical with Mr. Fako's. It is the standby for coughs, colds, catarrh, stomach and bowel disorders and all catarrhal conditions.

Put up in both tablet and liquid form. SOLD EVERYWHERE.

Lifetime in Weaving a Shawl.

The Metropolitan museum of New York has a rare Persian shawl said to be 165 years old. The shawl is 11 feet by 4 feet, worked in long flowing designs of the palm leaf and the River of Life, with the stories of the mosques. The predominating colors are mellowed garnets and brown, with alternating sheens of steel gray and rusty brown. An expert to whom the shawl was shown said its makeup probably represented the lifetime of the weavers.

Nature's Busy Workers.

In the great office of nature there are innumerable departments with endless work going on, and the fine flower that you behold there, gaudily attired and scented like a dandy, is by no means what it appears to be, but rather is like a laborer toiling in the sun and shower, who has to submit a clear account of his work and has no breathing space to enjoy himself in a playful frolic.

Valuable Fat in Alligator Pear.

Among the fruits used for food, the alligator pear is remarkable for its large proportion of fat, which runs as high as 20 per cent, or about the same as that of common cream, states an article in Popular Mechanics Magazine. It has been found that the human system assimilates this fat very readily up to as great a quantity as four and a half ounces a day.

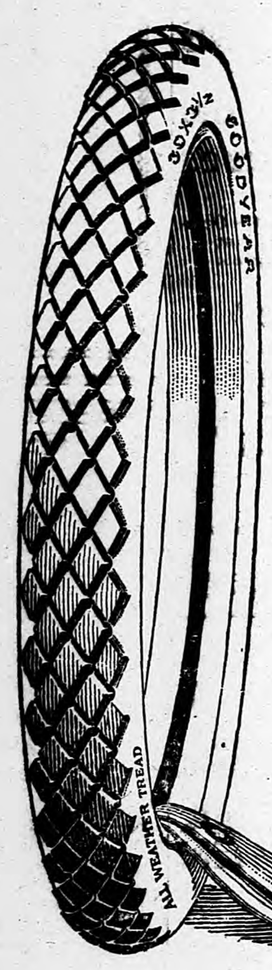
Low-Cost Mileage—in Goodyear Tires for Small Cars



There is no economy in buying so-called bargains in tires offered at sensationally cheap prices when a well-made tire delivers mileage at a considerably lower rate of cost.

Add the time and trouble occasioned by frequent replacements and it is fully apparent why tire users, seeking real mileage economy, are not attracted to very cheaply priced tires.

The popularity of Goodyear Tires, of the 30x3-, 30x3½- and 31x4-inch sizes, is based on the fact that they are built to deliver exceptional mileage at low cost and consistently do so.

If you own a Ford, Chevrolet, Maxwell, Dort or other car taking these sizes, go to your nearest Service Station for Goodyear Tires—for true Goodyear mileage, value, economy.

30 x 3½ Goodyear Double-Cure Fabric, All-Weather Tread ..... $23.50

30 x 3½ Goodyear Single-Cure Fabric, Anti-Skid Tread ..... $21.50

Goodyear Heavy Tourist Tubes cost no more than the price you are asked to pay for tubes of less merit—why risk costly casings when such sure protection is available? 30 x 3½ size in waterproof bag ..... $4.50

PROCLAMATION

Proposing Amendments To The Constitution of the State, 1920.

Whereas, at the January Session of the General Assembly of Maryland, held in the year 1920, two Acts were passed, to-wit: Chapter 319 proposing an amendment to Section 15 of Article III of the Constitution of the State, title "Legislative Department," regulating the compensation of Members of both Houses of the General Assembly; and Chapter 565 proposing an amendment to Section 37 of Article 4 of the Constitution of the State, title "Judiciary Department," regulating the pay of Clerks of Courts, and which said Chapters 319 and 565 are in the words and figures following:

CHAPTER 319.

AN ACT to propose an amendment to Section 15 of Article III, of the Constitution of the State of Maryland, title "Legislative Department," regulating the compensation of the members of both Houses of the General Assembly of Maryland, and to provide for the submission of said amendment to the qualified voters of the State of Maryland for adoption or rejection.

SECTION 1. Be it enacted by the General Assembly of Maryland, (three-fifths of all the members of each of the two Houses concurring), That the following be and the same is hereby proposed as an amendment to Section 15 of Article III, of the Constitution of the State of Maryland, title "Legislative Department," the same if adopted by the legally qualified voters of the State, as herein provided, to become Section 15 of Article III, of the Constitution of the State of Maryland.

15. The General Assembly may continue its session so long as in its judgment the public interest may require for a period not longer than ninety days; and each member thereof shall receive a compensation of three hundred dollars per annum and five dollars per diem for every day he shall attend the session, but not for such days as he may be absent, unless absent on account of sickness or by leave of the House of which he is a member and he shall also receive such mileage as may be allowed by law, not exceeding twenty cents per mile; and the presiding officer of each House shall receive an additional compensation of five dollars per diem. When the General Assembly shall be convened by proclamation of the Governor, the session shall not continue longer than thirty days, and in such case the compensation shall be the same as herein prescribed.

SECTION 2. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That said aforegoing section hereby proposed as an amendment to the Constitution of the State of Maryland shall, at the next general election for Members of Congress held in this State, be submitted to the legal and qualified voters of the State, for their adoption or rejection, in pursuance of the directions contained in Article XIV of the Constitution of the State of Maryland, and at the said general election the vote on the said proposed amendment to the Constitution shall be by ballot, and upon each ballot there shall be printed the words "For the Constitutional Amendment," and "Against the Constitutional Amendment," as now provided by law, and immediately after said election due returns shall be made to the Governor of the vote for and against said proposed amendment, as directed by said Fourteenth Article of the Constitution, and further proceedings had in accordance with said Article Fourteen.

Approved April 9, 1920.

CHAPTER 565.

AN ACT to amend Section 37 of Article 4, title "Judiciary Department," of the Constitution of this State, and to provide for the submission of said amendment to the qualified voters of this State for adoption or rejection.

SECTION 1. Be it enacted by the General Assembly of Maryland, (three-fifths of all members of each of the two houses concurring), That the following section be, and the same is, hereby proposed as an amendment to Section 37, of Article 4, title "Judiciary Department," of the Constitution of this State, and if adopted by the legal qualified voters thereof, as herein provided, said section shall supersede and stand in the place and in stead of Section 37 of said Article 4 of the Constitution of Maryland.

SEC. 37. There shall be a Clerk of each of the said Courts of Baltimore City, except the Supreme Bench, who shall be elected by the legal and qualified voters of said city at the election to be held in said city on the Tuesday next after the first Monday of November, in the year eighteen hundred and sixty-seven, and shall hold his office for six years from the time of his election, and until his successor is elected and qualified, and be re-eligible thereto, subject to be removed for willful neglect of duty or other misdemeanor in office, on conviction in a Court of Law. The salary of each of the said Clerks shall be forty-five hundred dollars a year, payable only out of the fees and receipts collected by the Clerks of said city, and they shall be entitled to no other perquisites or compensation. In case of a vacancy in the office of Clerk of any of said Courts, the Judges of said Supreme Bench of Baltimore City shall have power to fill such vacancy until the general election of Delegates to the General Assembly to be held next thereafter, when a Clerk of said Court shall be elected to serve for six years thereafter; and the provisions of this Article in relation to the appointment of Deputies by the Clerks of the Circuit Courts in the counties shall apply to the Clerks of the Courts in Baltimore City.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted by the Authority aforesaid. That the said foregoing section hereby proposed as an amendment to the Constitution shall, at the next election for members of Congress to be held on the Tuesday next after the first Monday in the month of November, nineteen hundred and twenty (1920), be submitted to the legal and qualified voters thereof for their adoption or rejection, in pursuance of the direction contained in Article 14 of the Constitution of this State; and at the said election the vote on said proposed amendment to the Constitution shall be by ballot, and upon each ballot there shall be written or printed the words "For Constitutional Amendment" and "Against Constitutional Amendment," as now provided by law, and immediately after said election due returns shall be made to the Governor of the vote for and against said proposed amendment, as directed by the said Article 14 of the said Constitution.

Approved April 9, 1920.

Now, therefore, I, Albert C. Ritchie, Governor of the State of Maryland, in pursuance of the direction contained in Section 1 of Article 14 of the Constitution of Maryland do hereby order and direct that this Proclamation containing a full, true and correct copy of the text of said Chapters 319 and 565 of the Acts of the General Assembly of Maryland of 1920, be published in at least two newspapers in each of the counties of the State where so many may be published and where not more than one may be published then in that newspaper, and in three newspapers published in the City of Baltimore, one of which shall be published in the German language, once a week for at least three months next preceding the general election to be held in the State of Maryland on Tuesday, the 2nd day of November, 1920, at which election the said proposed amendments to the Constitution shall be submitted in form and manner prescribed by the General Assembly, to the legal and qualified voters of the State for their adoption or rejection.

A HERO OF LEGEND

King Arthur Never Proved to Be Real Personage.

Early Saxon Chronicles Shed No Light on His Personality—His Burial Place Found by the Abbot of Glastonbury.

The story of King Arthur, rich in the poetic element, is weak on the historical side. That a hero-king, answering in some respects to the descriptions in British ballads, had existence, is possible, for it seems unlikely that so many associations should cling around an utterly mythical personage. Yet he has no mention whatever in the Saxon Chronicle, whose pages are rich in allusions to British kings struggling for freedom against the Anglo-Saxon invaders; and our main authority on the subject is the account written, six centuries later than the reputed period of King Arthur, by Geoffry of Monmouth, whose narratives no one can accept seriously as truth. The legends, collected and handed down to us by Sir Thomas Malory, a writer of Edward IV's reign, were printed by Caxton under the title of "Morte d'Arthur."

When Henry II, in 1177, was in Wales, receiving the submission of the princes, he chanced to hear the deeds of King Arthur sung by the Welsh, and was told the exact place of the hero's burial at Glastonbury. Some years afterward the abbot of Glastonbury, the king's nephew, searched for the body, with what result let Giraldus Cambrensis, described in Camden's "Britannia" as "an eye witness," tell us:

"At the depth of seven feet a huge, broad stone, whereon a leaden cross was fastened on the part that lay downward, in rude and barbarous letters, this inscription in Latin was written upon that side of the lead that was toward the stone, 'Here lies buried King Arthur in Avalon Isle.' Digging deeper they discovered his body in the trunk of a tree, the bones of great bigness. His Queen Guinivere, a lady of passing beauty, lay by him, whose tresses of hair, in color like gold, seemed perfect and whole until it was touched, but then showed itself to be dust."

When Glastonbury abbey was made a ruin in Henry VIII's time the remains of King Arthur and his queen were ruthlessly swept away. It was on Cadbury hill, in Somerset, the famed Camelot of the Arthurian romance, that the British king prepared for his great stand against the Anglo-Saxon foe; and the name of Arthur still clings to the locality in "Arthur's Lane" and "Arthur's Well." In the battle, almost the only event of his life to be regarded as historical fact, Arthur seems to have come out of the darkness by which he is surrounded. The Welsh songs are full of praises to his valor in the fight with Cedric, the Saxon king; "The Saxon Chronicle," unwilling, perhaps, to record a severe defeat, is silent upon the subject, but the result for a time, was a crushing blow to the invaders, and Cedric was never able to push his way into Somerset.—London Telegraph.

Newspapers in Spain.

The Spanish newspaper presents a problem to the American citizen who contemplates an advertising campaign in the Spanish press. There are 22 newspapers printed in Madrid, but as a rule these newspapers are supported by political, religious or industrial groups, and the advertiser is neither the source of income nor, as sometimes happens in consequence, the object of deferential admiration that he is in the United States.

The editor edits for a public more interesting in local news than any other. One must remember also that of the approximate 22,000,000 people in Spain, more than half are illiterate and read no newspapers at all. No evening paper issues a Sunday edition, and no morning paper comes out on Monday, for Sunday work of any kind in newspaper plants is forbidden by the government.

Statue to Balboa.

Panama is to have a statue of Balboa, the discoverer of the Pacific ocean. The contract for the work has already been signed at Madrid, and the monument has been intrusted to the sculptor Benilliure. That there is to be no undue haste in the matter is signified by the fact that the contract does not call for the delivery of the monument until two years after the signing of the agreement. The opportunities for a most effective piece of work are many, with the likeness of the man overlooking the ocean of his discovery. The grandiose setting would seem to call for a grandiose actor to dominate the scene, says the Christian Science Monitor.

Aviation in the Sahara.

The French do not regard airplanes as profitable for use in commerce over the Sahara desert; it costs too much to move the mineral wealth of the territory by airplane when pack mules and camels can be used instead. But to supplement the desert police and to maintain French prestige military aviators are well worth while. The Arab tribes have deep respect for them and take to their heels whenever an airplane arrives.

Navy Never Supplied President.

No naval man has ever held the presidency, while 14 of the presidents were at one time or another connected with the army.

WHY

Napoleon Chose Violet as Floral Emblem

Why was the violet selected as the floral emblem of the House of Bonaparte? Why was that traditionally modest, shrinking little flower chosen by so aggressive a character as Napoleon I?

The subject was recalled with renewed interest recently by the various anecdotes printed of the late Empress Eugenie, several of them dwelling on her fondness for violets, the flower of the Bonapartes. The following is an interesting explanation of the matter, given by an authority on the Bonaparte family, Edward Legge, author of "The Empress Eugenie," a book that aroused considerable comment ten years ago.

According to Mr. Legge, three days before Napoleon I embarked for Elba the great emperor, still undecided whether he would resign himself to his banishment, was walking in the gardens at Fontainebleau. The Duc de Bassano was arguing that the time for withdrawal was past and Napoleon was much excited. He saw a child gathering violets and asked for them. The boy gave them, and after a few minutes the emperor, who had not replied to the Duc, hitherto, remarked:

"The accident of this occurrence is a secret hint to me to follow the example of these modest flowers. Yes, gentlemen, henceforth the violet shall be the emblem of my wishes."

General Bertrand expressed the hope that Napoleon's resolution might last longer than the flowers which had inspired it. The next day Napoleon was seen walking about the gardens with a bunch of violets and stopping to pick some from a bed. A grenadier on guard suggested that it would be easier to pick them in a year's time—they would be more plentiful. In answer to the emperor's questions the man informed him that almost all his comrades, as well as he, hoped he would come back from Elba before the year was out. On returning to his barracks this grenadier told his comrades about the emperor's violets, and they began to call Bonaparte "Pere la Violette," which led to the adherents of the ex-emperor wearing the flower as a memorial in the spring.

INDUCING OTHERS TO TALK

Why the Art of Listening Is One That Is Well Worthy of Acquirement.

It has been noted that men who have attained great eminence were veritable interrogation marks when youngsters. They wanted to know the why and the wherefore of everything. They wanted to listen.

There is a difference between listening and silence. The best listener is not the person who never says a word; there is an art of listening.

The expert listener guides the talker into the desired paths not only by asking the right questions, but by evincing intelligent, sympathetic interest and making appropriate comments.

It is my experience, says a writer in Forbes magazine, that very few men who have accomplished big things can talk freely about themselves or their activities. They have to be coaxed, they have to be steered, they have to be stimulated. They must have the right kind of listening.

Adolph Ochs, publisher of the New York Times, was once approached by an interviewer who wanted Mr. Ochs to give an account of his career. The famous publisher politely but emphatically declined. By and by, however, he discovered that the interviewer was surprisingly familiar with his life's work and, under the influence of the right kind of listening, Mr. Ochs, almost before he realized it, was talking more intimately about himself than he had ever talked before.

Why Atlantic Is Patrolled.

After the wreck of the Titanic, eleven of the leading nations of Europe joined with the United States and Canada to provide a service for the observation and patrol of ice along the north Atlantic steamship lanes. These nations contribute in different proportions to the expense of this service, but the work is done by the United States coast guard cutters Seneca and Tampa, who cruise back and forth during the warmer months when the icebergs come south and send out to all vessels wireless reports of the location and movements of the ice.—Boys' Life.

Why "Yellow-Backs" Have Gone.

Fathers who used to be warned against the evil effects of stories dealing with Jesse James and other bandits now furnish the money so their own boys can go to the movies and see actual reproductions of all sorts of crimes. The motion picture art is worthy of higher subjects than these. Unless the reform begins from the inside, the outside influences, as Mr. Pinkerton suggests, will be forced to make the initial move.—Indianapolis News.

How Hay Is Loaded.

Hay is now loaded and packed into freight cars by means of the air blast. The hay is drawn up to a platform beside the car by a crane, and a powerful air blower hurls it into the car, pressing it down and packing it.

Why He Is Good Citizen.

The adage runs: "Many men, many minds," yet all minds are not equally keen, nor equally honest. It's the man who thinks clearly and honestly that most invites confidence. Such a man is a big asset to any community.

HOW

SIDEWALKS VARY IN THE CITIES OF OLD EUROPE.—The sidewalks and pavements in different countries vary as much as the people. In many towns of Holland the sidewalks are private property, and one is not expected to step across them unless entering the house to which the walk belongs. In many cities the streets and sidewalks end in canals, especially in The Hague and Rotterdam.

In many Swiss towns sidewalks are under arcades, the masonry houses being built to the curb. Under the arcades are paved sidewalks, which in summer are swarmed with tourists. In Chester, Eng., some streets have sheltered sidewalks similar to the Swiss sort, but they are even more curious, since they are raised to the second floor. The island of Malta has flights of stairs for sidewalks, that lead to the sea.

In certain old German towns the sidewalks seem to be regarded as incidental, sometimes narrowing to a foot or two. An Italian nobleman had the courtyard of his palace paved with slabs of stone, each piece of which had been brought from a different part of the world. The famous Rue de la Republique, in Lyons, is laid in glass blocks, eight inches square, so systematically fitted together that water cannot penetrate. Tombstones have been employed for paving in some places in England, and in Africa human skulls have been used.

FIRST TO ADOPT UNIFORMS

How the Present Regulation of Attire and Martial Music Came Into General Use.

The early Lacedemonians were the first who availed themselves of martial music for regulating the march, as well as making the will of the leaders intelligible without words to the practiced ears of the warriors. The learning of the various melodies, which, that they might remain unintelligible to the enemy, had much variety, was one of the chief occupations of the army training school. They also first adopted military uniforms, choosing red that the enemy might not perceive if he had inflicted wounds.

Lacedemonian troops were wont to wear their hair long as a sign of freedom, a privilege which was not allowed to mechanics, as it was not permitted to slaves to bear arms. At the opening and during the continuance of war the military officers always accompanied the army and drilled it in the morning with marching, in manipulations and evolutions; they ate with the warriors, exercised them in their songs of praise to the gods and heroes, and slept like the private soldiers, on their arms. At the conclusion of a war the king gave an account of his administration of it. Men who died in battle were honored the same as other immortalized heroes. The whole country put on mourning when the king died, and business was suspended for 10 days.

How Sounds Travel.

A prevalent impression has been that explosive sounds travel much farther than ordinary sounds, with a velocity of several times the normal. The experiments of Dr. D. C. Miller at Sandy Hook proving ground have shown that the velocity at 100 feet from a ten-inch gun is about 1,240 feet per second, or 22 per cent above normal; at 200 feet from the gun, only 5 per cent above normal; and at all distances greater than 500 feet the velocity of the explosive sound from the largest gun is practically normal. The tests were made by sensitive microphones at the muzzle, and at distances of 100, 200, 300, 400, 500, 600, 1,000, 2,000, 7,500 and 21,000 feet, the records of six of these stations being taken simultaneously by a special moving film camera and a string galvanometer.

How Women Took Seals.

Newfoundland women of the little fishing village of Tilt Cove are the pride of the bay. The wife of the lightkeeper on Gull island saw signs of a herd of seal floating on the ice, sent word ashore to the women of Tilt Cove and marshalled them into sealing crews. They went in boats, armed with clubs and gaffs, and climbing on the ice cakes, set out to round up a catch. They found the seals sprawled on all sides, and learned later that they had struck the main patch, the hope of all seal hunters. The women went about their work with vim and had captured or killed 100 seals when approaching nightfall compelled them to cease their labors and make their catch secure.

How to Waterproof Tents.

A solution of paraffin and gasoline is recommended as a simple and cheap process for waterproofing cloth for tents. Mix in the proportion of one pound of paraffin, melted, to one gallon of gasoline. Stir well and immerse the cloth. Allow to stand, away from buildings or danger of fire, until the gasoline has evaporated. The paraffin will permeate the cloth as the gasoline evaporates, rendering the cloth impermeable to moisture. Coarse unbleached muslin is recommended in preference to cloth of finer texture, as the former permits better absorption of the paraffin.

FARMERS URGED TO ACTIVITY

Co-Operative Policy In Marketing And Buying Of Vital Importance

Officials of the University of Maryland are convinced that if the farmers of Maryland hope to keep pace with other sections of the country where co-operative marketing and buying are making rapid strides, there must be an immediate improvement in the local, county and state organizations, particularly with reference to their numerical and co-operative strength. These needs will be among the important matters to be discussed at the annual meeting of the Maryland Agricultural Society, which will convene at Salisbury, Md., early in November.

Dr. Thomas B. Symons, director of the University of Maryland Extension Service, and one of the best known agricultural experts in this section of the country, last week made the following statement, which he backs with years of experience:

"During the past year a noticeable trend toward co-operation has been manifested in the state. Many communities formerly lacking organizations of any kind have been welded together in farmers' clubs or associations. County federations have been formed, uniting local bodies into stronger and more efficient units. It is safe to say that more farmers in Maryland are availing themselves of the advantage of co-operative buying and selling than ever before. Many local associations have their own sales managers intrusted with the work of disposing of members' crops and with the purchase of such materials as fertilizer, binder twine, lime and seed.

"Much yet remains to be accomplished," says Dr. Symons. "Many communities still are unorganized and in numerous cases county organizations would prove advantageous. The recent action of the Maryland Agricultural Society in throwing its doors open to county federations was designed to encourage the formation of county units. Formerly the membership of the society was confined to statewide organizations built up on the various lines of industry such as the Dairymen's Association, the Tobacco Growers' Association and the State Horticultural Society, but the membership is not confined to them alone. County federations are being admitted and as their number in the state increases are taking more important places in the deliberations of the society.

"One of the most important phases of farm organizations at the present time is the nation-wide scope of their influence through their national bodies. Stronger state organizations are necessary to insure adequate representation of the state in these national associations. The farmer is no longer an isolated citizen.

"If Maryland farmers want to exert their utmost influence in deciding such questions, they must have active organizations prepared to deal with local situations and properly linked up by adequate representation with national associations. It is expected that the number of vital topics which will be brought up for discussion at the meeting of the Agricultural Society at Salisbury in November will greatly stimulate the organization program in Maryland."

FOREIGN COMPETITION

The figures of importations into the United States for the first seven months of 1920 show the astonishing increase of 78 per cent. over the same months for 1919. This shows that the producing powers of the old world are steadily increasing. In spite of all troubles, Europe is on her feet again and preparing to do business again at the old stand, plus all kinds of efficiency lessons taught in the hard school of war.

The American producer has got to meet stiff competition. He must learn all that modern efficiency can teach him, and he must expect to sell on close margins. The days of fancy profits have gone by.

ENDORSED AT HOME

Such Proof As This Should Convince Any Princess Anne Citizen

The public endorsement of a local citizen is the best proof that can be produced. None better, none stronger can be had. When a man comes forward and testifies to his fellow-citizens, addresses his friends and neighbors, you may be sure he is thoroughly convinced or he would not do so. Telling one's experience when it is for the public good is an act of kindness that should be appreciated. The following statement given by a resident of Princess Anne adds one more to the many cases of Home Endorsement which are being published about Doan's Kidney Pills. Read it.

W. T. Gibbons, farmer, Route No. 4, Princess Anne, says: "I was troubled with backache and mornings I felt tired out on account of losing a lot of sleep. When I got up after sitting, pains shot through me like a knife-thrust. My kidneys were acting too frequently, making me get up at night. The kidney secretions were highly colored and I was in a bad way in general. I got Doan's Kidney Pills at O. A. Jones' drug store and, after taking two boxes, I was rid of kidney trouble."

We should have given a slight adherence to simplified spelling in 1818, when they used "f's" for "s's."

In urging dress economy, however, the school authorities mean fewer dresses and not less material.

In these days of scientific wonders it's a pity some of this political gas cannot be piped into the homes.

The traders may knock down the price some but none among them can hurt the security of Liberty bonds.

On the other hand, the candidates for president who do not get nominations will be saved a lot of worry.

NOTICE TO TAXPAYERS

Notice is hereby given that the levy of the year 1920 for State and County Taxes has been made in Somerset county.

Pursuant to said levy the taxes are now in my hands for collection. A discount of three per cent. will be allowed on all county taxes paid on or before October 31st, 1920, and a discount of two per cent. if paid during November, 1920. No discount will be allowed on county taxes paid after November, 30th, 1920.

The law allowing discounts on State taxes has been abolished, therefore no discount will be allowed on State taxes.

The law provides that both County and State taxes must be paid in order to obtain the discount.

State taxes bear interest from October 1st, 1920, at the rate of six per centum per annum. County taxes bear interest from January 1st, 1921, at the rate of six per centum per annum. and interest is charged for the full month from the first day of each month.

R. MARK WHITE,
Treasurer and Collector of State and County Taxes.

There's A Story About These Suits

A story for the young fellow, a story for the conservative, older man who wants style without the particular dash and vim of youth. Then there's a good material story; and the flannels, cassimeres, worsteds and fine tweeds are right here to add pith and ginger. They're grays, greens, browns and mixed patterns.

These suits are full or quarter lined—single and double breasted models with medium or high waist—style, barrels of it, all sizes, $37.50.

Alterations at Cost

At $37.50—it's hardly believable that such Suits could be so little—we must, therefore, make a slight charge for alterations.

See Our Show Windows
